FIBERGLASS MOLD was designed and built by Doug Dehnert of St. Hilaire for molding the parabolic reflector used in his television satellite receiving system. The fiberglass operation is being done in a leased building on a farm about a mile and one-half southwest of St. Hilaire. The reflector serves as part of the antenna to receive microwave signals in the system which permits home television sets to show 35 to 50 channels at any given time.

The satellite in question is SATCOM I, owned by Radio Corporation of America and capable of carrying 24 channels of broadcasting. It is the only satellite for which there is presently a scheduled programming.

SATCOM I is 21 feet high, cylindrical in shape with an eight-foot diameter, orbiting in a 70-mile "cube" 23,800 miles above the equator. It weighs eight tons and is held in stationary position in relation to the earth's orbit by earth-beamed control. It has a life expectancy of seven years, five of which have passed, and will soon be replaced by others with even greater capabilities.

The TVRO system receives the signal and tunes it ahead of the TV set. As a result, the set is left at a particular channel setting (Dehnert uses channel 13 on his set) and the channel tuning is controlled by a separate "black box" from the viewer's chair. The set may be tuned to other channels for normal viewing of area stations.

"Not everyone is going to want to spend nine grand to watch television," Doug admits. "But a lot of people put that amount and more into a boat or a motor home or other recreational type equipment that they can use only occasionally. This system can given them infinite variety of entertainment constantly."

Dehnert says that it has been within the past eight or nine months that he has learned the TVRO system, functioning on three to four hours of sleep a night and researching to find information he can't afford to buy or which is available from professionals in the field.

"There's lot of knowledge published," he said. "Really, it's all there. You just have to find it and understand how it's used, and sometimes you have to go ahead and do things that the experts say can't be done. It's funny how many things work because we're not smart enough to know that they can't work."

Want to keep up on the Democratic convention next week? Let's go over to Doug's place and watch it on a dozen channels.

City Tables Discussion On Housing Units

"It is also away from several topographical problems and is apart from an area containing an over-abundance of multiple housing units."

A discussion of site plans was brought before members by Steven Martens who supplied drawings of the structures.

"The units would be small family units with two and three bedrooms," Twichell added.

Management philosophy behind the project was described by Kent Haugen, with the statement," the only way to insure 100 per cent occupancy is to offer a well-maintained and desireable place to live."

Haugen also described the control over the prospective tenants which would require them to have references from their employer and bank, the security deposit required, and the specified income necessary for a person to qualify for a unit.

"Local property management of the unit would be performed by someone from Thief River Falls," Haugen said.

Various questions raised by city council members included one by alderman Ambrose Wysoski who questioned Twichell as to why the developer did not go to the planning commission before the Minnesota Housing Finance Agency with the site plan for the project.

"We are using highly valuable land for this project," Wysoski added.

Another question raised by alderman Bill Penning directed toward the developers was how the city could reach the management if problems arose. And, to Ken Froschheiser, Thief River Falls police chief, Penning added.

"Do you feel that there would be a problem created by the predominantly single parent families which are expected to reside in the units?"

"I do not believe the units would cause extra problems," Froschheiser stated. "I can foresee easier police service due to management which is responsible for the conduct within the units."

Several citizens within the audience also presented their views on the possible project — the majority of these opposed to it.

"We feel that the site selection was forced upon the city," was one comment from Jim Olson of the KTRF radio station. Olson also commented on other factors in opposition to the project including safety problems, the reduction of the property value of the area with the structure, and the fact that Mark Twain school (the school in the area) is presently at its capacity with students.

Following further comments from abutting property owners on the issue and replies from council members and the developers, alderman Clayton Restad introduced the resolution to accept the planning commission's recommendation to deny the rezoning of the property, which was followed with a second from alderman Wysoski. Following this, further discussion resulted between Twichell and council members.

"We would consider R-2 (without a special use) if necessary," Twichell stated. "But we would be building duplexes, and project woul cost more money, and the quality of the units would be cut by $2,000 to $3,000."

"At this time I would ask if Alderman Restad would withdraw his resolution to consider tabling the issue as a result of this evening's meeting," Mayor Carlson asked.

A roll call vote on alderman Restad's resolution resulted in a tie vote, with four aldermen, including Milan Borsheim, Wysoski, Restad and Dr. Don Goodrich voting in favor of accepting the planning commission's recommendation to deny the rezoning, and the other three alderman and Mayor Carlson voting in favor of the project.

The meeting concluded with alderman Goodrich's resolution to table the issue for further discussion, which was followed by a second from alderman Penning. A unanimous roll call vote finalized the decision.

A special Thief River Falls city council meeting was also conducted Friday at noon in the council chambers in the city auditorium with aldermen Bill Penning and Clayton Restad absent.

Major points of concern at this meeting included the two resolutions needed for bridge bond funds for the Oakland park bridge as a result of higher costs than those estimated for the project.

First resolution requested was the $70,000 of bridge bond funds for the bridge, while the special resolution called for an additional $28,000 of Minnesota state aid funds for the bridge. Both resolutions carried.

In other matters, Alderman J.J. Womack discussed briefly the special assessment district parking project which followed from a meeting July 21 with the hospital board, and alderman Womack, Jon Larson, chairman of the downtown parking assessment district committee, and Don Stewart of Stewart and Walker in attendance.

During the meeting with the hospital board, credit had been given the hospital for the 26,114 square feet of storage space requested. It was also indicated during Friday's meeting that no date has yet been set for the assessment district hearing.

Agencies Appeal Order Raising Telephone Rates

Kris Sanda, director of the office of consumer services, and Richard Auld, director of the department of public service announced a joint appeal of the Minnesota public utilities commission order of July 16 increasing Northwestern Bell Telephone company's rates by $19.9 million.

In the order, the commission affirmed its earlier refusal to make certain adjustments recommended by the office of consumer services (OCS) and the department of public service (DPS) including:

Commission's decision to require rate payers to provide a return on the company's investment in facilities which are currently under construction and are not yet benefiting the consumer. (Commonly called construction work in progress or CWIP.; commission's allowance of a 12.96 per cent return on common equity. (rate of return.) OCS and DPS recommended a 12.5 per cent rate of return; commission's refusal to reject as unreasonable the company's charges to Minnesota consumers for certain centralized computer software services, (Business Information Services, BIS); inclusion of expenses related to license contract, research and engineering activities; and excessiveness of prices charged to Northwestern Bell by ATT's manufacturing subsidiary, Western Electric.

During the course of the rate case proceedings before the public utilities commission, both agencies had requested that the commission reconsider its decisions on these issues. Although the commission did reconsider its original decision on short-term construction work in progress, its final order did not reflect any change in position.

The commission denied the agencies' requests to reconsider the other issues.

Director Auld said this action will not jeopardize the refund recently ordered by the commission, and that his appeal, if successful, could eventually lead to a further refund and rate reduction by Northwestern Bell Telephone.

Director Sanda noted, "This is the first time the two Minnesota agencies have ever appealed a commission decision jointly. We are joining efforts in order to more effectively utilize the limited resources that are available to us."

The case was filed with the Ramsey County district court.

Marx Presents Dairy Papers To Scientists

At the recent dairy science association meetings held at Virginia Polytechnic state university, Blacksburg, Dr. George D. Marx presented research conducted at the Northwest experiment station, Crookston. There were 1,500 dairy scientists in attendance from the USA, Canada and several foreign countries. A total of 247 research papers were presented along with current symposia topics.

The papers presented by Dr. Marx were entitled "Feeding nonprotein nitrogen treated corn silage stored in a polyethylene tube to steers and heifers" and "Variation in yields of quarter milk and complementary quarter milk". The latter research was conducted at both the Crookston and Morris university experiment stations and Dr. Marx was co-author with Dr. Dennis Johnson.

This research indicated that for every clinical mastitis infection the dairyman will lose an average of $149 worth of milk. The control of mastitis through post-milking teat dipping and dry cow therapy is of importance in decreasing new incidence of mastitis and of economic importance to the dairyman.

The earlier paper showed that both feed grade urea and liquid nonprotein nitrogen were useful in raising the protein content of corn silage by five percentage points for feeding dairy steers and replacement dairy heifers. The new concept of storing silage in a tube — using a German-made silo press — maintained a low level of spoilage but freezing during the cold months caused some handling problems with the silage for wintertime feeding. Performance of the cattle, growth rates of heifers and steer gains were satisfactory.

Animal Language Topic Of Research

by Madeleine Jacobs
Smithsonian News Service

An aggressive woodpecker and an angry African elephant might not appear to have much in common, but to Dr. Eugene S. Morton, a research zoologist at the Smithsonian's national zoological park, the two are literally "birds of a feather."

What the woodpecker, elephant and a whole menagerie of birds and mammals — including humans — share is a similar approach to communication, Morton says. After more than a decade studying sounds used by animals to "talk" to each other, Morton has developed a theory with enormous potential for understanding the evolution and meaning of all animal language.

Simply stated, the theory proposes that there are three major elements found in all animal language: a low harsh sound, or "growl," used in hostile or aggressive situations; a higher, tonelike sound, or "whine," used in appeasing or friendly situations; and a sound that falls somewhere in between, a so-called "bark," which is used to indicate indecision or to attract attention.

With these three elements and their variations, Morton says, animals can express a wide range of feelings or motivations. Most important, the actual physical or acoustical structure of the sounds directly reflects the animal's intention. Lastly, Morton's theory explaining why this system evolved is compatible with Darwin's theory of natural selection — that, because of more efficient reproduction, well-adapted or "fit" individuals thrive and poorly adapted individuals die out.

It may seem strange to think of birds barking and growling and elephants whining, Morton admits. But if you've ever stood in a corn field and listened to a common crow attacking a rival, you'd recognize the crow's sound as a definite growl.

"The Carolina wren barks, growls and whines," says Morton, an ornithologist by training who has studied the species in detail, "depending on whether it sees something alarming, is attacking a rival or is approaching its mate."

The African elephant makes a deep, roaring, rumbling sound when it's charging and a high frequency sound when it is being "friendly." The common household dog often growls at an intruding mutt, but may well whine or whimper if it's trying to make friends or back off from a fight. In short, from the rhinoceros to the chickadee, a wide variety of mammals and birds share these vocal elements.

Morton originally came to this conclusion after studying the sounds that birds use in a variety of situations. He expanded his studies to mammals and found the same patterns, which have been confirmed by analyzing animal sounds with a sonagraph.

A sonagraph is an instrument that converts sounds into a two dimensional picture — a sonagram — showing frequency or pitch changes with time. When sonagrams of growls, barks and whines are examined, certain common pictorial features are obvious. The growl, whether from a pelican or pig, shows up as a thick, black band at low frequency; the whine becomes a thin line at higher frequency, and the bark or grunt is chevron-shaped.

"The physical structure of sounds is not arbitrary," Morton says, "but has evolved in such a way as to signal motivation in circumstances that increase the reproductive success or fitness of the sender."

He explains how this theory works in practice. A person observing a male and female bird chattering away at each other might imagine that the male is telling the female about a glorious worm he's caught and where to find one like it or that the male is trying to court the female by telling her how pretty she is. Actually, the birds are doing neither of these things, Morton maintains, because animals don't "talk" to each other in the sense that people do.

Instead, one of several things may really be happening. If the female is making high pitched "cooing" sounds, for instance, she is probably signalling a friendly motivation and perhaps her willingness to mate. Mating is not only essential for survival of the female's genes through her offspring, but in some species it may be essential to survival of the individual bird itself. Female Carolina wrens, for example, are unable to hold a territory alone; they are rapidly driven away by adjacent pairs of wrens.

"The best words to describe what is happening when animals 'talk' to each other are 'vocal expression,' the same term used by Darwin more than 100 years ago," Morton says.

Darwin's theory provides a framework for explaining how vocal expression evolved. The earliest land animals probably had no means of vocal communication. In fact, the primitive amphibians such as salamanders still do not make sounds. Animals lacking a means of vocal expression must literally fight off every intruder since they don't have a voice to signal their intention.

Because larger animals will usually win in a fight with smaller animals, this system promotes survival of larger and larger animals. The dinosaurs may have evolved in part because of this selection factor. But then comes the Catch-22. Big animals also need a lot of food to survive; this means they have to spend more and more time fighting for food resources and, as Morton says, this makes the species prone to extinction.

Nature's way of balancing larger body size versus limited food resources was pragmatic — the evolution of vocal expression to signal intent. The frequency of a sound depends on the tension, length and thickness of the vibrating membrane in an animal's voice box. Larger animals, because they have larger membranes, are capable of making lower frequency sounds. Over the eons, the use of low frequency sounds came to signal the size and the aggressive intent of the sender to the recipient.

As voices evolved, animals no longer needed to grow to enormous size to indicate their strength and fitness; they could use their voice to send a message. Small animals, like the chickadee and the mouse, could make low harsh sounds that made them seem larger. The low frequency sound also signalled an aggressive motivation; perhaps the recipient, understanding the intent of the message, might back off from the fight.

On the other hand, high-pitched, tonelike sounds indicate a small size. Even if the animal isn't really small, that sound gives the right signal to the recipient. An animal making a high frequency "whine" indicates that it wants to appear "small" or meek.

In practice, the whine also helps increase fitness. It could prevent an animal from being attacked and possibly killed or injured in a situation where another animal is being aggressive. The whine helps baby birds in a nest competing for food with siblings by giving an appeasing and, therefore, attracting message to its parents. Human infants act much the same way.

People also share this evolutionary legacy of communication — it is found in the intonation of speech patterns. In virtually every human culture studied, Morton says, high, rising, tonelike sounds are used to indicate friendliness; rising and falling tones are used to ask a question or attract attention; and low frequency "growls" are common in aggressive or hostile encounters. Of course, in addition to this structure of sounds, humans also have words to help them define their motivation or feelings.

"It's a relatively simple system, it's universal and it seems to work," says Morton, who is continuing to gain evidence for his theory through detailed studies of Carolina wren sounds. And just to test it out, the next time your pet dog growls at you, try growling back.

Scientist Studies Flowering Plants

by Thomas Harney
Smithsonian News Service

The leaf fell from a shrub along the shoreline 110 to 120 million years ago, sank into the mud, slowly dried and with the passage of time left its imprint in the rock as a fossil. Deeply buried, it probably would never have come to light had it not been found at a construction site near Baltimore, Md., by the Smithsonian Institution's Dr. Leo Hickey.

The small leaf, oddly shaped with disorganized vein patterns, came from a new group of seed plants that appeared on land about 130 million years ago. In doing so, they profoundly altered the course of life on earth.

"The development of flowering plants created a revolution that opened up vast new resources of food and ways of life for animals," Hickey says. "The ascendancy of the flowering plants may have paved the way for the replacement of the dinosaurs by mammals 50 million years later."

Today, almost all the plants we see and eat are flowering plants. Yet their origins are still not clearly understood. Charles Darwin, the great evolutionist, called their emergence "an abominable mystery."

Hickey, a paleobiologist at the national museum of natural history, is probing this mystery. He does not have to go far to find the clues for his study. The Smithsonian museums on the national mall in Washington, D.C., are built virtually on top of the world's most accessible fossil deposit of these earliest flowering plants — the Ptomac formation.

One hundred and thirty million years ago, the earth's land masses were combined into two supercontinents separated by a seaway along the equator. The earliest known flowering plants grew on either side of this seaway, gradually spreading from there.

The Potomac formation was deposited on the coast of one of the northern continents as the Atlantic ocean opened up. It forms an outcrop — a rock formation exposed at the surface of the ground — in a 15-mile-wide belt from Wilmington, Del., to Richmond, Va.

So, while colleagues pack gear for fossil-hunting expeditions to remote and exotic areas of the world, Hickey throws his pick and shovel into his car and drives out into Maryland or Virginia to a fossil locale like Dutch Gap, Va.

"Dutch Gap is a marvelous place to collect," Hickey says. "The Union army cut a canal there during the Civil war to reach Richmond and exposed a rich bed of fossil plants. The heat and the Confederate snipers probably kept the Union soldiers from realizing they had stumbled on a treasure chest of fossil plants."

Fruits and flowers of the earliest flowering plants are seldom found, Hickey explains. "Most of what we know about them comes from their leaf imprints in the mud or sand in which they were buried and from their pollen." Only the soft tissue of the leaves left fossil records — an imprint of the complex carbon compounds.

When the mud or sand, under pressure, hardened into rock, the imprint of the leaf and dark film of carbon remained as a permanent fossil record. It is for these fossils that Hickey searches as he chops rock out of the Potomac formation outcrop.

Back at the museum, Hockey photographs the leaf imprint under a microscope. High-contrast photographs often show fine detail better than the fossil imprint itself. When Hickey began analyzing thousands of Potomac formation fossil leaves in the Smithsonian's collection, "there was no accurate system to tell one early leaf from another," he says. "People just made superficial comparisons of ancient leaves with modern ones and guessed about the identities of the leaves."

"Paleontologists in the 19th century tried to identify plants from their leaves, but they did a poor job, making wildly incorrect identifications," he says. "The resulting misidentifications retarded the study of flowering plant evolution for 80 years."

Despite these earlier failures, Hickey believed that a systematic approach to fossil leaves could succeed. One of the things that encouraged me," he says, "was that drug companies had developed methods to recognize certain species of contemporary plants from the vein patterns of small leaf fragments. It seemed to me that, if the drug companies could do it with modern leaves, I could do it with fossil leaves."

And succeed he did. Hockey has develped a classification system that, for the first time, makes it possible to decipher the history and development of the earliest flowering plants. The system is based on his discovery that each species has a slightly different vein pattern — a sort of fingerprint of the leaf's identity.

What his system reveals about the earliest history of flowering plants can be seen in a new exhibit hall in the museum of natural history, "The Conquest of Land," which traces the emergence and spread of land plants and animals.

Specimens of many of the earliest Potomac formation plants in the lineage developed by Hickey are on view. Also displayed are fossils from the Dakota formation, which extends from Montana and Colorado to Minnesota and Kansas and contains a rich assortment of plant remains. Some became extinct while others survived by evolving into new forms that were the forerunners of modern plants. All of the earliest plants had irregular vein patterns — a characteristic that Hickey believes reflects a less sophisticated growth mechanism.

By about 100 million years ago, the leaves found in the Potomac formation had developed more regular vein patterns, an advance that reinforced the leaf against the stresses of wind and rain and protected it from tearing.

Fossil leaves found from this period by Hickey are better preserved because they were stronger and better able to withstand the stresses of decay and transport before fossilization.

New and more complex leaf shapes were also evolving, including heart and umbrella-shaped leaves with the stem point of attachment located well within the leaf margin and compound leaves with leaflets on each side of a central axis. The latter gave rise to a very diverse group of modern flowering plants, including roses, peas, grapes and maples.

These stronger, larger and more complex leaves were among the advances which allowed flowering plants to grow to the size of larger trees and to displace the more primitive gymnosperm vegetation that had dominated the Earth for almost 200 million years. The flowering revolution had begun.

U.S. Senator

Rudy Boschwitz reports to Minnesota

Letters, We Get Lots Of Letters and We Love Them

It has been said and quite accurately so that Washington is an insulated community. Without constant communications with the people back home, Senators can easily end up talking to just one another.

We need to hear from the people in Minnesota and I am pleased to say we have heard from them quite often. Since coming to the Senate in January of 1979 I have received 140,000 letters from back home and in 1980 alone we have already received 59,000 letters. From my discussions with other Senators it's pretty clear that Minnesotans are more concerned and write more often than people from other states.

It's an unusual day when I don't receive 400-500 letters. It's not unusual to receive over a thousand on a given day. I can not emphasize enough how important your letters are to me. Your ideas, opinions and feelings help me in making decisions on the floor of the Senate and everything we do here affects Minnesota in one way or another. Knowing what you think is very important. I also admit I don't read every single letter, I wouldn't be able to do anything else! But I do read alot of them, and I am made aware of all of them.

I also know that for every person who writes there are 10 others who think their letter won't make any difference. Let me assure you that your letters do help and I encourage you to write on any issue you feel strongly about. We answer every letter we get because I feel it is important that you know where I stand on the issues that concern you. On some issues I haven't made up my mind, and when that's the case I say so. A lot of people write and ask me to support a specific bill or amendment introduced in the House or Senate. Since there are thousands and thousands of them introduced in this session — well over 10,000 — I am not familiar with every one of them.

In addition to letters we get many phone calls and have provided a toll free number in our St. Paul office. If you don't have time to write, just call St. Paul at 1-800-652-9771 and tell them what you think, what you want or how we can be of help to you.

In the coming weeks before we adjourn in the fall, we will be considering a number of important issues including the budget for 1981, appropriations for the many agencies and programs in existence and the Agriculture program for 1981. I hope you will let me know how you feel on these issues.

Yes, we get lots of cards and letters and we hope they will keep coming. Just write: Sen. Rudy Buschwitz, 2107 Dirksen Senate Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20510. Let's keep in touch.

Hints For Homeowners

HOME IMPROVEMENT, SAFETY AND ECONOMY

KEEPING TOOLS SHARP

Before you start on this season's fix-up projects, it's a sharp idea to consider this fact: sharp cutting tools are not only faster and easier to use, they are also safer. Because dull blades on cutting tools have to be pushed harder, they are more likely to slip.

These hints on sharpening are from Cooper the Toolmaker, the maker of such quality tools as Boker knives, Wiss snips and Nicholson saws and files.

To sharpen most hand tools you'll need only a ten-inch Home and Garden file. For heavy-duty work, a grinding wheel and an oilstone may be necessary.

The cutting edge on a wood chisel or plane blade has a bevel ground along one edge. When sharpening, the cutting edge is filed or ground to the original shape of that angle or bevel.

Mastering the knack of maintaining a uniform angle against the tool blade isn't difficult, though it may take some practice. Before starting to sharpen the tool, study its bevel. Then, apply the file, or place the tool at the proper angle against the grinding wheel and maintain this angle.

With a sharpening file, you're now done. If using a grinding wheel, next lubricate an oilstone with a liberal amount of oil and let it soak in. Place the beveled face of the blade flat against the stone, then lift the handle slightly until the edge is in full contact with the stone. Move the tool back and forth with even strokes without varying the angle of contact. Do this first on the coarser side of the stone, than on the fine side.

Once you master the knack of sharpening tools, it's a snap!

I and R Amendment Lets Public Rule

by Gov. Al Quie

Last week I reported that the kick-off campaign for the passage of a constitutional amendment providing initiative and referendum got off to a grand beginning.

If this amendment is approved by voters on November 4, Minnesotans will have the opportunity to write the laws they want through initiative and repeal the statutes they don't like through referendum.

The initial announcement that a bipartisan committee called Minnesota Citizens for Initiative and Referendum had been formed and registered with the state ethical practices board was made in St. Paul on July 22. Following that news conference, former Gov. Elmer L. Andersen, who serves as chair of the committee, and I toured the state, meeting with reporters from five regions of Minnesota. In each location we visited, we were received enthusiastically and asked many questions about how initiative and referendum would work in Minnesota. In all, it was a very rewarding experience to see so many people interested in giving Minnesotans a larger voice in state government through passage of initiative and referendum.

With such a positive response to initiative and referendum from people throughout the state, I was surprised to later learn that the Minnesota League of Women Voters had taken a position against initiative and referendum, and that the organization had registered with the ethical practices board to oppose initiative and referendum.

The news of the Minnesota league's position is surprising especially when a survey of the leagues in 20 states that have initiative showed that 19 of these leagues have been active in initiative and-or referendum campaigns. Sixteen leagues have positive feelings about "I and R," and four leagues have neutral positions. None have negative opinions. Further, in Illinois, where initiative was adopted in 1970, the Illinois league supported adoption of that constitutional amendment. In none of these states has a league tried to repeal "I and R."

I believe the reasons for the Minnesota league's position should be closely examined.

First, the league claims initiative and referendum would "undermine" the legislative process and result in laws made without the chance for discussion or thorough study.

The proposed initiative and referendum process would provide more than sufficient time — up to two years — for complete discussion of the issues. This extensive period of time would ensure that an initiative or referendum measure would be better known than other issues or proposed changes of law.

The first year, from January 1 to October 1 of an odd-numbered year, the sponsors would be explaining their proposal to obtain the required number of petition signatures. The second year, from October 1 in the non-election year to the following November general election, the issue will be debated in public forums and in the legislature.

Second, the league worries the rights of minorities will not be protected with initiative and referendum.

Initiatives, as any other laws, must stand the test of constitutionality in our courts. Both our Minnesota and U.S. constitutions protect the rights of minorities. I do not believe that Minnesota citizens will trample the rights of their neighbors.

Third, the league says initiative and referendum would place the control of lawmaking in the hands of well-financed special interest groups.

Special interest groups have publicly stated their opposition to initiative and referendum. These interest groups prefer the easier practice of lobbying state legislators.

Fourth, the league argues that "I and R" is too simplistic and that a "yes" or "no" answer is not a satisfactory way to deal with complicated issues.

By saying this, the league has ignored that the legislature currently gives just "yes" or "no" answers to many questions. In fact, at times, the legislature makes these major decisions without even publicly debating the issues or conducting legislative hearings.

And fifth, the league claims the legislature would "duck" difficult issues if initiative and referendum is adopted.

The legislature will continue to face controversial issues straight on. Only a handful of issues will be dealt with through initiative and referendum. Even those issues may be debated in the legislature. The bast majority of the issues will remain the responsibility of the legislature. In states with "I and R," there is an average of one ballot issue a year while the legislature passes hundreds of bills.

Minnesotans have repeatedly expressed their desire to have the right of initiative and referendum, so I join with Gov. Andersen in hoping that the Minnesota league will reconsider its position.

Claims Auto Emission Laws Too Stringent

The nation could have acceptable automotive pollution controls and still reduce its gasoline consumption by six to 10 per cent with some new, sensible auto-emissions standards, according to Kenneth Mills. He's a former engineering executive who quit the environmental protection agency because the standards set by that agency were made too stringent.

Mills was acting director of the EPA's motor vehicle control division and now is an independent consultant.

"If we could compare what we have right now with what I would consider to be an acceptable level of controls for most of the U.S., we're probably losing six to 10 per cent of our fuel," he said.

At the same time, federally mandated regulations, most of which are for emission controls, cost $700 per new car, and another $250 to $400 will be added for even stricter standards in 1981, says the Automotive Information council (AIC).

"Los Angeles does have an acute problem and no one will deny that," Mills said. "But the manufacturers, at least the domestic manufacturers, traditionally have been able to build special cars for California and some for the rest of the country without being terribly disruptive or terribly expensive.

"But the part of the thing that is so ridiculous to me, where California has a tremendous photochemical smog problem, they're not really concerned too much about carbon monoxide. But the government is quite upset about carbon monoxide, unjustifiably so."

Mills said a recent DuPont analysis concluded that a CO standard of 25 or 27 grams per mile would be quite suitable everywhere, except possibly in downtown Chicago for one hour each year.

Asked if the current standards caused other problems, he said: "It's brought a tremendous expense on the part of the car manufacturers to develop the best means of trying to comply with these standards."

Asian Wheat Trade Mission To Visit Here

A four-member wheat trade mission representing flour milling firms from two countries in South East Asia will be in Minnesota July 30 — August 3 to observe the states' wheat industry. The team is sponsored by the Minnesota wheat research and promotion council and U.S. Wheat associates.

The foreign visitors include Donald Lucy, general manager of the Sabah flour and feed mill in Malaysia; Kong Yeng Kin, purchasing manager for the Sabah mill; Teh Wee Khiang, purchasing manager for the Malayan flour mill in Malaysia; and Sujin Chunnon, general manager, plant operations, for the United flour mill in Bangkok, Thailand.

The team will be accompanied during their wheat orientation tour by Thomas Mick, regional director for U.S. Wheat Associates in Singapore, and Jerri Hall, program coordinator for U.S. Wheat associates, Portland, Ore.

According to Terry Fladeland, chairman of the Minnesota Wheat council, the U.S. wheat producer sponsored export market development program in the South East Asian area has been given additional attention in recent years with the opening of the U.S. wheat office in Singapore. The South East Asian wheat mission represents the second group that has been brought to the United States in an attempt to enhance their understanding of the U.S. wheat production and marketing system.

The first team from the area to visit the U.S. was from Indonesia, primarily a spring wheat market. "The team will find particular interest in their visit to Minnesota," Fladeland noted. "The two countries represent a five million bushel market for U.S. wheat exports, the bulk of which is U.S. dark northern spring wheat."

Fladeland reported that the South East Asian team will undertake a diversified program in the spring wheat area, including visiting the Minneapolis grain exchange, flour mills and barge loading facilities in Minneapolis, observing wheat quality work at the cereal technology department at North Dakota state university and visiting farms, country elevators and meeting farmers and agribusiness leaders in the Crookston, Thief River Falls and Red Lake Falls areas.

During the team's tour of Minnesota, they will be hosted by members and staff of the wheat council and the Minnesota Association of Wheat Growers.

Wheat Growers Ask For End To Embargo

National Association of Wheat Growers (NAWG) has called for the immediate removal of President Carter's grain sanctions against the Soviet Union.

According to Jorgen Knutson, president of the Minnesota Association of Wheat Growers, the NAWG's position is that farmers have made substantial economic sacrifices since the grain suspension, and now that the political response has been made to Soviet military action in Afghanistan, it is time to permit U.S. growers full access to world markets.

The National Association of Wheat Growers is a federation of wheat producers in 16 states, and includes the Minnesota Association of Wheat Growers.

Knutson reported that in calling for the withdrawal of the embargo, the NAWG stated that a policy of free and unrestricted trade best serves the economic interests of the United States, and that a continuation of the embargo will only further discriminate against grain producers who have shouldered an unfair share of the burden. Knutson added, that although prices have been increasing, due to weather related problems, the Administration's pledge to shield farmers from undue economic impact resulting from the embargo has not been carried out.

The policy agreed upon by the NAWG executive committee states that the selective use of U.S. grain to address world political tensions should be strictly avoided, and the NAWG urges the U.S. Congress to adopt a program to protect producers against unfair damage resulting from any future foreign policy embargo of U.S. grain. According to Knutson, the NAWG's withdrawal of support for the embargo follows similar action taken by the Minnesota Association of Wheat Growers in April.

"The loss of export trade means loss of balance of payment power", Knutson stated, "but the effect is more personal and immediate, as the embargo relates to the economy of the country." "USDA's own studies in 1977 indicate that each one billion dollars of agricultural exports added 21,000 jobs in farm employment and 30,200 jobs in non-farm employment. The effect of embargoes," Knutson concluded, "is clearly not limited to just farmers and agriculture."

Contemporary Art Seen Around U.S.

by Sidney Lawrence
Smithsonian News Service

Americans can view good examples of modern art these days without ever visiting a gallery or museum. They need only look around outdoors.

Monumental sculptures now grace waterfronts, parks and plazas in cities as diverse as Baltimore, Grand Rapids and Los Angeles. And a wealth of mural art — also located outside — is transforming once-blank exterior walls into vivid fantasy images, expressions of ethnic pride and fool-the-eye architecture.

But such streetside "canvases", open-air sculptures like Claes Oldenburg's baseball "Batcolumn" and the more well-known stabiles of Alexander Calder are only part of the picture.

New forms of public art are beginning to emerge. Earthworks, light sculpture and temporary art — a few of the developments that shook the art world not long ago — today are enlivening our everyday environment.

Last year in New York, for example, the facades of 12 lower-Manhattan skyscrapers were illuminated in geometric patterns for artist Jim Pelletier's work called "Night-Light," much to the delight of 5,000 spectators on the Brooklyn Palisades. Rockne Krebs has created laser-beam sculpture in the skies above Philadelphia and a neon-glass prism environment for a U.S. courthouse in Topeka, Kan. Christo, the artist responsible for the 1976 "running Fence" in northern California, later "wrapped" the footpaths of a Kansas City, Mo., park in nylon cloth. And in San Francisco, Peter d'Agostina recently showed his video art to commuters in the city's BART subway

Is contemporary art going public? Many observers think so.

"There's a strong public impulse among many artists working today," John Beardsley, a Washington, D.C., free-lance curator, says. Three years ago, when Beardsley's documentary exhibition of "land projects" began a nationwide tour at the Smithsonian's Hirshhorn museum and sculpture garden, such works were located mostly in remote areas of the American West. "There has been a shift of focus," Beardsley now observes. "More and more of these artists are seeking sites in populated areas or urban centers."

As an example of this, Beardsley cites "Earthworks: Land Reclamation as Sculpture," a new development in and around Seattle, Wash., where eight once-active open-pit mines, quarries and other sites needing redevelopment will receive large-scale earthworks. Artist Robert Morris has already completed one work, composed of a gentle sweep of terraces not unlike an earthen amphitheater; another, being constructed by Richard Fleishner, eventually will cover 400 acres.

The project was spearheaded by the King County arts commission with seed funds from the national endowment for the arts. There also have been contributions from the city and state governments, the Seattle port authority, various private foundations and many individual groups and citizens to cover the initial $350,000 cost of securing sites, commissioning artists and completing various feasibility studies. The federal bureau of mines contributed a tenth of this sum.

"Recycling depleted mines has always been a major concern of the bureau," Jerry Allen, visual arts coordinator of the commission, says. "But the idea of converting land into art and opening it up for public use is something new." Currently, Allen notes, the bureau is working with a mining company and with artist Fleishner on the long-term plans for his site, which won't be completely mined for eight to 10 years.

Cooperation like this is not uncommon in public art projects, according to Pat Fuller of the national endowment for the arts. Fuller, whose "Art-in-Public Places" program provides matching grants to about 30 such projects each year, says the base of initial support is widening, especially within the non-art community. "As progressive art reaches more people," she says, "more people want to participate in making it a reality."

Organizations as diverse as transit authorities, hospitals, and senior citizen housing centers, as well as numerous neighborhood arts groups, have sought works for public spaces, Fuller notes. Some projects are located in such unlikely spots as storefronts, converted factories, old schoolhouses and other "alternative spaces." By sponsoring street performances, studio openhouses, on-site painting and sculpture projects and numerous other events, the organizations have taken bold steps toward making art everyone's business.

Not long ago, for instance, pedestrians in the heart of the Washington, D.C., downtown shopping district were startled to see a pair of 40-foot-high cowboy boots on a once-vacant corner. The work of Texas artist Robert Wade, they were there because the Washington project for the arts, a local art group, had worked long and hard to arouse community support. Having secured extended use of the lot from the D.C. city government, the WPA then convinced local businesses to donate construction materials and equipment. A nearby hotel and parking lot each gave free lodgings and car space to the artist and his crew. With the award of a grant from the national endowment for the arts, the boot project, the first in a series called "Washington Art Site," became a reality.

"Because so many people had participated, there was a tremendous sense of pride and accomplishment when the boots finally went up," Al Nodel, director of the WPA, says. "And for pedestrians, the boots were a real challenge. People who never go to the galleries and museums were suddenly confronted with a self-proclaimed art work. For the first time, they were talking about issues of art."

After the boots were removed for permanent placement in a San Antonio, Texas, shopping center, WPA rounded up support for an architectural fantasy piece by New York artist Alice Aycock. Next to come is a 25-foot-high redwood sculpture by Washington, D.C., artist Nade Haley.

WPA also plans a "neon corridor." Artists will work with neighborhood store owners to transform an entire block into a monumental light sculpture.

Questions of form, media and content have always concerned artists. Now, it seems, public involvement and responsibility are becoming just as important. These topics were among those discussed by more than 4,000 art professionals when the 11th international sculpture conference recently met in Washington, D.C.

Examples of public art were erected throughout the city — not just the familiar monumental sculptures which many city inhabitants have come to expect in plazas and parks, but a "sound installation" covering several acres, an enormous reflective silver "sky sculpture" that wafted above the national mall and a sundial-like time-lapse piece, utilizing the shadow of the Washington monument.

A glimpse of things to come? Perhaps. Contemporary art may not be everyone's concern, but one thing is certain: Its potential audience is wider today than ever before. Experimental forms of art, once the province of only a few, are taking their place alongside large-scale outdoor paintings and sculptures as in experience to be shared by all.

Devine Defends Marathon Title

With entries from as far away as Pearl City, Hawaii, and Miccosukee, Florida, 64 runners entered the Jaycee Aquacade 10-kilometer marathon Sunday morning and all finished the 6.2-mile course, according to Mike Kruse and Larry Mike, project chairmen.

Fastest time was posted by defending champion Tom Devine of Grand Forks at 34 minutes and 18 seconds, competing in the men's age 30-39 division. Second fastest time was turned in by Mark Martin of Rochester in winning the men's 20-29 age group in 35:07. Eric Heath of Halma (20-29 age group) had the third fastest time at 36:24, followed by Jerid Monday of Prak Rapids (30-39 age group) at 36:34.

State Ranks High In Game, Fish Licenses

Minnesota had nearly 1½ million licensed fishermen last year and more than 600,000 licensed hunters, according to information released last week by the U.S. department of interior.

The figures do not reflect the actual number of hunters and fishermen however since in many states certain persons are exempt from purchasing such licenses because of age or other status.

Pennsylvania was the only state with more than one million licensed hunters last year. Minnesota ranked sixth behind Michigan, Texas, Wisconsin and New York.

California with 2,403,877 licensed anglers was the only state with two million or more paid fishing license holders. States with more than one million included Texas, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan and Pennsylvania.

The total number of hunting license holders in the U.S. increased approximately 275,000 from the previous year. The number of paid fishing license holders rose nearly 2,800,000.

Minnesota ranked third among all states in the number of paid fishing license holders and sixth in hunting licenses; however, Minnesota ranks first in both categories in the number of license holders per capita.

Twins Sponsor Running Race For Dystrophy

Second annual Minnesota Twins run for muscular dystrophy will be held on Labor day, Monday, September 1, beginning at 5:30 p.m. Then at 7:35, the Twins will open a three-day stay at the Met by hosting the Cleveland Indians.

Joe Charboneau, Mike Hargrove, Jorge Orta and Toby Harrah lead the Indian's attack, which will also provide the Twins' opposition on Tuesday and Wednesday, September 2 and 3, both games starting at 7:35 p.m.

The ten-kilometer run, open to all comers, will begin at the Met, wind thru a course in Bloomington, and finish back at the stadium on the field.

A major purpose of the event is to raise funds for the muscular dystrophy association, which will be concurrently holding its annual Jerry Lewis telethon. Participants will be asked to obtain pledges for running the race, securing a specified amount for each kilometer run. The Twins will then add to the total, again having agreed to donate 50 cents for each ticket sold to the Labor day game, thus encouraging individuals to support the M.D.A. by participating in the run and or attending the Twins-Indians contest.

A host of attractive awards are set for the run. The overall first place finisher will receive a traveling engraved silver champagne cup. In addition, the top male and female runners, along with two other age classification winners, will receive transportation, lodging and paid entry fees to the Springbank International 10K run in London, Ontario.

For men and women age group place-winners, 30 specially engraved decorative bats from Louisville Slugger will be given out. And for the three individuals collecting the most pledges, special bronze, silver and gold medallions will be awarded. An awards ceremony will be held between the race and the game.

To enter, send $4 to the Twins Run for M.D., in care of M.D.A., 2021 East Hennepin Avenue, Suite LL59, Minneapolis, MN 55413. The entry should include address, age, sex and t-shirt size. Entries must be received by August 20. Late entries of $6 will be accepted in person at the MDA office, and a limited number of late entries will be accepted the day of the race at the stadium. The fee includes a t-shirt, race administration, refreshments after the race, parking and a general admission ticket to the Twins-Indians game.

Deer Hunting Different On Parks, Refuges

Special deer hunting regulations will be in effect this fall on certain parks, refuges and wildlife areas, according to the department of natural resources.

Among the areas covered under the special regulations for the regular firearms season are the Rice Lake and Sherburne national wildlife refuge, Nerstrand Woods, St. Croix, and Glacial Lakes state parks and the Elm Creek reserves in Hennepin county. The Crow-Hassan park reserve in Hennepin county will have a permit bow and arrow hunt.

Muzzleloader hunters should note that hunting at the Lacqui Parle and Talcot Lake wildlife management areas will be by permit only. A muzzleloader hunt by permit will also be held in Glacial Lake state park.

Regulations for Camp Ripley will be announced later.

Printed copies of the big game hunting regulations, which will be available this week, list the areas and explain the regulations which apply in each one.

Wildlife officials said hunters should read these regulations carefully if they intend to hunt in one of the special areas. They noted that the deadline for applying for permit to hunt in several of these special areas is September 15.

U.S. and Canada Seek Boost In Wheat Prices

"An excellent beginning," is the way Congressman Arlan Stangeland termed the first meeting between Canadian and U.S. legislators in Ottawa designed to increase export wheat prices and expand wheat markets for Canadian and U.S. farmers.

"I am extremely pleased with the results of this meeting, and as the vice chairman of the delegation from the House of Representatives, I feel honored to have been one of 13 members of Congress representing the American farmer in these international wheat talks."

"The problem of inadequate wheat prices is one that affects both countries tremendously and, by working together, we hope that we can adopt programs and policies that will enable our farmers to receive equitable prices for their product, a price which will allow them to stay in business," Stangeland said.

"We also agreed to work for the approval of a resolution in our respective Houses calling for a Joint U.S.-Canadian wheat export coordinating commission. Australia and Argentina, the other major wheat exporters in the world, will be asked to join the commission."

Stangeland stated that the group of legislators pledged to begin working to achieve at least the cost of production plus a reasonable profit for wheat farmers while further agreeing to work for bilateral cooperation in market development.

"American farmers and the U.S. government have supported a market development program for the last 20 years, and our northern neighbor has benefited from our efforts in this important area. Now it is time to share that cost," Stangeland said.

It was further agreed that U.S. and Canada convince importing countries to establish their own reserves. Those consuming countries have for too long depended on the American farmer, taxpayer and Canadian farmer to bear the cost and responsibility of assuring their people of adequate supplies of wheat.

"However, both the Canadian and American delegations recognized that expanded markets are meaningless to the farmer when he is forced to sell his wheat at less than the cost of production."

The Seventh district congressman concluded by saying that finding methods for improving prices for farmers and ultimately, the status of the entire agriculture industry are of the utmost importance. This meeting, a special session of the Canadian-U.S. Interparliamentary group, began a positive, productive dialogue which will continue in the future. Stangeland suggested this special session over a year ago at a meeting of the interparliamentary group, and his efforts culminated in the Ottawa meeting attended by five U.S. senators, eight congressmen, and 11 members of the Canadian parliament.

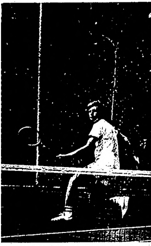
Duane is from Wisconsin and Bryce from Minneapolis. Duane also won the men's 30-44 singles over Cleon Melsa of Crookston.



BACKHAND RETURN is hit by Mitch Rustad in the championship match of the Jaycee Aquacade tennis tournament Sunday. Rustad defeated Bill Jury 6-2, 6-2 to win the title in the men's 17-20 singles and teamed with Paul Koppang to defeat Jury and Andy Odegaard of Roseau in men's 17-20 doubles.

Tennis Elbow Hits Third Of Players

At least one-third of the estimated 40 million American tennis players have experienced an annoying, often debilitating, condition known as tennis elbow: Results from the most comprehensive study ever conducted on tennis elbow shed light on what may cause tennis elbow and what methods may help treat and prevent it.

The study found that players with tennis elbow were older and heavier, had played longer and more frequently and were at higher skill levels than those players who did not experience elbow pain. Players experiencing elbow pain also reported a higher incidence of other tennis-related injuries.

The study also found that age and frequency of play were the most significant factors associated with tennis elbow. The incidence of elbow pain was five times greater for individuals who played daily than it was for those who played only once a month. The incidence of tennis elbow increases almost in a straight-line fashion from ages 21 through 25 to ages 51 through 55.

"One of our major conclusions," says Dr. James Priest, co-author of the study, "is that tennis elbow appears to be a cumulative process associated with age, frequency of play and level of ability. This contradicts the theories that it's an ailment of beginners and weekend players."

The research was conducted by Priest, associate director of the institute for athletic medicine at Fairview hospital in Minneapolis; research consultant Susan Goodwin Gerberich, also of the institute; and Vic Braden, internationally known tennis professional and founder and president of the national foundation for tennis research. The results were released to the medical community this spring in "The Physician and Sportsmedicine."

More than 2,600 students at Braden's tennis college in California completed questionnaires in 1976 and 1977 which became the data base for the study. Thirty-one per cent of the men and women reported they had experienced or were currently experiencing elbow pain. When examined, the most common site of pain among the respondents was the outer bony prominence of the elbow, the classic location of tennis elbow syndrome.

According to Priest, himself a tournament tennis player, there has been surprisingly little medical research conducted on tennis elbow and its treatment. With the recent surge in the popularity of tennis, the medical community, he says, has become more interested in tennis-related injuries.

Of particular interest to players, pros and physicians is the study's finding that alteration of strokes was the most successful treatment for tennis elbow symptoms. This provided relief for 100 per cent of those players who tried it.

"Based on this finding," says Priest, "persons experiencing tennis elbow might benefit by consulting a tennis instructor to learn how to alter the painful stroke."

Exercise was the second most successful treatment, helping 89 per cent of those who tried it, closely followed in effectiveness by supports or braces, aspirin and rest. Cortisone or steroid injections, heat and phenylbutazone were successful for about three-quarters of the players who tried those methods.

Of the 10 most common methods named, the use of cold applications or ultrasound appeared to be least effective. In all, the players identified 37 different treatments they had tried, ranging from the mundane (rest, aspirin) to the more exotic (acupuncture, alfalfa tablets).

The study also found that 70 per cent of the players with tennis elbow had changed racquets since experiencing tennis elbow, with 69 per cent of that group reporting an improvement in their condition. Priest and his colleagues are currently analyzing data on different types of racquets and their potential effects on elbow pain. That information will probably be available next year.

"There is a real need for a study like this," says Priest, "so many people are involved in tennis today and tennis elbow can have such an adverse effect on their daily lives — not simply as tennis players, but as dentists, carpenters or homemakers. This study gives us statistically meaningful answers about many factors involved with tennis elbow."

The tennis elbow study was sponsored by the institute for athletic medicine; Orthopaedic Consultants, P.A.; Coordinated Management systems, Inc., and the University of Minnesota computer center, all of Minneapolis; and by the national foundation for tennis research in California.

Melvie's, Action Realty Win Playoff Openers

Melvie's nipped Northland Pro 3-2 and Action Realty popped Schmidt's 9-1 to win opening rounds of the Thief River Falls fast pitch softball league play-offs Tuesday evening.

Melvie's scored all of their runs in the bottom of the fifth inning when Keith Charbonneau led off with a single to left. Jay Kverno drilled a double to center field to score the first run of the game. Joe Kraska was safe on an error with Kverno scoring the second run when Dan Peterson hit into a fielder's choice to produce the run batted in. Kraska scored the final and winning run on a passed ball.

Northland Pro left two runners on base in each of the first four innings as Irv Melvie pitched out of trouble in all four frames. Held to four hits throughout the contest, Northland scored its two runs in the top of the seventh inning on a bases loaded walk to Rocky Ammerman and a wild pitch. For the game Northland left a total of 13 runners stranded while Melvie's with only three hits, plated half of their total base runners.

In the third frame, Mark Thorstad's bases loaded triple to right field provided three insurance runs in the five-run uprising. Action Realty collected its final two runs in the seventh off relief pitcher Dean Lawrenz.

Schmidt's picked up their only run in the bottom of the fourth inning when Don Foss beat out an infield hit, advanced to second on Jim Sethre's ground out and scored on Mark Schmitke's single.

Al Erickson spun a four-hitter and didn't walk a batter to pick up the victory while his teammates collected 10 safeties from the combined offerings of Howard Dalager and Lawrenz.

Tonight at 7:30 p.m. Northland Pro will meet Schmidt's in the double-elimination tourney with the loser to be eliminated. League champion Coca-Cola will play Melvies at 9 p.m. with the winner to play Action Realty Tuesday, August 12. Minnesotans Worried About Loss Of Jobs

Nearly a fourth of all Minnesota households are concerned that the developing recession will put someone in those households out of work within the next year, according to interviews with 1,000 adults taken in May by PROBE, a quarterly sampling of opinion conducted by a Minneapolis research firm.

By far, the bulk of the Minnesota workers who are worried about the economic downturn are employed in the construction industry or closely related fields. Along with contractors, electricians and masons who are anxious about their jobs, the "ripple effect" also has those who work in supplier industries — such as forest products — wary of the immediate future, the survey indicated.

The auto industry is second among those job areas anticipated to bring unemployment to Minnesotans in the upcoming months. Other specific industries causing concerns are mining, snowmobile manufacturing, farming, trucking and tourism. About 10 per cent of Minnesota households are concerned for jobs that are dependent upon particular depressed industries, while another 15 per cent worry about jobs that might be lost due to the recessionary effect in general, the study indicated.

About 800 of the 1,000 households interviewed contained one or more working persons. The lower the survey respondent's age, education and household income, the more likely he or she was to express unemployment concerns.

The research firm conducts its quarterly survey in face-to-face interviews with a cross-section of Minnesota's adults, chosen at random. With a sample of 1,000, answers given by all Minnesotans to the same questions would have been within three percentage points either way of the survey percentages, the survey firm said.

D. L. Wins Legion Baseball Tourney

Detroit Lakes rebounded from an opening round shut-out loss to Frazee in the opening round of the Ninth District American Legion baseball tournament last Thursday to battle back for a district championship last night in the tournament played at Red Lake Falls.

It was Detroit Lakes' second Ninth District championship in the 53-year history of the tournament, the other coming 32 years ago in 1948.

Breckenridge, which had fought its way through the tournament to the championship bracket without a loss was the victim of the Detroit Lakes resurgence. Detroit Lakes edged Breckenridge 3-2 to stay in contention for the title Sunday, then won a 5-3 contest last night. Breckenridge last won a Ninth District title in 1973. Since then it had been owned by Moorhead for the last six years.

After its tourney-opening loss to Frazee, Detroit Lakes blanked Fertile 9-0 and eliminated Frazee and Thief River Falls by identical 4-3 scores. Breckenridge had defeated Moorhead Gold 4-1, Fertile 12-4 and Thief River Falls 3-2 to reach the championship round.

Thief River Falls opened its tournament competition with a 9-1 win over Gonvick last Thursday, then followed with an 11-3 win over Frazee Friday. Wayne Huseth pitched a five-hitter in that game, striking out four and walking eight.

Thief River Falls used timely hitting and capitalized on six walks and a hit batsman to score 11 runs on only seven singles. Scott McKeever was the only Thief River Falls player to collect more than one hit, singling in the first and fifth innings, while Huseth helped his own cause with a two-run single in the fifth inning.

Breckenridge handed Thief River Falls its first loss of the tournament, winning 3-2 Saturday. Jeff Ulrich went the distance for Thief River Falls, giving up only three hits by walking seven while striking out five.

Thief River Falls scored in the first inning on a lead-off single by Scott McKeever, stolen base and an error. Breckenridge came back with a run in the second on a walk to Kappes, sacrifice by Reiff, walk to Meyer, strike-out of Egge and consecutive walks to Barth and Hagstrom.

Breckenridge took the lead in the fifth when Schiable walked with one out and, after Buechler had flied to center for the second out, Ellingson singled and Kappes drilled a single to center. An error on the center fielder allowed Ellingson to score all the way from first base, chasing Schiable home with the second and third runs.

Thief River Falls scored one run in the sixth when Dave Odegaard, Mark Schmitke and Mark Harder walked to open the inning. Kevin Sanders struck out and Jim Nyland hit back to the pitcher who forced Odegaard at the plate. A two-out single by Tom Drury scored Schmitke from third base but center fielder Ellingson of Breckenridge cut down Mark Harder trying to score from second.

Thief River Falls lost another potential run in the second inning when Sanders doubled with one out and advanced to third on an infield error but was caught attempting to score after the catch of Drury's fly ball to left field. The locals managed only four hits off Hagstrom of Breckenridge, a single and double by McKeever, a double by Sanders and single by Drury.

Against Detroit Lakes Sunday in a battle of once-beaten teams, Wayne Huseth and Kelly Gutterud of Thief River Falls combined to pitch a no-nitter but lost the game 4-3. The local hurlers gave up 10 walks and hit one batsman.

Detroit Lakes scored twice in the first inning of starter Huseth on walks to Jeff Nelson, Melbye and Kerschner and two passed balls. Thief River Falls tied the score in the fourth on walks to Mark Harder and Jeff Ulrich, stolen base, wild pitch and infield out. In the fifth the locals took the lead on McKeever's opening single, stolen base, Tom Drury's sacrifice bunt and Dave Odegaard's sacrifice fly to center.

Gutterud relieved Huseth in the sixth and retired the side in order. Then in the seventh he walked Kerschner, Hutchingson and Norby with Kerschner scoring on an infield out to tie the game. Thief River Falls managed one base runner in the top of the eighth on a two-out walk to Jeff Ulrich but he was left stranded.

In the bottom of the eighth, Melbye was hit by a pitch leading off the home half. Hedstrom grounded to third and was thrown out but Shasky was safe on a fielder's choice as Thief River Falls elected to go for the out on the lead runner. Kerschner walked to load the bases. Gutterud struck out Gaffaney but walked Hutchinson on a 3-1 count to force in the winning run.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our son and brother Orrin Christenson who passed away Aug. 10, 1963.

After each storm comes sunshine.
After darkness light.
After the winters dreary cold
Comes blossoms fair and white.
Surely it's God wisdom
That after an aching heart
There shall be life eternal
Where loved ones never part.

Sadly missed,

County Board Proceedings

August 6, 1980
Official Proceedings
Board of County Commissioners
Pennington County, Minnesota
July 29, 1980

Pursuant to adjournment the County Board met in the Commissioners' Room in the Courthouse in Thief River Falls at 1:00 P.M., July 29, 1980.

Members present: Hoffman, Grabanski, Koop, Stenberg and Tasa. All present.

Arnold Higdem, County Director of Vikingland, representing Clearwater County appeared and spoke on behalf of the County participation in the Vikingland promotion effort in the Region. Mr. Higdem indicated that Vikingland was beneficial to the area as it promoted tourism and was worth the 5 cents per capita that was the accepted cost of the annual membership. It was noted that the County had not participated for some time and the value of the membership was questioned. The real value of the publicity made available by Vikingland is something that cannot be seen in black and white. The Board tabled the matter indefinitely.

Residents from the area adjacent to the road being rebuilt known as the Erie road appeared with questions about the construction of the road as it progresses past the Hagen residence. The County Engineer indicated that the drainage which seemed to be the prime concern, would divide at that point and would cause no problem.

George Singer, Airport Manager, appeared with a request that the Board consider a contribution toward the Veterans Memorial at the Airport. Various organizations and individuals have contributed to the approximate $16,000 cost of the installation and about $2,000.00 was still to be pledged. Moved by Stenberg seconded by Grabanski that the sum of $1,000.00 be appropriated and paid to the Veterans Memorial Fund to assist in the project. Motion unanimously carried.

Mrs. Luis Carpenter and R. Clark Carpenter appeared and indicated that they had agreed to accept the proposed settlement that the appraisers had placed on the land needed for right-of-way in connection with construction of CSAH 7, 12 and 13. Commissioner Koop introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

BE IT RESOLVED, that the report of the the Commissioners appointed as appraisers for the condemnation of lands in connection with the improvement of CSAH 7, 12 and 13 be accepted as presented and the Auditor be instructed to issue Warrants in payment of easements on 4 tracts of land to Louis and Gertrude Carpenter and R. Clark Carpenter, in the amount of $4,040.00 and for one tract on CSAH 7 to Harry A. and Ruth E. Oen and Donald Barth in the amount of $1,072.00, in exchange for right of way easements.

The foregoing was duly seconded by Commissioner Stenberg and upon call for a vote on approval the resolution was declared approved with Commissioner Grabanski voting against the resolution.

Commissioner Stenberg introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

RESOLVED: that the County of Pennington elects to have the 1980-1981 Low Income Energy Assistance Program administered by: Inter-County Community Council, Oklee, MN 56742.

This agency can fulfill all of the specifications for local program delivery required by Federal and State regulations. The foregoing resolution was duly seconded by Commissioner Hoffman and upon vote declared unanimously carried.

Moved by Stenberg seconded by Hoffman that Pennington County enter into an agreement to implement an RSVP program in Pennington County and hereby appropriates the sum of $573.00 to cover an anticipated insurance coverage for volunteers for a 1 year trial period. Motion declared unanimously carried.

Moved by Grabanski seconded by Stenberg that Pennington County will not approve payment of new culverts at the intersection of County Road 61 and Township roads between Section 6 & 7 on the Polk and Pennington County lines but will allow the Township to reuse the old culverts. Upon call for vote on the motion the Chairman declared it approved with Commissioner Koop voting against the motion. Motion carried.

Commissioners Grabanski and Koop indicated that they had been contacted about the condition of the natural drain that runs from Merle Degen's property at the North edge of the City of Thief River Falls and Southeasterly along a designated reserve behind several Commercial establishments and eventually draining into the river. After the Commissioners inspected the ditch it was reported it was apparent that certain business along the route were obstructing the flow of water and thereby blocking drainage as well as causing a health hazard. The Auditor was instructed to write a letter to the Red Lake Watershed with copies to the City Council of Thief River Falls and to the City Health Officer. It is inconceivable that someone along the route of the drain hasn't called the problem to the attention of responsible officials, but because the problem is there it was thought that somehow the problem may have gone unnoticed.

TO THE HONORABLE COUNTY BOARD:

I herewith present you with a full and accurate statement of the receipts and expenditures for the past year 1979 together with a full statement of the finances of the County for the calendar year 1979, including all debts and liabilities, and assets to discharge same.

C.W. Rodekuhr,
County Auditor

Ken Wiebolt, Merle Carlson and Ken Murphy spoke in behalf of the School Board and indicated that the planning process had progressed to the point where the School Board would like to have the various Public bodies in the area to search their plans to see if they could use any part of the Lincoln High School Building complex in the event the School was replaced by building at the approved site on property owned by the School District East of the A.V.T.I. Building. Basically the area that could be occupied is the Gym, Auditorium, Cafeteria area and the newer section that was occupied by the A.V.T.I. It was stated that plans advanced include a new Gym for the High School but if the present Auditorium could be maintained in some manner there would be no object in duplicating the facility at the new School. The Board agreed to discuss the matter.

Moved by Grabanski seconded by Stenberg that the meeting adjourn to convene at 10:00 A.M., August 5, 1980.

ATTEST: C.W. RODEKUHR, COUNTY AUDITOR & EX. OFFICIO, CLERK OF THE BOARD.

DOT To Place Resort Signs On Request

Applications for signs which provide travelers with information about accommodations are available to interested resort or camping area owners, the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) announced.

Signing applications will be accepted on a "first come first served" basis and must be renewed every three years. Applications are available from Mn-DOT offices located in Duluth, Bemidji, Brainerd, Detroit Lakes, Golden Valley, Rochester, Mankato, Willmar and Oakdale.

The 1980 Minnesota legislature authorized such signs on the right of way along non-freeway trunk highways in rural areas to provide travelers with information about accommodations.

The signs cost the applicant $225 each and will be fabricated, installed, maintained, replaced and removed by Mn-DOT maintenance personnel. Resorts and campgrounds will be limited to two signs per intersection, one sign visible from each direction of travel.

The resort or campground must be located within 10 miles of the intersection where the sign will be located. The business name, direction and distance to the resort or recreation camping area will be placed on the sign, which measures 18 inches by six feet.

The signs will be made of reflective sheeting on aluminum and will have a blue background with white letters, arrows and borders.

Resorts and campgrounds that are readily visible from the road, that have normal advertising visible to travelers or that can have advertising legally located near the intersection are not eligible for the signs.

Air Force Base At Grand Forks To Host Public

A solo flight demonstration of the F-15 "Eagle", the most advanced fighter-interceptor in the U.S. air force, will highlight the annual "Friends and Neighbors Day" open house at Grand Forks air force base on August 23.

A Canadian forces helicopter demonstration team, "The Dragon Flies," and the army parachute demonstration team, "The Golden Knights", are also scheduled to perform at the event. Many other activities are planned.

There will be music by "The Queen's Own Cammeron", a Canadian Forces pipe band, and "Flair", a Strategic Air Command band. Food and refreshments will be available.

An annual program, friends and neighbors day is held to give the public an opportunity to visit the base and get acquainted with some of the people who work there. There is no admission charge for the event.

Friends and neighbors day, with this year's theme, "The 80's, a New Decade" will begin at 10 a.m. on August 23. Security police will be available to direct visitors to the display area.

AAA Provides Tour Book For Handicapped

Handicapped travelers face special problems, and the American automobile association is working to help overcome some of these difficulties, according to Tom Goulette, director of public relations for the Minnesota state automobile association (AAA).

"It isn't easy to find a motel room with doors that are at least 32 inches wide, appropriate bathing facilities, a ramp from the parking lot and no curbs to cross," Goulette said.

To aid handicapped travelers, AAA tour books (annual catalogs of selected travel information) now display the international handicapped symbol for those approved accommodations accessible to the handicapped. Essentially, they must qualify under specifications adopted from those outlined by the American national standards institute.

According to Goulette, when AAA began research in 1969 on the possibility of including this information in its publications there was a lack of uniform standards for judging what is accessible to handicapped people. Now there has been enough progress in agreeing on some basic requirements that AAA feels it can offer its handicapped members this added service.

As another aid to the handicapped traveler, Boulette pointed out, AAA publishes a booklet, "The Handicapped Driver's Mobility Guide." The booklet focuses on selecting special equipment for cars and vans and recommends driving and traveling aids.

AAA national headquarters in falls Church, VA, maintains close contact with the Veterans administration to monitor recent developments, sends representatives to special meetings for the handicapped, and provides staff to work as consultants and resources for handicapped organizations and individuals seeking advice on specific problems.

For a copy of the AAA publication, "The Handicapped Driver's Mobility Guide," write: Traffic Safety Dept., Minnesota AAA, 7 Travelers Trail, Burnsville, MN 55337 or call: 612-890-2500.

PROBING THE POCKETS

Stephen K. a 46-year-old accountant, noticed that his gums bled when he brushed his teeth or bit into an apple. He visited his dentist who commenced examining him by inserting a little "perio" probe between his teeth and gums to find the extent of the "pockets". After an X-ray examination showing the amount of teeth-supporting bone loss, he was given the bad news. He had advanced periodontal disease and would lose at least three teeth which were beyond help and have to undergo extensive care to hopefully save the other 29.

Of the 125 million adults who still have their teeth (20 million have already lost theirs), about 100 million have periodontal disease. And in 32 million, it is in an advanced stage, meaning that they too will become toothless unless they undergo extensive treatment.

There is no need for periodontal teeth loss. Learn to clean your teeth properly and they should last a lifetime like they are supposed to.

Peace can be a moment of stillness, steeped in the beauty of God's world, shared with those you care about.

Yet there is no definition that can fit every human experience of peace. That's probably why the Bible speaks of the peace of God which passeth all understanding.

And the way to find peace — the best way — has always been to seek God. As we turn to Him in prayer and fix our thoughts upon his truth we know a calmness and confidence that neither nature nor companionship alone can provide.

If you haven't already begun the quest for peace — start this week in your place of worship.

Golden Opportunity Tarnished

Opportunity for network television to provide a worthwhile service in broadcasts from the national political conventions is being subverted by the networks themselves which place personalities ahead of the political process. That view is shared by the editor of the Plainview News who wrote the following after the Independent-Republican convention:

If you were seriously interested in hearing what former secretary of state Henry Kissinger, or vice presidential hopeful Jack Kemp, or former presidential candidate Barry Goldwater had to say Tuesday night at the National Republican Convention you were just out of luck.

Just about the time that one of those gentlemen came to an important point in their speech television cameras would switch to commentators John Chancellor of David Brinkley so that they could make some stupid comment about the problems of the Republican Party and Ronald Reagan or just how great it was to have prime time television doing all these wonderful things for the country.

After Brinkley and Chancellor had salved their egos and told us just how intelligent they and their compatriots are the camera would switch back to the speaker for a few more words. Just about the time you were able to again pick up the trend of the speech good old John would order the camera switched to some commentator on the floor who would collar a delegate and attempt to create controversy with some leading question like "will you leave the party because you didn't get your program through the platform committee?"

That's the way it went all evening and I for one got pretty well fed up with the whole affair.

Television had the golden opportinity to really present to the American viewing public a good look and listen to the people that are leading our country. But they couldn't be satisfied with doing just that. They had to give what should be a serious subject the Madison Avenue advertising gloss — they had to ham it up — and as a result everyone got cheated.

The Democrats will be doing the same thing in August in New York and I suppose it would be fair play for the TV networks to make a farce out of serious coverage of that event. I hope, however, that come August, if TV is going to cover convention speakers it displays the common courtesy of letting the public hear the entire speech without the interruption of the Chancellor and Brinkley comedy act.

We Can't Go Back, But . . . .

Following editorial is from the Milbank (S.D.) Herald Advance:

The worry-warts among us find little in today's news to dispel the sense of impending disaster current U.S. policies seem to be promoting.

Take for instance the food stamp program, a sacred cow if we ever saw one.

When the program began in 1965, the cost to the federal pocketbook was a mere $35.6 million. Now it is more like $8 BILLION!

In 1965 there were 442,359 households participating. This year 19 million people, nearly one in every ten qualify. So in Milbank, to even discuss the subject in the local weekly newspaper is at the risk of offending 400 people who are using food stamps.

Still, we must point out to the other 3,600 that there is a danger in programs such as the ones that make food stamps, low-rent housing, low-interest loans and emergency financial aid for fuel users available.

To even mention that programs such as these might have some drawbacks is to be branded as a real Scrooge, hard-hearted as they come, compassionless at best, unthinkably miserly at worst.

To ask the simple question, "Can we afford these programs?" never fails to elicit the pat and politically adroit.

"But can we afford not to?"

Nevertheless, someone someday is going to be faced with the problem of admitting that "No, I guess we just couldn't afford all those things we tried to do." That admission will be a long time a'coming, we predict. We also predict that the state of affairs that will finally bring about that admission may be a sorry mess which will wreck much havoc on the citizens who have floated along so comfortably for so long.

In the meantime we are going to worry a lot. We are also going to risk the wrath of those who may find us hard-hearted. We are going to say out loud that we think it is ridiculous to continue taxing productive citizens so heavily that mothers are forced out of home into the income-producing scene before their babes are out of diapers, so heavily that it becomes less and less sensible to try to find work in the private sector and so heavily that those who do have jobs and try to meet their own expenses are considered the foolish ones. It's a twist in American values that is not acceptable.

But, it is a situation we are bringing upon ourselves by thinking "Oh this one little dip into the U.S. treasury won't hurt." Each additional "dip" adds to the already immense tax burden. If we want to erode our already skinny dollars still further, all we have to do is continue saying, "But can we afford not to?" whenever some new program is offered.

The time to tighten up was yesterday. We can't go back but we can redeem the situation some by altering the course we are now following.

Incentive Killer

Following editorial is from the Swift County News:

If there is anything that kills business incentive in this nation it's the federal and state income tax. This tax doesn't hurt the poor or the rich, but those in the middle are being ripped-off so badly that there is little reason for young men to put in long hours, risk borrowed capital to establish a business, industry or profession.

For those who have struggled, fought and risked, with no guarantee of success, it is a burden that can kill. Success doesn't mean money in the bank, it means achievement is only more income taxes.

It isn't that those who have fought the battle and found some kind of success don't want to pay their fair share. They do. What is destroying the idea of hard work and risking capital is that there is no real reward any more. All there is on taxes, of every kind, but the worst are the income taxes.

Those of us who were early indoctrinated into the work ethic, to have your family better off in education, position and income than those before, are being crucified on the cross of taxes. Why in the world should a person work long hours, spend sleepless nights worrying about the money borrowed, have the daily problems that are a part of every business, industry or profession and when a certain amount of success is the fruit of these endeavors, discover that he, or she, is in bondage to the income tax.

Those who have so much money that they can be financially liquid without diminishing investments have no problem. Those who pay little or not income tax, but have all the various benefits from those who are taxed to the point of frustration, have no problems. But, what is going to happen when this middle class, the goose that lays the golden eggs, finally understands that it can't win, that hard work, capital risk and decent management are only pawns to taxes?

Learning How To Think

Following suggestions are from The Christophers:

1. Be Honest With Yourself. Avoid the temptation of self-delusion.

2. Confront Problems, Don't Evade Them. Growth comes through facing reality.

3. Widen Your Interests. Stretch your mind by reading, conversation and listening.

4. Write Out The Problems When They Appear. Positive action depends on clear thinking. Writing helps.

5. Keep First Things First. Focus on the main issue; don't let nonessentials confuse you.

6. Don't Oversimplify. If a problem is serious enough to bother you its worth pondering.

7. Get Beyond Faultfinding. People know what's wrong. They want to know what to do about it.

8. Keep An Open Mind. The best solution may not be your solution.

9. Retain Your Sense Of Humor. Humor can reduce prejudice and put things in perspective.

10. Develop Insight. Listen for what the other person means, not merely what he says.

11. Focus On The Positive. Emphasize points of agreement while admitting differences.

12. Pray For Solutions. God is the Creator and Source of all good things, right desires and just works.

Borrowed Nonsense:

Mother-in-Law: "You don't deserve a prize like my little girl!"

Husband: "I don't deserve athlete's foot, either, but I've got that, too."

LEFT ALONE during Crazy Days events last Thursday in Thief River Falls was this pet who seemed to have nothing on his mind but to leave the corner he had been placed in as shoppers passed by his quarters during the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Wikstrom returned home recently from a three-week trip to the East Coast. They left Monday by way of North Shore Drive, and stopped to visit at the home of Vernon's teacher of 45 years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Schnoor of Babbitt, the first day. From Thunder Bay, Ontario, they followed the north shore of Lake Superior to Sault St. Marie, Ontario, then east to Niagara Falls. They crossed over to New York state and drove south to State College, Pa., where they visited Duane and Cheryl (Race) Pressler on Saturday. They drove to Hershey, Pa., where they toured the plant home of chocolate chips and Hershey bars. Then they went to Lancaster, Pa., where they spent a day at the Amish colony. They enjoyed a noon meal with them and viewed their farms where all the work is done with horses, but they had beautiful crops. Next, they took a bus tour of New York City. The traffic there is unbelievable. On our way south we visited Valley Forge, took an interesting tour of the battleground. They drove to Philadelphia and viewed the Independence Hall and the Liberty Bell, Betsy Ross house and Ben Franklin old post office and gravesite. They took a horse drawn tour around the city here. Then they drove through New Jersey and Delaware to Maryland where they camped for three days. They took a bus tour of Washington, D.C. Among other places they toured were the capitol, the White House, Smithsonian Institute, John F. Kennedy Memorial and the Bureau of Engraving and printing where they watched them make paper money and stamps. From Washington, D.C., they drove to Fort Belvoir, Va., for an afternoon visit with Wayne and Barbara Lunsetter and family. Together with them we toured Mt. Vernon home of George Washington, which was just three miles from their place. They left from there for Gettysburg, Pa., where they boarded a bus the next morning from the visitor's center to tour the Eisenhower farm. This is a new tour opened only this summer. The house is left just the way the family lived in it. It was very interesting with the family pictures all around. After this tour, they boarded another bus to tour Gettysburg battleground. They had a guide who could talk for four hours straight about how and where each battle was fought during the civil war. They started home by way of West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and into Iowa, where they visited Pastor and Mrs. Wosji and family at Scarville, who was a former pastor at St. Petri church. Beautiful crops were seen along the way. They spent one night at Vernon's niece, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gibson, at Emmetsburg, Ia. Then they drove through western Wisconsin to view the tornado damages at Ellsworth, Spring Valley and near Eau Claire. They visited at the Roy Adams home in Minneapolis, Allen Wikstrom home at Emily and stopped for a couple of hours to visit the Derwin Tabor family at Felix resort near Nisswa. Quality Good, But No Quantity . . .

Good And Bad News In Grain Harvest

Small grain harvest in Pennington county for 1980 is a classic case of some good news and some bad news, according to information compiled by Terry Courneya, Pennington county agricultural extension director.

The good news is that grain coming into local elevators is of excellent quality.

The bad news is that there isn't much of it.

"If one were to make a general statement about small grain yields for 1980," Courneya said, "it would be that they are running about one-half of the normal expected, but better than many would have predicted in July."

While grain prices have strengthened considerably since June, the economic impact of a very short crop will be felt by most businesses in the area as farmers curtail their spending to adjust to well below average incomes from 1980 crop production, he added.

An exception to the generally poor yields may be sunflower crop. Prospects are still encouraging at this time for only moderate reductions in normal yields if average rainfall patterns occur during the remainder of August and into September.

Economic impact of half a crop for Pennington county and similar results in a 30-mile radius of Thief River Falls can be seen by looking at cash farm income figures for the past two years for which records are available.

In 1977 the cash farm income from grain crops in Pennington county was $13,615,000 and in 1978 the amount was $14,510,000 for Pennington county alone, Courneya said. Livestock income added $7,174,000 to the total in 1977 and $8,217,000 in 1978. Addition of government payments made total cash farm income for Pennington county $21,117,000 in 1977 and $25,353,000 in 1978.

"It is difficult to assess the drought impact on livestock enterprise income at this point," the extension director said, "although the necessity to purchase feed which might otherwise have been produced on the farm will assuredly have an affect on livestock enterprise profitability."

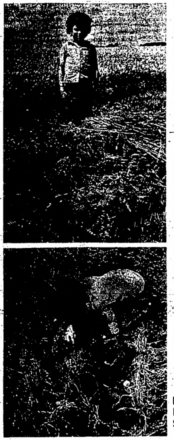
Small grain harvest is progressing well ahead of normal schedule in the Thief River Falls area. With most of the barley harvest complete and a good start made on wheat and oats, the yield trends are pretty well established, Courneya sayd. As had been expected, yields are down over most of the area with a wide range being reported by farmers.

Barley yields have ranged from as low as 15 bushels per acre to as high as 70 bushel per acre, depending primarily on the rainfall patterns in different parts of the country. In general, the better yields are being reported from the southern and eastern townships with an occasional report of good yields in the townships north of highway 1. Wheat yields range from five to 50 bushels throughout the county.

The southern and eastern townships were hit heavily by bad weather last year and the better yields this year are especially welcomed there. Other than the scattered rainfall during the extended spring and summer drought, cropland history and tillage practices had the greatest affect on yields. Fall plowing last year and minimum tillage this spring conserved the greatest amount of moisture and got crops germinated and growing.

Courneya said he surveyed elevators in Thief River Falls and neighboring communities and received confirmation that quality of grain being received is very good. Bushel weights, protein levels and kernel plumpness have been better than expected and above average for our area. Except for malting barley, which is subject to price reduction for too high protein levels, most of this year's crop appears to be meeting premium market quality standards.

While it had been expected earlier that many crop acres would be plowed down under government disaster payment programs, such has not been the case.



WHILE SOME CROPS in the Thief River Falls area are quite good, others show the effect of drought and the overall expectation is that the county will harvest only half an average crop this year. The youngster above shows that one wheat field within two miles of Thief River Falls looks pretty good, then probes a deep crack in a dry field also within two miles of the city. Fall plowing and minimal spring tillage were moisture-saving practices that seemed to make the difference in getting crops started this spring.

Arctic Loss Of $7,450,000 For Quarter Noted

Arctic Enterprises, Inc. recently reported operating results for its first quarter ended June 30 which showed net sales were $12,415,000, down from $36,837,000 for the same period a year ago. Net loss for the quarter was $7,450,000 or $2.36 per common share, compared with a loss of $465,000 or 15 cents per share for the same period a year ago.

Arctic announced earlier that it expected to incur a substantial loss in the first quarter because 1981 model snowmobile production and deliveries were not scheduled to start until July of 1980.

"First quarter results are consistent with out projections and reflect the fixed costs of carrying facilities and people in our snowmobile operations prior to the July production start-up period," Arctic president Kenneth J. Severinson said.

"Last year's snowmobile production began in January. However, this year we scheduled production to start six months later in July to reduce costs of carrying inventories for Arctic and our dealers. Dealer carryover inventories resulting from the lack of snow last winter also affected this decision," Severinson said.

Sales for the first quarter included $1,657,000 from snowmobile operations, down substantially from the $21,240,000 for the first quarter of last year which results from the later start-up of production.

Satter Succeeds Fladeland On Wheat Council

Minnesota Wheat Research and Promotion Council elected Einer Satter, a wheat and durum producer from Norcross, as the new council chairman for the 1980-81 fiscal year during a recent meeting in Red Lake Falls.

Satter replaces Terry Fladeland, Red Lake Falls, who was defeated in his bid for reelection to the council. Tom Runholt from Marshall was reelected secretary for the council, and Kermit Stahn of Morris was reelected treasurer.

Satter was also selected to represent Minnesota on the board of directors of U.S. wheat associates. Other representatives to this international market development organization include Ed Ross, a council member from Fisher; Jorgen Knutson, president of the Minnesota Association of Wheat Growers from Red Lake Falls; and former council member Fladeland, who was requested to serve an additional year.

Satter, who operates a 640 acre farm at Norcross, has been involved in duties with the Wheat council and U.S. Wheat, and serves on the board of directors of Agri-Energy, a firm attempting to open an alcohol plant in the Crookston area for the production of gasohol. He is also a member of the board for the Minnesota Gasohol commission and is a grain board member of the Traverse county NFO.

Runholt farms 880 acres at Marshall and holds memberships in the Minnesota Association of Wheat Growers, The Minnesota Soybean Growers association, the Minnesota Farmers Union, Minnesota Farm Bureau and the Minnesota Crop Improvement association.

Stahn operates a 1-160 acre farm in the Morris area, and is a member of the Farm Bureau, the Crop Improvement association and the school board.

Satter, Runholt and Stahn have all been members of the Minnesota Wheat council since it was formed in 1977. The wheat council also includes Larry Bogestad of Donaldson, Art Howard of Warren, Ed Ross of Fisher, Ed Pester of Fisher, Roland Brule of Red Lake Falls and Rich Kruse of Breckenridge.

IT'S NOT A HAMBURGER that Gretchen Fredeen seems about to devour, although it may more accurately be termed that than a traditional hamburger. This is a porkburger — made from pork instead of beef — and includes the best parts of an entire hog, including the ham, loin and shoulder.

BOB FINCHER of Viking likes pigs and the opportunity to make money by raising them. A transplant from the Chicago area who has learned farming by reading, listening and trial and error, he is now an organizer and first president of the Northwest Pork Producers association.

Fincher Hog Operation Is Bob's Dream Come Alive

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

Fincher Farms of Viking is not what a person in this area would look upon as a normal hog operation. Not only is it located within the city limits of Viking — which must make it somewhat unique in itself — it is operated by a Texas-reared orphan who came here 10 years ago from the Chicago area not knowing a disc from a plow.

"I can get as many ideas how to farm as there are farmers to ask. What they tell me is what works for them. What I have to determine is what will work best for me."

Fincher was talking about his version of an on-the-job training program — a personally-financed, heavily researched, admittedly trial-and-error perfected feeder pig operation. No stranger to challenge, Fincher is enjoying every minute of it.

"Let's face it," he said, "I love pigs. They're friendly, they're clean, they're unbelieveably intelligent, and if you handle 'em right they can make some money for you. This is what I've always wanted to do and I'm having a ball!"

Fincher is prone to such bursts of enthusiasm. He is one of the enigmas of local agriculture — an optimistic farmer who sees opportunity where others would anticipate failure. He believes in spending his own money to promote and market his own product and he would like to keep as many dollars turning in this area as possible.

In addition to farrowing 250 sows two and one-half times a year and serving as president of the Northern Minnesota Pork Producers association which he worked to organize, he is researching and marketing a new product in this area. It is porkburger — ground pork as different from pork sausage as ground beef is from suet. It uses the best parts of the whole hog and when fried like a hamburger patty has a distinctive pork taste.

"Most people say it's like a pork chop without the bone," Fincher said. "We keep the fat content low so there is little shrink and we are finding new uses for it every day. Some people are making meatballs for spaghetti from it. Others make a pork loaf and I understand it's being used for a different taste in some Mexican foods."

So far the sales have been made mostly to restaurants. With labeling now approved by the U.S. department of agriculture, it should soon be making an appearance in meat counters at area supermarkets. Samples will be given away at a Fincher Farms booth to be operated at the curling club building on the Pennington county fairgrounds during the feeder pig show and sale Sunday, August 17. The event is sponsored by the Northern Minnesota Pork Producers association.

"We really haven't gotten into it on a large scale," Fincher said. "What I would like to see is pigs being produced in this area, raised

Hog Wrestling Is Feature Of Show

Hog wrestling is expected to provide hilarious entertainment as a climax to the feeder pig show and sale sponsored Sunday, August 17, at the Pennington county fairgrounds by the Northern Minnesota Pork Producers association.

Entries are open to all comers but are expected to be restricted to 13 four-person teams. Entry fee will be $10 per team and information may be received or registration accomplished by calling 681-1204.

Both men's and women's divisions will be held with prizes including $150 for first place, $100 for second and $50 for third in both divisions. Winners will be determined by the length of time it takes the team to catch a 220-pound hog and deposit it in a barrel in the center of a muddy pen.

The hog wrestle at 7 p.m. in front of the grandstand at the fairgrounds will climax the full day of activity. It will follow feeder pig judging, feeder pig sale and a pork barbecue supper to be served at 4 p.m. Admission to the hog wrestle will be $1.50 per person and a charge will also be made for the pork barbecue supper.

The feeder pig show and sale will be held in the sheep, swine and poultry building at the fairgrounds. The trade show will be held from noon to 6 p.m. and the pork supper will take place in the curling building. Public is invited to take part in all activities during the event.

Bob Fincher of Viking, president of the Northern Minnesota Pork Producers association, said cooperation among the membership in staging this first show and sale has been outstanding.

"We've got a bunch of doers in this group," he said. "I'm looking forward to a good show and sale, an active trade show and a big crowd for the supper and hog wrestle. We're preparing five hogs for the barbecue and the crew will get that going at 4 a.m. Sunday."

Prizes in lightweight commercial pen, heavyweight commercial pen and gilt class will be $50 for first, $25 for second, $15 for third and $10 for fourth. Sponsor prizes will also be awarded to champion and reserve champion in each class and to the champion gilt and barrow of the show.

Entries will be accepted until two hours prior to the show which begins at 1 p.m. Entry information is available from John Peoples, Route 1, Box 98, Brooks, MN. 56715.

ONLY SWIMMING POOL in the city of Viking is the one constructed by Bob Fincher for his feeder pig operation. The pond gives his pigs a place to cool off during hot summer days but leaves the rest of the lot high and dry. Fincher Farms hog operation is located within the city of Viking on the former Percy Stokke farm which Fincher purchased 10 years ago. He farrows 250 sows at the farm, raising two and one-half litters of pigs a year and averaging over nine pigs weaned per litter.

Olson And Johnson Vows Exchanged At Fosston

Poplar Lake Lutheran church, rural Fosston, was the scene of a recent afternoon wedding of Phyllis Olson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earl C. Olson of Fosston, and Alan Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Richards of Largo, Fla.

Officiating at the double ring ceremony were the pastors of the congregation, Bill and Bev Allert. Sarah Schmidt was the organist. She played "Hawaiian Wedding Song," as the bridesmaids preceded to the altar, and the traditional wedding march as the bride was escorted to the altar by her parents. During the ceremony, Kenney Evje, a friend of the bride, sang "Through the Eyes of Love," and "You Needed Me." The groom's sister-in-law Martha Johnson, sang "Wedding Song."

Forming the background for the wedding party were two arrangements of fresh, blue and yellow carnations, yellow daisies and babies' breath.

For her wedding, the bride wore her mother's wedding gown of white, sheer embroidered nylon over white satin. The gown was styled with long sheer sleeves, V-neckline, and a gathered waistline. A row of small buttons accented the front. Her fingertip veil of bridal illusion was held by a profile headpiece, appliqued with lace and dotted with seed pearls. Her jewelry consisted of a matching diamond necklace and earrings, her gift from the groom. She carried an all silk bouquet of yellow and white roses, white carnations and daisies.

Judy Sultvedt of Sauk Rapids, a friend of the couple, was maid of honor. Bridesmatron was Karen Abeldgaard of Bagley, a sister of the bride. Their identical gowns of light blue dotted Swiss were styled with short gathered sleeves and triple-tiered, floor-length skirts. They were accented at the empire waistline by satin ribbon. At the neckline, they wore birthstone necklaces, their gifts from the bride. They carried an all silk bouquet of yellow carnations and miniature white and light blue daisies, tied with yellow ribbon streamers.

Flower girl was Melissa Abelgaard of Bagley, a niece of the bride. She was attired in a short-sleeved, A-line, light-blue dotted Swiss dress with blue ribbon marking the scoop neckline and empire waistline. She carried a small, white basket filled with yellow silk carnations and blue and white silk daisies.

Best man was Donn Haugen of Hinckley, a friend of the couple. Serving as groomsman was Dave Cork, Thief River Falls, also a friend of the couple. The ushers were Marlin and Marvin Olson, Fosston, brothers of the bride. The groom and his attendants wore medium gray tuxedoes with the groom having a yellow silk rose pinned on his lapel. Fresh white carnations, tinted blue, were worn by the attendants and ushers.

The mother of the bride wore a floor-length knit gown featuring pink and gray stripes and floral print on a light gray background. Her sleeves were of pink sheer. The mother of the groom wore a light blue floor-length gown with a V-neckline and short, sheer sleeves. Their identical corsages were of fresh yellow rose buds with white daisies and blue babies' breath.

Honor guests were Mrs. Hilma Olson, Mr. and Mrs. Olaf M. Olson, grandparents of the bride; Myrtle Johnson, aunt of the groom; and Janet Arnold, the bride's personal attendant.

A reception in the church parlors followed the ceremony. Host and hostess were Mr. and Mrs. Ken Olson, Bloomington, uncle and aunt of the bride. Lori Hartel, Thief River Falls, a friend of the couple, presided at the guest book as Jill and Diane Anderson, St. Paul, cousins of the bride, ladled the punch.

The serving table was highlighted by a five-tiered wedding cake, decorated by Alice Gunerson of Lengby. To correspond with the bride's chosen colors, the cake was decorated with yellow roses and blue daisies, and was topped by a miniature bride and groom. It was cut and served by Joyce Olson, Fosston, aunt of the bride, and Barb Cenan, Seminole, Fla., sister of the groom. Pouring coffee were Shirley Booth, Thief River Falls, aunt of the bride, and Norma Hafford, Braham, sister of the groom.

Waitresses were Julie Johnson, Andrea Axelson, nieces of the groom, and Debbie Olson, a cousin of the bride. At the gift table was Margy Smith, a friend of the bride. The groom's nieces, Jamie Hafford and Sherry Johnson, were gift bearers.

For traveling on a wedding trip along the North Shore drive, the bride wore a light blue pantsuit with a tan crepe blouse.

Engvald Dahls Honored On 50th Anniversary

Fortieth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Engvald Dahl of rural Newfolden was observed on Sunday, July 27, at an open house at their farm home south of Newfolden.

Hosting the open house were the couple's four children and their spouses, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dahl, Newfolden; Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Dahl, Glyndon; Mr. and Mrs. James Dahl, Bemidji; and Mr. and Mrs. Bert (Sandy) Gjovik, Jr., of Strathcona.

The observance began with an outdoor program with Robert Dahl in charge. Rev. Earl Evaland gave devotions, Mrs. Gena Gunderson read the wedding story and family history, and Alfred Solem, a neighbor and friend, reminisced events in the lives of the couple. Vocal selections were by the grandchildren: Heidi and Angie Dahl, who sang two selections, and Sheri Gjovik and Gina Dahl, who sang, "Jesus Loves Me." Following a prayer by Wayne Dahl, the honored couple expressed their appreciation to everyone attending the event.

At the reception that followed, Mrs. Dahl's sister, Mrs. Gena Gunderson, who was maid of honor at the wedding, cut and served the anniversary cake. Ruth Johnson poured the coffee, Angie Dahl was at the guest book and Brenda and Heidi Dahl served the punch.

Over 150 relatives and friends attended the celebration.

The couple, Engvald Dahl and Thelma Svanajord, exchanged marriage vows on May 31, 1940 in Seattle, Wash. Since then, they have resided on their farm near Newfolden.

Needs System Instituted At Valley Home

According to the Valley Home monthly report, submitted by Ella Overum, a new card file system has been instituted at the Home, listing the individual needs of the residents. These card files, located at each nurse's station are available to the public and will assist in selecting items needed by the residents.

It was also reported that residents are utilizing the new senior citizen park, where sack picnics are held, are enjoying the player piano installed recently in the band stand, and are visiting the chickens in the barn and the four ducks in the pond. It was noted that four rabbits have been added.

Activities at the home during July included Mass every Saturday at 9:00 a.m., with St. Bernard's priests in charge, and Bible studies on Tuesday mornings with Judith Wold and Mrs. Martin Hanson and her daughter, Grace, as leaders.

Devotional programs during the month were given by Rev. Carl Andersen of Trinity Lutheran church, Rev. Don Peres of the Evangelical Covenant church, Rev. Paul Bortnem, chaplain at Northwestern hospital; Rev. Berton Hushagen of Trinity, Rev. Earl Eveland of the Newfolden Evangelical Free church, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Dyrud and Mrs. Merle Knutson of the Westaker Free Lutheran church, Newfolden; Lester Brekke of Valley home; Rev. Curtis Anderson of the Evangelical Free church, LeRoy Knutson, Wesley Stale, Bill Wagner and Rueben Haugen of Newfolden, Rev. Julius Hovland of Trinity, who offers Holy Communion the last Wednesday of the month and Rev. George DeWall and family of the Bible Baptist church, who is in charge of devotional services every Sunday afternoon at three.

Tuesday evening devotionals were given by the Don Johnson family, Norris Trochmann and Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Trochmann, and a young people's group, "The First Love."

Other programs were given by a group of women from the Evangelical Free church who served cinnamon bread with the afternoon coffee; Mrs. Arnold Berg and Gloria Swanson, who presented an organ and piano concert; the Sandland family; the Mary circle of Trinity, who served a variety of sweet breads; the Martha circle of Nazareth Lutheran church of Holt, who served cookies following the hymn sing led by Revs. Rick and Nancy Lund; and Our Saviour's WMF with Beverly Enderlein leading devotions, the Sunday school children and Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Swanson singing and the group serving doughnuts with the afternoon coffee. An Independance Day program was presented by the residents at the home with Tammy Rude in charge.

Activities away from Valley Home included a musical program at Oakland Park Nursing home, a trip to the local shopping area, and attendance at the Senior Citizens activities at the Pennington County fair. A group of Valley Home garden club members, accompanied by Tammy Rude, were guests at an afternoon luncheon at the Julian and Eva Lendobeja farm in Smiley, where they viewed the flowers in the home and yard.

Residents observing birthdays during July, together with the dates of their birthdays were Tillie Baker and Florence Dahlin, both on July 3; Regina Kveno, July 15; Mabel Johnson, July 18; Selma Fontaine, July 22; Carl Olson, July 23; and Sena Swenson, July 28. At the monthly birthday party, all received birthday cards with a cash gift from the Home, and birthday rememberances from the Catholic Daughters. The birthday lunch featured blueberry cobbler and ice cream.

Other activities included a bowling game against the Oakland Park team with the Valley Home team as victors; a rummage sale for the residents, choir and band practice, corn popping, a visit from the cosmo girls, and making homemade ice cream.

Inadvertently omitted from June's activity account were the two organ concerts given for the residents by Mabel Roisland's daughter, Doris Roisland of South St. Paul. She was also among those who helped her mother celebrate her birthday on June 29.

Arctic Loses $7,450,000 In 1st Quarter

Marine product sales were $9,104,000, compared to $13,272,000 last year.

"Many of our marine dealers were hit hard by the downturn in the economy this spring, as well as the effect of high interest rates and the general unavailability of consumer financing," Severinson said.

"They have been cautious in their buying in order to get inventories in line. Indications during June and July are that dealers are making good progress toward getting their inventories down to normal levels by the end of the season."

"Strong dealer orders for snowmobile products and scheduled shipments for the quarter ending Sept. 30, 1980, indicate that the company is on its way toward substantially improved results during that quarter," Severinson reported. "Also, the recent decline in the prime interest rate and the improvement in consumer credit availability are encouraging signs. With good snow, we expect to meet our sales goals this year and have no reason at this time to change our earlier projection of near breakeven results for the current fiscal year.

UND Workshop On Returning To College

Adults who are interested in returning to college, or in enrolling in college for the first time, have been invited to attend a free workshop on Tuesday at the University of North Dakota memorial union in Grand Forks.

Hosted by UND, the "How Do I Get to College" workshop will run from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Child care will be available at the site.

According to Gerald Hamerlik, UND dean of enrollment services, a similar workshop was held this past spring, and is being repeated because of popular demand. It will be broken into four 20-minute sessions, each of which will be repeated four times so that participants can attend each topic area. The topic areas are:

+ "Reducing the Barriers," which will address such questions as: "How do I apply to a university? How do I know which classes to take? What's registration all about? Is there still time to register for this fall?

+ "Coping with College," which will address such questions as: "How is college going to change my lifestyle? How do I study? I don't have a career goal set — is there someone to help me? Do I have to pick out a major to take a class or two?

+ "Financing Your Education," which will address such questions as: "How do I budget for college? How do I apply for financial aid? Will there be tax benefits from my educational expenses? What about all the forms that need to be filled out?"

+ "Division of Continuing Education Opportunities," which will address such questions as: How can I take courses for audit if I am unable to come to campus? What non-credit activities are offered through continuing education? What is lifelong learning and how can I use it?

UND departments participating in the workshop include the counseling center, enrollment services office, student financial aids office, and the division of continuing education.

Further information is available from the UND Division of Continuing Education, University Station, Grand Forks, ND 58202; telephone (701) 777-4237.

State Official Asks Extended Timber Permit

State Representative Irv Anderson, DFL — International Falls, has contacted the Division of forestry, Minnesota department of natural resources, urging that timber permits presently in existence be extended upon the request of the purchaser.

Anderson indicated he has had requests from the purchasers of state timber unable to obtain a contract for purchase of the wood from a timber using company.

"The recession," said Anderson, "has caused hardship for the people within the timber industry. They are unable to sell wood they have purchased from the state."

Rather than have those loggers lose their sale permits Anderson has urged the state to be lenient in the granting of extensions.

Pioneer Days Presented At Bonanzaville

It was decided recently in St. John's Bonanzaville, U.S.A., West Fargo that the eleventh annual Pioneer Days review will be presented August 23 and 24 from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. each day.

Display chairmen, Cass County historical society members and Plains museum staffers learned that demonstrations and displays will number more than last year's 75 exhibits.

New attractions will include demonstrations of book binding, therorem painting, a display entitled "Little Bit of Poland," and work of the North Dakota Quilters Guild and the Prairie Chinaware Painting Guild.

Free entertainment to be offered both days includes appearances by the Fargo-Moorhead Sweet Adelines, the Fargo Kitchenairs, barbershop quartets, F-M Mounted Posse, the El Zagal German band, square dance ensembles and numerous musical groups.

Visitors will view two new buildings — an annex to the printer's museum and the Country Markets where produce and snacks will be sold. First house to be built in Fargo is being restored on the grounds.

Traditional exhibits that have attracted thousands to previous Pioneer Days will include Bonanzaville's 30-plus buildings, the Edward A. Milligan Memorial American Indian museum with new collections never seen before, and a mini-tractor pull demonstration. An old-time street dance will be conducted August 23 from 7 to 10 p.m.

Two other features will include daily prizes offered for the oldest woman, oldest man, person coming from the greatest distance and couple married the longest.

Prizes totaling $150 will be offered for those exhibiting the largest sunflower blossoms, with the funds contributed by the Interstate Sunflower Co., West Fargo, and divided between oil and confectionery varieties.

Ripley Staff Attends Retreat At Rochester

Women's Shelter Board Inc. of Rochester hosted the first statewide battered women's shelter staff retreat August 1 and 2.

Fifty women and men representing 11 of the 15 shelters in the state attended the two-day retreat. With the help of volunteer staffing, six of the Ripley alliance staff as well as one alliance board member were in attendance from Thief River Falls.

Four general sessions were panel discussions addressing such topics as "Meeting the Needs of Children in Shelters," and "Shelters, Where We Came From and Our Future."

Several workshops were offered in informal group settings to discuss shelter programs and operations. "Meeting the Needs of Rural Women," "Serving Non-Shelter Resident Women" and "Programs of the Abusing Partners" were priorities for the Ripley shelter staff.

Peat As Energy Source Is Topic At Duluth Meet

Peat as an energy source will be discussed at an international conference in Duluth August 17-23, according to Rouse Farnham, University of Minnesota soil scientist.

Topic of the sixth international peat congress is "The Role of Peatlands in a World of Limited Resources — Energy, Food, Fiber and Natural Areas." Conference headquarters will be in the Duluth arena. About 500 scientists from North America, Russia, mainland China, Africa and several European and Scandinavian countries will attend. Finland is sending 90 scientists.

"Peat has been used as an energy source for years, but now there's renewed interest worldwide," says Farnham. Farnham is also vice president of the International Peat society and chairman of the society's U.S. national committee, which is hosting the conference.

About 165 technical papers will be presented on the following topics: soil classification, formation and soil resources; using peat for energy; peat use for agricultural, forestry and horticultural products; peat chemistry and physics; and ecology and conservation.

Peat programs of the Minnesota department of natural resources and the U.S. department of energy will be discussed. There will also be study tours and trips to various peat areas in northern Minnesota and Canada.

Minnesota has about 7.5 million acres of peatlands in northern Minnesota. "Very little of it is being used. We have a great opportunity to make wise use of this natural resource," Farnham says.

"It's appropriate for the international meeting to be in Minnesota because of the university's active peat research program," say Richard Sauer, director of the university's agricultural experiment station and William Martin, head of the soil science department.

Arrangements are being handled by the Iron Range Resources and Rehabilitation board in Eveleth. For more information, contact Donald Grubich, P.O. Box 678, Eveleth, MN 55734, telephone (218) 749-8260.

UND Education Classes Are Being Offered

Center for teaching and learning at the University of North Dakota in Grand Forks will be offering a number of late afternoon and evening courses in education, for the benefit of teachers and administrators within driving distance of Grand Forks.

Registration for those wishing to enroll in courses in early childhood education, educational administration, elementary education, foundations of education, secondary education, special education and business and vocational education, will be from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, August 23, in room 414 of Twamley hall on the university campus.

Graduate tuition is $32 per semester credit for residents, $64 per credit for non-residents. A reciprocity agreement between Minnesota and North Dakota allows Minnesota residents to attend UND and to pay resident tuition. Reciprocity forms may be obtained from the office of admissions and records at the University of North Dakota, Grand Forks, ND 58202.

Teachers or administrators who were not registered this past spring semester or who have never registered in the graduate school, should contact the graduate school (777-2784) as soon as possible to fill out the necessary registration forms. This must be done prior to receiving a registration packet.

A complete listing of courses available may be obtained by contacting the dean's office in the center for teaching and learning, 777-2674.

Wheat Growers Urge Further Price Supports

Minnesota association of Wheat Growers has commended Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland for his efforts in increasing the price support loan level for wheat from $2.50 to $3 per bushel. In a letter to Bergland, Minnesota wheat grower president Jorgen Knutson of Red Lake Falls stated that the move was "in the right direction", but indicated that additional efforts to increase prices were necessary in light of increasing costs.

"You are well aware of the increasing costs faced by farmers in producing wheat and other commodities for domestic and export consumption," Knutson indicated to Bergland. "The USDA's own calculations place wheat costs, excluding land, in a range of from $3.31 to $3.79 per bushel with full costs estimated at $5 per bushel. Moreover, the wheat grower funded study through Chase Econometrics pegs costs for producing wheat, excluding land, within the USDA range at $3.58 per bushel, but projects total costs even higher at $5.37 per bushel".

Knutson also pointed out that the growers realized that the activities of the U.S. department of agriculture frequently involve consumers as well as producers, and that wheat interests represent only a portion of the overall problem that Bergland has to deal with in the administration of his department.

Knutson called for Bergland to "stand by the American farmer" when demands from non-agricultural entities conflict with the needs of the producer, and encouraged Bergland to consider not only additional adjustments in the price support programs, but to "place maximum effort on increasing demands for our products through an aggressive export expansion program"

600 To Exhibit At Minneapolis' 17th Art Fair

This year's Seventeenth Annual Uptown Art Fair will be conducted August 15, 16 and 17, in the Hennepin Avenue and Lake Street business district of Minneapolis. It will include a record high of over 600 exhibitors, and will be the largest outdoor art show ever conducted in the Upper Midwest, according to Gene Nieland, founder of the show and administrative director.

Sponsored annually by the Uptown Commercial Club, the businessmen in the Hennepin-Lake shopping district, the Uptown Art Fair is the "original granddaddy" of all the sidewalk art shows now being conducted in this area.

The first Uptown Art Fair was conducted in 1964 and included the work of 146 mostly local artists. Since that time this unique annual art event has grown in both stature and participation until this year when the huge three day show will include the work of artists from 24 different states. There will be exhibitors from as far away as Oregon, Oklahoma, Florida, New York, Georgia and Tennessee, as well as from Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Montana, Colorado, Wisconsin, Iowa and the Dakotas, and over 300 artists from all over Minnesota.

More than 100,000 pieces of artwork will fill the sidewalk and mall exhibit areas located throughout the uptown business district. Fabulous array of art being offered for sale will include oils, acrylics, tempras and watercolor paintings . . . charcoal and pen and ink drawings, prints . . . sculpture, ceramics and pottery, weaving, macrame, wood carvings, batik, handmade jewelry, stained and blown glass and many, many other art and craft forms. Each artist who is participating in the fair will personally be there to show and sell his or her own work. Items on display will be priced from under a dollar up to $1,000. There will be arts and crafts in every price range and to meet a wide variety of tastes.

The Seventeenth Annual Uptown Art Fair will continue from noon until nightfall each day, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, August 15, 16 and 17. Public is cordially invited, and there is no admission charge. A crowd of over 150,000 is expected to attend during the three days of this event.

Stephens Wins Holland Medal

The following story appeared in a Tennessee newspaper and was written by Victor Lee, a sports writer for the paper. Mitch Stephens, whom the story was written about, is the son of Grover and Donna O'Hara Stephens of Tennessee and former residents of Thief River Falls and the grandson of Marie O'Hara Youmans, also of Thief River Falls. His aunt is Mrs. James (Teen) Berg of Thief River Falls.

How does a triple amputee compete with the rest of the world?

For Mitch Stephens, it's not all that tough — even though his speciality is table tennis.

"I just do what everybody else does," he says. And he does, with a little technical assistance and a bit more effort. Stephens drives, is married, has a job with the Veterans administration and is very athletic.

His athletic prowess recently earned him a gold medal in the Handicap Olympics in Holland. Stephens, 25, has no legs and one arm as a result of a train accident 10 years ago. But even with Olympic competition, he won easily in Holland.

"To me, playing other triple amputees, they are more handicapped than I am," Stephens said as he relaxed in a building on Second Avenue North where he meets with the Nashville Table Tennis Club. "I'm proud of the medal, but it is not that big because those guys just don't train like I do."

Stephens, ranked 10th in the state, finds most of his competition in able-bodied tournaments. It was in such an event that he first heard of the man who now poses his greatest challenge.

"Whenever I went to able-bodied tournaments, people would ask me if I knew Mike Dempsey," Stephens said. "Mike Dempsey is a paraplegic table tennis player, and No. 1 in the nation. I want to beat him worse than anybody. I've only done it once, and that was at a clinic."

Second to conquering Dempsey, Stephen's strongest desire may be to win in competitive swimming.

Impossible? No way.

"I can swim pretty well," Stephens said. "When I first tried to swim after my accident, I must have had four jackets on," he laughed. "They were everywhere. I just started taking them off one by one until I was used to it."

A triple amputee playing table tennis, swimming or doing anything at all gets a lot of attention. Sometimes that causes problems, but usually Stephens handles it well.

"Some people are just nosy," he said. "Like I'll be in a bar, and someone will come up and they always know someone like you. Sometimes they ask questions, but I don't mind. I just tell them that you do with what you've got. Like the old saying goes, 'You can't cry over spilled milk'."

"I say there is always someone worse off than me. Maybe I don't have my legs and one arm, but I have my mind."

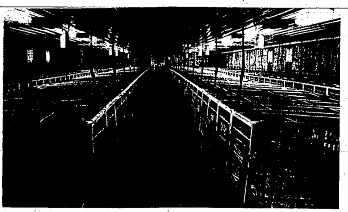
Stephens is often asked to speak to people in similar situations.

"I do it, but I don't really like to that much," he said. "I try to feel people out first. Some are uptight when they see me. They don't know what to say. In that case I don't know what to say either. It can be awkward."

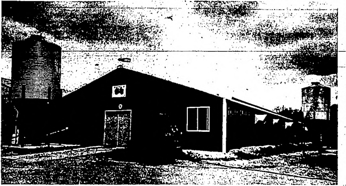
In any awkward circumstance, Stephens' sense of humor can help him out. He has the desirable ability to laugh at himself.

"Sometimes I tell people I'd be a good Timex commercial," he said jokingly. "You know, the guy gets run over by a train, gets up with no legs and one arm, but his watch keeps on ticking."

Mitch Stephens keeps on ticking because he is determined nothing can stop him.



CONFINEMENT PENS for gestating sows awaiting movement into farrowing pens are located in this part of the 45x184 hog barn on the Bob Fincher farm in Viking. The barn has an extensive exhaust system to vent odors and utilizes straw bedding and a barn cleaner for rapid removal of waste. Fincher weans his litters at four weeks of age and his sows produce two and one-half litters per year, averaging over nine pigs per litter weaned.



NEW HOG BARN on the Bob Fincher farm at Viking is 45x184 feet in size and designed by Fincher not only to handle his 250-show feeder pig operation but to be as odor-free as possible. The Fincher hog operation is located within the Viking city limits and odor could be a big problem. The barn has a good exhaust system for air circulation and utilizes straw bedding and a barn cleaner to remove wastes. "We haven't had any complaints that I know of," Fincher said. "We have to make a living but we want to be good neighbors, too."

Fincher Hog Operation Is Living Dream

for market in this area and processed in this area. Why ship 'em all over the country for somebody else to make a profit on? Let's keep the dollars here."

It was a winding trail that led Fincher into the hog business in Marshall county of northwestern Minnesota. He was raised in an orphanage in Ft. Worth, Texas, and from age nine through high school he was "farmed out" during the summer to farmers and ranchers to work for room, board and a few dollars a week. He liked the farm life.

After completing Arlington high school in Ft. Worth, he attended the University of Texas at Austin on a football scholarship, playing varsity football for three years on a team that won the Southwest Conference in his last two years there. Graduating from college in 1952 he enlisted for a four-year hitch in the Navy.

While stationed in the Chicago area he met his wife-to-be and when he was discharged in San Diego, Calif., he went back to the Chicago area to be married. For three years he worked at the H.M. Harper company, a firm which made steel ingots and produced bolts.

Then he went into the business of reconditioning automobiles, forming Abco Industries in Skokie, Ill., and reconditioning used cars for up to 23 auto dealers. He devised a machine to wax and buff cars in 30 minutes and charged $5.95 for the job. When the work load from dealerships got too heavy he sought to discourage jobs coming in off the street.

"We raised the price from $5.95 to $15.95," he said, "and the number of customers tripled. They must not have believed they could get a good job for $5.95, but for $15.95 it sounded reasonable."

He set up reconditioning operations in service stations available for lease, renting them on a monthly basis. At one time he had more than 40 of those operations going. When the work load became too strenuous he sold the patent for his equipment to Skil saw company and the idea to Simonize.

On a vacation in 1970 to visit his friend Bob Cattillier at Newfolden, he was shown the Percy Stokke farm at Viking. He bought the 320-acre farm and told his wife that if she didn't like it after a year they would move back to Chicago.

"After the first year I didn't dare to ask her if she liked it," he said. "Or the second or third year either. Things were kind of 'iffy' about then. Now I don't think I could get her to move back if I tried."

Those first three years he also worked at Arctic Enterprises while reading and asking questions about farming. "I asked 21 different farmers and found 21 different ways how to farm," he said. "From that I had to put everything together, sort it out and come up with a 22nd way — my way."

Deciding that grain farming wouldn't be the way to go, Fincher went into the livestock field. He bought three sheep which he chased all over eastern Marshall county and never did catch. He finally gave them to a neighbor in exchange for some custom combining.

Then he bought two goats and had nearly a full-time job keeping them off cars and farm equipment in the yard. The nanny finally wandered onto the main street in north Viking at precisely the time an infrequent car came by and met an untimely demise. Bob locked up the billy in his machine shed overnight and it promptly ate all the wiring off four tractors.

"I decided goats might not be the best enterprise," Bob said.

Next venture was with four or five pigs and Fincher finally found what he was after. The herd grew to 14, then 27, then more. He bought Bob Cattillier's 320-acre farm in 1975 and expanded there. At one time he was farrowing 500 sows. Then prices dropped and he sold the 250 sows he had been handling on the Cattillier farm.

"This operation is just right for me," he said. "I can make a pretty good living with 250 sows here. It's a great life. Every time I go out to the barn in the morning and there is a new litter I think about how those pigs are making money for me while I'm sleeping. How can you beat that?"

The Fincher herd is young. He bought Duroc-Yorkshire cross gilts and they are now coming with their third litters. He has been using Hampshire boars but is now introducing Landrace boars for more milk production and mothering ability in the gilts produced. Sows are bred in lots of 45 and every week Fincher weans the litters of 12 sows and brings 12 more into the farrowing barn. Litters are born nearly every day.

Fincher averages 9.3 to 9.6 pigs weaned per litter which he markets as 40-pound feeders at seven to eight weeks of age. If a sow produces fewer than nine pigs per litter twice in succession she is culled from the herd.

In addition to the effort to maintain cleanliness and eliminate odor in the hog operation, Fincher also conducts a strict innoculation and health program. He takes advantage of research by reading everything he can find on hog production and is a subscriber to the Will Rogers theory that "it ain't so much what you don't know as what you know that ain't so".

Only two of the six Fincher children — 16-year-old Bobby and 14-year-old Marie — are still at home. Two others live in the area, one is in Grand Forks and another attending college.

"Not everyone can be doing what he really wants to do," Fincher said. "I think I've found what I really want to do."

Annual Duck Stamp Contest Is Now Open

Annual "duck stamp" contest for waterfowl art to adorn the 1981-82 migratory bird hunting and conservation stamp is now open, the Interior department's U.S. fish and wildlife service announced today.

Revenues derived from the sale of this stamp, popularly known as the "duck stamp," are used to acquire critically needed habitat for waterfowl populations.

This annual competition is the only art contest regularly sponsored by the federal government. The colorful stamps whose designs are selected through the contest constitute the longest running, annually issued series of stamps in revenue or postage stamp history. Last year, more than 1,300 artists submitted entries in the prestigious contest.

Artists interested in submitting an entry should write to the Audio-Visual Office, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Department of the Interior, Washington, D.C. 20240, for copies of the contest rules and an entry form. Entries, limited to one per person, must be postmarked by midnight, October 15. Judging to select the winning entry is open to the public and will begin at 9 a.m., November 6, at the department of the Interior auditorium in Washington, D.C.

Migratory bird hunting and conservation stamp was authorized by Congress in 1934. It is sold through local post offices and some national wildlife refuges. The stamp must be carried by every migratory waterfowl hunter 16 years of age or older. All of the stamp revenues, beyond printing and handling costs, are used solely for the acquisition of additional habitat for migratory waterfowl. This habitat also benefits other wildlife species. The $7.50 stamp for 1981-82 will go on sale July 1, 1981.

Before 1949, wildlife artists were commissioned to provide the design for the "duck stamp." Since that time, the design has been chosen through a contest open to all artists who are citizens or residents of the United States.

The prestige of winning the contest has enhanced the reputations of established artists and has elevated otherwise unknown artists to public acclaim. The federal government offers no prize other than a sheet of stamps to the winner, but commercial wildlife art dealers in the past have been eager to market limited edition reprints for the winner.

This year minor technical changes have been made in the contest to improve administrative and judging procedures. These changes, adopted in the July 16, 1980, "Federal Register," are outlined in the contest rules that will be sent to each entrant.

Ekeren Edges St. Hilaire For League Title

Good defense and timely hitting gave the Ekeren Drug team a closely-contested 3-1 victory over the St. Hilaire Saints Wednesday evening in a play-off to determine first place in Division I of the women's slow pitch softball league. The teams had finished the season with identical 19-3 records.

Ekeren Drug scored in the bottom of the first inning but St. Hilaire came back to tie in the second on a triple by Marlys Huot and run-scoring single. The game continued scoreless until the fifth inning when Paula Hanson of Ekeren Drug drove in Paula Myers and Laura Larson with a two-out triple, but was thrown out trying to stretch the hit into a homer.

One St. Hilaire Saints' budding rally was snuffed out in the fifth on a line drive to Ekeren pitcher Marlene Foss who tossed to Laura Larson at first to complete a double play. With runners on second and third for St. Hilaire and two out in the final, Susan Dupree scooped up a grounder to third and fired to Larson at first for the game-ending out.

Bicarbonate Is Used To Boost Milk Production

Modern dairymen are turning to high energy rations to push cattle to their genetic potential.

Along with this switch to higher energy feed, however, has come an increase in rumen acids present in the dairy cows' digestive systems, especially among cows fed ensiled forages and high concentrate levels.

Dairy cows with too much acidity sometimes experience depressed butterfat tests, reduced feed intake, lower milk production and more infertility, says Dr. Richard Adams, a dairy nutritionist at Pennsylvania state university.

One feed ingredient which has been effective in balancing rumen acids is sodium bicarbonate, a compound which occurs naturally in cows' saliva. However, not enough saliva is secreted to neutralize the acids produced when low-fiber, high-energy rations are fed, especially during hot weather. In these cases, supplemental feeding of sodium bicarbonate should be considered, Dr. Adams says.

Dairymen feeding sodium bicarbonate should supply it at a level equal to 0.60 per cent of dry matter intake. "That's roughly equal to 1 to 1.5 per cent in a concentrate mixture or finished feed," Dr. Adams explains.

Milk production, butterfat test percentage and dry matter intake may improve separately or in combination when sodium bicarbonate is added to rations in proper amounts.

Dr. Adams lists several conditions under which bicarb feeding may be helpful: High producing cows consuming concentrates at a level exceeding two per cent of their body weight; cows suffering from hot, humid weather, especially when little alfalfa or otherlegume forage is fed; cows fed less than two pounds of forage on a dry matter basis per 100 pounds of body weight; and rations in which forage substitutes like wet brewers grain provide 20 to 25 per cent of the usual roughage on a dry matter basis.

Dairymen should consider feeding sodium bicarbonate in combination with other feed ingredients such as magnesium oxide and calcium carbonate, he adds. Recent university and industry research resulted in increases in fat-corrected milk when sodium bicarbonate was fed with magnesium oxide.

Calcium carbonate may neutralize acids in the lower digestive tract in contrast to sodium bicarbonate's neutralizing effect in the rumen. Fed in combination, these ingredients may help correct acid imbalances throughout the digestive system.

Membership in labor unions and employee associations headquartered in the U.S. reached 24,295,000 in 1978, an increase of 138,000 since 1970, the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics reports.

Wild Burros Eat Themselves Out Of Home On The Range

They're smart, hardy, prolific and have no natural enemies. Some think the floppy-eared wild burros that roam the nation's western rangelands are rather cute. The problem with burros, according to the current issue of National Wildlife magazine, is that they're "eating a swath of destruction" through U.S. public lands.

Burros in the U.S. are found mainly in the desert areas of California, Nevada, Arizona and New Mexico. They are descended from the stoic pack animals that served the gold prospectors of the nineteenth century. Burros are "wild" in the literal sense, but technically they're 'feral' — domesticated animals gone native, explains the National Wildlife Federation's bimonthly publication.

About 13,000 wild burros can be found cavorting in U.S. parks, monuments, forests and rangelands, where they are overgrazing, trampling plants, making trails that cause erosion and fouling fresh water.

Why have the burros thrived in the arid west? Robert Ohmart, associate professor of zoology at Arizona state university, told National Wildlife that the burro is "more sturdy than almost any other animal in the wilderness." This is because the burro is "preadapted" to its dry environment, having sprung originally from the arid regions in south and northeastern Arica. In addition to being physically hardy, the burro can eat just about anything and can go 24 hours or more without water. Like the camel, it can smell water in the distance, dig for it and then drink its fill.

Burros are smart, too. "Burros in California's Death Valley have learned to turn on campground water faucets and kick in weak spots in an ancient waterline so that water trickles out," National Wildlife reports.

In addition, the burro has no natural enemies and lives for about 25 years. Some have been known to live to be 40 and 50. Add this to the fact that almost every foal dropped by a jenny survives — and a jenny drops a foal every year — and you've got a population explosion.

The burro has quite simply multiplied beyond the capacity of its habitat to support it, and U.S. interior department officials are convinced that the burro must go before it irreparably destroys public lands. Robert Whitaker, a bureau of land management (BLM) official told National Wildlife that the grazing ground of a major herd of burros near Alamo Lake in western Arizona looks like "an atomic bomb hit it." Such destruction threatens the deer, pronghorn and desert bighorn sheep which share the burros' habitat.

Before passage in 1971 of the controversial wild and free-roaming horse and burro act, the burro population was kept in check informally by local ranchers, professional hunters and state game and fish officers. Now it is illegal to kill a burro on lands overseen by the BLM, except under special circumstances, which include removal of old and sick animals, removal for adoption and the "humane" dstruction of "excess" animals.

The National Park service and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife service are not covered by this law, but every time officials announce plans to shoot the burros, public outcry holds them back. Recently the park service announced plans for burro removal in Bandelier national monument in New Mexico, and in Grand Canyon national park in Arizona, where burro herds are destroying natural resources.

Under the plan, the park service gave several private groups two months to remove the burros from Bandelier and the Grand Canyon. The groups will try to round up the animals, and then invite people to adopt them. They also hope to sterilize male burros to prevent future population explosions. Park service officials indicated they would extend the two-month deadline if the live-removal plan seemed to be succeeding. Meanwhile, the Fund for Animals, the American Horse Protection association, and the Humane Society of the U.S. have sued the park service to prevent any shooting of the burros.

The National Wildlife federation, the Izaak Walton league of America, the National Parks and Conservation association, and other conservation groups have intervened on the side of the park service in these lawsuits, supporting the plan to shoot a certain number of burros if live-removal proves impractical. Two NWF state affiliates, the New Mexico Wildlife federation and the Arizona Wildlife federation, have joined the Bandelier and Grand Canyon suits, respectively.

Thomas L. Kimball, executive vice president of the National Wildlife federation, is worried about the costs and priorities involved in live-removal. "We've entered an era of real belt tightening," he told National Wildlife, "and the money required to round up and sterilize burros would have to be siphoned from much more important programs."

Removing the 350 or so burros from Grand Canyon could cost as much as $360,000, according to Francis Jacot of the park service.

Meanwhile, the burros keep eating, drinking and mating. Given an 18 to 20 per cent growth rate, burro populations in western deserts will quadruple in about seven years. As John Russo, chief of game management for the Arizona game and fish department told National Wildlife, "There's a place for burros — but it's not out there competing with wildlife."

Wet Pavements Create Driver-Awareness Need

Minnesotans have had a chance lately to re-educate themselves on the need to drive carefully on rain-slick road surfaces.

Commissioner John Sopsic of the state department of public safety said wet pavements cause more accidents than snow-covered highways. The national transportation safety board (NTSB) in a recent study said the risk is increased four times.

NTSB did a computer study of crash and precipitation data. It indicated that precipitation occurs only about 3.0 to 3.5 per cent of the time while 13.5 per cent of fatal crashes occur on rain-soaked roads.

Causes of wet-weather crashes include human factors, possible vehicle differences and variations in highway design. Some narrow stretches of two-lane highways are particularly hazardous as reflected by a large percentage of state crashes occurring on trunk highways and county roads. For instance, in 1978 just over 70 per cent of state fatalities in vehicle accidents occurred in rural areas.

Heavy rains increase the danger of hydroplaning, which happens when a vehicle's tires start to lift off the road and ride up on a thin film of water. "The best defense against hydroplaning is to slow down during rainy weather and use good tires that are properly inflated and have deep treads," said Sopsic.

Patients Benefit From Knowledge Of Self-Care Ideas

More and more Americans are taking responsibility for their own health by embarking on exercise programs, sensible diets and mental health regimes.

That's good, say doctors and other health professionals. Your doctor has little control over your health compared to what you can do by taking better care of yourself.

But responsible self-care does not mean that you should stop seeing a doctor altogether, cautions Dr. Russell LaBeau, director of emergency medical services at a Twin Cities hospital. The self-care movement has been popularized and promoted by an ever increasing variety of sources. With this comes the added risk of misinterpretation of the core ideas in self-care, which are sound, healthy, common sense practices.

Rational approaches to self-care do not include fad diets, miracle cures or total abandonment of traditional medical care. Over the years contributions of medical science and health professionals have made it possible to treat and prevent many diseases. These persons are valuable resources who can help to identify what is important to you individually.

Each year scores of patients gain a new lease on life by exercising and working to correct habits which may have already put them in the hospital.

"The important thing is to follow a program that is realistic for your aims and capabilities. Too many people give up because they set their goals too high to start with and their health improvement program becomes an added burden," Dr. LaBeau said.

If you are over 40 or haven't been exercising, you should see your doctor before beginning a regular schedule of exercise. Regular physical exams are still a good idea for young children and adults over 40, as well as for people who have special risks. Children need vaccinations. Pap smears, breast exams, glaucoma tests, tuberculosis screening and blood pressure checks are important elements of preventive care that should involve a health professional.

Parents of young children should also look to doctors for guidance. Newborn babies have a higher risk of death than any age group below 65. Your health practices will influence your child before birth and continue to do so throughout his life.

Just as you check your child's temperature, as well as your own, you can learn to count the pulse, know the signs of obstructed breathing, check ears (children's are prone to infection), and learn to handle minor illnesses and injuries on your own. But when in doubt, by all means call your doctor.

Insist on a good relationship with your physician. If you avoid seeing your doctor because you feel powerless, mistrustful or can't communicate effectively, think about finding a new one.

But also be aware of your doctor's limitations. Expect to spend time in the waiting room. A conscientious physician must spend extra time with more serious cases and handle emergencies as they arise.

Some physicians worry that patients who diagnose their own symptoms might ignore of neglect symptoms that indicate the need for medical attention. They are concerned that patients will become overconficent about their own medical capabilities.

Dr. Timothy Rumsey, a member of one major hospital's disagrees. "Most people diagnose themselves anyway. The purpose of the self-care movement is to help them make a more informed decision. We are promoting self-care in a responsible sense."

Established patients no longer call in to say "I'm sick all over. I want to come in," said Mathiowetz. "Instead they report their symptoms, the complications, when the problem started and what they might have done about it. They are a better help to themselves and their physicians."

The idea of self-care is not new. In ancient Greece, a citizen who could not afford a doctor went to an appointed place in the market square where any citizen who could help was legally required to do so or risk losing his property. Thomas Jefferson developed a medical self-care course required for all freshmen when he was president of the University of Virginia.

"We're doing nothing earthshaking here. We're not excited about labels like 'wellness' and 'holistic medicine' that tend to be overused," said Rumsey. "Any good physician will look at the whole person and practice the principles of patient responsibility, educating patients in both positive and negative aspects of health care."

The rest, it seems, is up to the individual.

NWRDC Accepts Grant Proposals For Elderly

Northwest regional development commission's aging program is currently accepting grant proposals for the establishment of Home Delivered Meals Program under Title III-C-2 of the Older Americans Act.

In addition, proposals are being accepted for the establishment of social services for elderly persons from units of government of non-profit corporations in Region I in the following categories: access (transportation, outreach, information and referral); in home services (homemaking, home-health aide, friendly visiting, telephone reassurance, chore-home maintenance); legal services.

Grants are for continuation and new and expanded services. Applications will be accepted until Sep. 1, 1980, and reviewed initially Sept. 10, 1980, by the aging advisory committee. Final review will be conducteed by the Commission October 28, and funding will begin Jan. 1, 1981. Contact Michael Moore, 281-1396 for further information.

NWRDC also voted to fund grants in three other areas of the aging program. Senior meals and activity program grant for congregate dining services was awarded to Tri-Valley Opportunity Council with Linda Rethemeier as director of that program. This grant was in two parts: a three-month proposal for $54,629 to cover the period from October 1, 1980 to December 31, 1980, and a 12 month plan for $159,870 to cover 1981. The total grant was $214,499.

The Valley Chore Service which provides assistance with housekeeping chores to some elderly making it possible to stay in their own homes longer, was funded for $34,410. Karen Theilman is the director of the program.

Three communities were awarded grants from the McKnight Foundation monies which are being distributed through the State of Minnesota. Badger received $5,858 to be used for kitchen equipment and storage room for the Senior Activity Center. Mentor was given $2,915 to be used for its Senior Center for handicapped accessibility and kitchen equipment. The Masonic Temple in East Grand Forks, which has been operating as a senior meal site for three years, was awarded $5,727 for similar renovation.

Six Towns Get Phone Refunds On Bad Service

Testimony from the residential utility unit of the Minnesota office of consumer services (OCS) has resulted in full refunds for residents of six rural communities for rate increases collected by Continental Telephone company of Minnesota.

Eldon Spencer, supervisor of the residential utility unit, said the Minnesota public service commission (PSC) ordered the refunds based on OCS evidence that telephone service received by residents of the six communities was insufficient to justify their having to pay any of the rate increase granted Continental.

"This is the first time the PSC considered bad service as a factor in whether customers should have to pay rate increases," Spencer said. "We're gratified that the PSC agreed with our testimony on that point."

Residents served by Continental in Angus, Bear River, Crane Lake, Greaney, Denham and Isabella should begin receiving refunds from Continental this month.

Following public hearings on the rate increase request in which OCS intervened, the PSC granted Continental a general rate increase on May 9, 1980. A supplemental PSC order disapproving the rate increases collected from residents of the six communities since June 28, 1979, was issued by the PSC in late June of this year.

Agassiz Health System Review Group To Meet

Project review committee of the Agassiz health systems agency will meet August 14 at the Westward Ho Motel in Grand Forks to review the following applications:

North Dakota Division of Maternal and Child Health — a continuation grant for improved child health to serve North Dakota Indian reservations. Project will provide prenatal services, childhood immunization clinics, nutrition education and family planning services. Fort Totten is the target area within Agassiz's service area. The funding request to the public health service is $149,700;

Agassiz Family Health Care (Crookston) rural health initiative grant to provide medical services to Erskine, Red Lake Falls and Mahnomen, all of which have been designated health manpower shortage areas. Request to the department of health and human services is for $226,520;

Certificate of need-1122 application by Sunset nursing home in Park Rapids to construct a 50 bed skilled nursing home. Proposed project cost is $1,172,000. Home currently holds a certificate of need for a 20-bed addition; this would be relinquished should the current project be approved.

Recommendations of the project review committee will be presented to the Agassiz board of directors for action at their August 21 meeting to be conducted at the Westward Ho in Grand Forks.

All Agassiz meetings are open to the public. People interested in these particular projects or in other aspects of health planning are invited to attend. Rep. Stangeland Attends Mail Service Meet Deterioration of Thief River Falls' mail service to and from Minneapolis was a topic discussed briefly with Congressman Arlan Stangeland in the council chambers of the city auditorium Thursday afternoon.

In attendance were Art Buringrud, postmaster in Thief River Falls; Dale Dillon, president of the chamber of commerce; Roger Reuter, president of First Northwestern state bank; Robert Wurst, city attorney; Jerry Wigness, city clerk; Charles Greentree, vice president of Northern state bank; Duane Bellefeuille, postaster at Fargo; and Rep. Stangeland and three of his staff members.

Discussion centered around the concern over two-day mail service to and from Minneapolis. Presently, Fargo serves as the distribution center for mail coming and going from Minneapolis.

"There appears to be something wrong when it takes two days for mail to get from Minneapolis — when there are flights going (to and from Minneapolis) every day," Wurst commented.

During a March 11 meet, the deterioration of mail service (noted since February) had been discussed by council members. At that time, letters had been received from Rep. Stangeland and Sen. Dave Durenberger concerning this. Major services provided now are special delivery items and priority mail only. It was noted at that time that the two-day service may be an attempt to eliminate air taxi service completely, according to Wurst. During the meeting, council members made a plea with the public to respond to the air taxi service in Thief River Falls. Further study of the service was indicated at a June 24 city council meeting.

Following Thursday's meeting, during which time it had been resolved that the service would have to remain at its present two-day level because of the distribution center at Fargo, Rep. Stangeland visited with people in the area during his office hours observed in the Pennington county courthouse from 3 to 5 p.m.

MSU Housing Office To Be Open Saturday

Moorhead state university's housing office will be open Saturdays in August to accommodate students who'll be looking for a place to live before classes start September 10.

Because of a steep rise in enrollments over the past five years, some students haven't been able to find on-campus housing, says MSU housing director Elliott Garb.

MSU can quarter over 2,300 students in its residence halls, but demand has been outstripping supply. This year will be the same, he said.

"Usually, applications for campus housing are nearly filled up by April, but we expect cancellations to open some vacancies during the summer," Garb said. "This year there's been very few cancellations and very few vacancies."

The housing office, located in Ballard hall, is open Mondays through Fridays from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Until school begins, the office will also open Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Students who live outside the region can stay at a residence hall room for $3 a day before school starts while looking for other housing arrangements. The housing office maintains a list of available off-campus rental units along with files on other students who are looking for roommates.

For more information about the housing situation at MSU, contact Garb at 236-2118.

Mini-Shift Is Move To Ease Nurse Shortage

University of Minnesota hospitals have launched a new program aimed at luring ex-nurses, specifically mothers with school-age children, back into the profession on a part-time basis.

By offering licensed nurses the opportunity to work four-hour mini-shifts, hospital administrators hope to tap a new market of health professionals — women who left the field to raise families — and ease the nursing shortage at University hospitals.

Barbara Tebbitt, director of nursing services, said there are currently 179 vacancies, or the equivalent of 86 full-time positions. Approximately 40 per cent of the nursing staff leaves every year.

Although nursing shortages have existed nationally since the 1920s, officials said it has only been in the past few years that University hospitals experienced a serious problem. Traditionally, the institution has been successful in attracting nurses, including many nursing school graduates, because of its competitive salaries and the opportunity it offers for clinical experience at a teaching hospital. Although University hospitals still offer those incentives, the demand for nurses has increased dramatically.

As part of its strategy to recruit and retain nurses, University hospitals recently upgraded the salary scale — a beginning nurse now earns $7.35 an hour — and initiated several "creative alternatives" such as flexible working hours.

Mini-shift is set up in four-hour blocks of time: 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., 5:30 to 9:30 p.m., or any four-hour period between 11 p.m. and 7 a.m. Nurses must work a minimum of eight hours every two weeks.

Mini-shift idea, believed to be the first program of its kind in the Twin Cities, was conceived by Jim Dahling, director of the hospitals' nursing service float pool, in collaboration with the nursing management team.

"The basic premise for establishing the mini-shift is twofold. First, we hope to attract and recruit a different type of nurse and second, to offer a unique opportunity for nuses in the community who are not practicing to return to their chosen profession and make more creative use of their time," Dahling said.

Nurses who participate in the mini-shift will be assigned duties scaled to their skill levels. In addition, an orientation program will be specifically designed to individual needs.

"Even for those who have been out of nursing for several years, we would be able to individualize a program," said Cheryl Streit, a staffing coordinator in the office of nurse recruiting.

Mini-shift nurses will be assigned to the University hospitals "float pool" rather than to a specific nursing station. Program is open to both RNs and LPNs.

"We think the program will be of particular interest to nonpracticing nurses who want to raise a family or go to school, and at the same time are looking for a way to work in their field," Streit said.

The 9 a.m. starting time for the morning mini-shift was selected in order to give mothers time to get their children off to school, she said.

SPECIAL MUSICAL NUMBERS by "Four Him," a male quartet from Newfolden, will be presented at an August 18 meeting of the Thief River Falls chapter of the Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship international at 7:30 p.m. in the Lincoln high school auditorium in Thief River Falls. Members include, left to right, Randy Lindstrom, Calvin Lindstrom, Rolland Roseland and Myles Hogberg. Not pictured are Rick Trontvet, pianist, and Kris Hanson, soundboard operator. Fellowship hour with coffee and cookies will be conducted one-half hour prior to the meeting. All interested are invited to attend, including both young people and adults.

MPCA Can Aid In Disposal Of Solid Waste

Solid waste springs eternal from every Minnesota household and business — three and a half pounds per person each day. The Minnesota pollution control agency (MPCA) can help citizens, businesses and local governments manage this relentless flow of refuse efficiently through its solid waste "technical assistance" program.

Until the early 1970's, most of the solid waste generated in Minnesota was simply burned in pest-ridden open dumps throughout the state. The MPCA and counties closed most of the 1,200 dumps and replaced many of them with sanitary landfills, which require the waste to be spread into layers and covered with soil daily. Landfills were thought to be a near-perfect solution to the state's solid waste problem.

Today, however, it has become clear that there is no perfect solution to the problem of waste disposal. Landfills require careful management in order to be cost effective and to prevent rodent infestation and groundwater contamination.

In addition, landfills in Minnesota essentially bury forever a million tons of reusable materials per year. These wasted resources take up space in sites which are rapidly filling to capacity. In many parts of the state, new landfills are difficult to site because of local opposition.

To help Minnesotans cope with increasingly challenging solid waste planning, the MPCA's solid waste division has developed a technical assistance program. The agency offers planning assistance, cost estimates and general information on equipment, regulations and alternatives. These alternatives, such as waste-to-energy and recycling programs, can lead to the recovery of valuable resources and can ease the space squeeze on existing landfills.

The MPCA's technical assistance program is designed to provide services for counties, cities, businesses, civic groups and individuals. Technical assistance means that the MPCA can help a county or municipality find the best waste management program for its specific needs.

For example, in some areas, a landfill is simply too expensive to operate, and a transfer station system, where waste is collected in bulk and transferred to another site, can answer the waste disposal needs of the particular area more economically. Often one waste management program can be effectively supplemented by another, such as leaf-composting, which reduces the volume of buried waste and creates an excellent soil conditioner.

"With three million tons of waste generated per year, Minnesota's solid waste problem is a complex one which requires careful planning and management", said MPCA director Terry Hoffman. "The MPCA's technical assistance program is one way of making the problem a little easier to handle.".

For more information on the MPCA's technical assistance program, contact Curt Sparks, Solid Waste Division, Minnesota Pollution Control Agency, 1935 West County Road B2, Roseville, MN 55113, or call 612-297-2700.

Dental Health

A BETTER WAY TO CLEAN TEETH

Dental plaque is a sticky, invisible film that contains bacteria and is the major cause of tooth decay and periodontal (gum) disease. The trouble with removing plaque from teeth is that you can't see it easily with the naked eye. But there is a way to make the "invisible" show up. Chew a disclosing tablet before brushing your teeth and it will leave a red stain where the plaque is on your teeth. Remove all the red stain and you'll remove the plaque. Here's a five step procedure to use before going to bed each night if you want healthy teeth.

1. Make the plaque visible by chewing a disclosing tablet.
2. Brush your teeth, using a dry, soft-bristle brush without toothpaste. Place the bristles at a 45 degree angle pointing toward the gum. Move the brush back and forth with short strokes. Clean chewing surfaces with short, scrubbing strokes.
3. Use unwaxed dental floss to clean between the teeth and under the gum edges.
4. Rinse and examine the teeth for any remaining red areas.
5. Brush again using toothpaste, concentrating on the areas that still contain plaque. For best results, don't eat again before going to bed.

Going around in circles used to be fun. Now it has become the identifying mark of human bewilderment. For millions of people life seems a whirling confusion that takes them nowhere. . .

All religions have one thing in common: they stress the belief that life has purpose which man needs to seek, discover and fulfil. In short, religion is the cure for going around in circles.

Christianity inspires people to seek life's purpose in the love and will of God. When we join with others in the worship and work of our churches we discover goals for living and the spiritual strength to reach them.

When the merry-go-round has ceased to be merry it's time to get off: Yes, and time to get on with purposeful Christian living.

Heart And Stroke Study To Affect 3 Minnesota Towns

by Ralph Heussner
"U" M News Service

Residents of three Minnesota communities will learn about how diet, smoking and exercise affect their health as part of a wide-ranging University of Minnesota-directed research project on the prevention of heart attack and strokes.

A $10.7 million grant from the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute has been awarded to the university for the project, described as one of the most comprehensive prevention efforts ever undertaken in the United States where heart disease is the number one cause of adult deaths. First-year budget for the study is $1.3 million.

According to Dr. Henry Blackburn, principal investigator for the project and director of the University's laboratory of physiological hygiene in the school of public health, the University will work with a medium-sized town, a city, and a large suburban metropolitan area to "help them develop programs that encourage healthier living patterns and reduce risk factors for heart attacks."

"The project involves a community organizing itself to approach its own health problems just as it might effectively approach other community problems such as water supply," Blackburn said.

Mankato, a southern Minnesota city with a population of 30,000, has been selected as one of the participating communities. The other two will be announced when community response and interest have been determined, Dr. Russell Luepker, co-principal investigator and project director, said.

The nine-year program will be coordinated by the University's school of public health. Also participating are the school of journalism and mass communication, the college of agriculture, the school of social work, and programs in nutrition and health education in the school of public health.

Project will involve the local media, public schools, health care professionals and institutions, agricultural extension agencies, and other groups in each participating community, project officials said.

Although the university will help develop plans and provide support services, each community will organize and operate its own prevention and health promotion effort, Blackburn said. Each community will assemble an advisory committee of people to oversee the prevention program. There will be close collaboration between community leaders, educators, physicians and University personnel.

"This is a most significant opportunity for the state and university to work together on a major issue of public health," Blackburn said. "It recognizes a new direction in medicine toward the primary prevention of disease and the promotion of health."

Residents of Mankato and the other two communities will be involved in education on how smoking, high blood pressure, nutrition and physical activity affect their health and on how they can become skilled in healthy changes.

Although the primary research focus is the prevention of heart disease, Blackburn said the program "should affect most of the major chronic diseases of adults in Minnesota" as well.

The journalism school will work with each community's advisory committee to coordinate "an on-going media program involving local newspapers, radio and television," said F. Gerald Kline, director of the school of journalism and mass communication and a co-investigator. "We will help write and produce such things as audio spots, commercials, public service announcements, and one-hour specials, with a lot of local involvement." Pamphlets and brochures containing health education information will also be made available to the residents.

The blood pressure, blood cholesterol, smoking, and activity levels of citizens in each community will be monitored to determine the effect of the leahth campaign. Disease trends in local hospitals will be monitored as well.

The cities in the study will be compared with other cities which do not have concerted public health prevention programs. By comparing data from other communities with trends in heart disease and morbidity in these areas, the study will be able to determine if the project "is improving the health of these communities," Luepker said.

School of social work will help town leaders and local organizations develop community action programs. For instance, Kline said, a local chamber of commerce might want to set up an exercise program for people who work downtown. The college of agriculture will work with local county extension agents in developing educational programs.

Project officials emphasize this will be a copoperative effort between the university and the communities involved.

"We hope that each community involved will bring together all its own resources and personality around this effort to prevent heart attack and stroke and promote the health of its citizens," Blackburn said.

ENERGY UPDATE

Dr. Arno Penzias, 1978 Nobel Laureate in Physics.

What do Edward Albee, Saul Bellow, Eugene McCarthy, Dorothea Zack Hanle, Albert Shanker, and Maury Allen have in common? They are among the charter members of Citizens for Safe Nuclear Energy, an ad hoc group of leaders in the arts, business, civic groups, education, labor and sports.

According to Cleo Mitchell Paturis, executive director for the group, it was formed "to add a reasonable voice to the public dialogue on energy."

Dr. Arno Penzias, 1978 Noble Laureate in Physics, recently addressed the group at New York City's Lotus Club. Penzias observed that "With conservation and all the things we ought to be doing, we still have to depend on our present sources of energy. And nuclear power is one of these sources."

These people are aware not only of the need for nuclear energy, but the need to help a misinformed public understand why so many advocate nuclear power.

Dr. Margaret Maxey, a former associate professor of bioethics at the University of Detroit, noted that curtailing any major domestic energy source would adversely affect the nation's economic well-being, particularly among women and minorities.

Dr. Harold Rossi, Director of Columbia University's Radiological Research Laboratory, spoke on low-level radiation, emphasizing its natural existence in our world and discussing our already extensive knowledge of its effects.

Another speaker cited the admirable safety record of nuclear energy and added that the risks of nuclear compare favorably with those of other energy sources.

Said Ms. Paturis: "Members of the group appreciate the singing of Linda Ronstadt and Pete Seeger, but we're more interested in what Nobel Laureates and other experts have to say about nuclear energy."

Fare Revenue Decrease May Cut Bus Route

A steady decrease in fare revenue may put the state's first intercity bus route designed primarily for college students out of business, according to Transit Administration Assistant Director Don Hubert, Minnesota Department of Transportation (Mn-DOT).

Mn-DOT established the 104-mile, round-trip schedule from Fergus Falls to Moorhead last December with Greyhound bus lines after 300 college students from Fergus Falls, Rothsay and Barnesville petitioned the state for the service.

The one-year demonstration project is funded with $150,000 under a Mn-DOT program to reduce the number of single occupant vehicles on the road by creating local public transit alternatives. The project is one of 39 regular route bus services founded by Mn-DOT throughout the state.

If a need for the service is demonstrated during the project's first year, Mn-DOT will continue a two-thirds subsidy of the deficit. Communities served by the bus line provide the remaining one-third, said Hubert. Fare income is important to reducing the deficit and evaluating the overall success of the effort, he said.

That is why Mn-DOT is concerned about the future of the project. Although ridership has increased from 878 in January to 1,343 in April, fare revenue has declined from $3.98 per passenger to $1.85 during the same period of time.

Hubert said the ridership figures indicate a trend toward the one-way student fares rather than round-trip. A drop in the number of senior citizen and regular adult passengers may also contribute to the decrease, he said.

Full fare between Fergus Falls and Moorhead for adults is $7.90 for a round trip and $3.98 for senior citizens. Students pay $2.50 per round trip and half of that for a one-way ticket.

"The fare structure offers an economical alternative even to the full-fare passenger whose trip would cost almost $20 based on 19 cents per mile for a three-year-old car," Hubert pointed out.

Besides a better mix of adult and student riders, a total of 1,600 passengers a month is needed by the end of the project's first year in order to be continued, he said.

"We're looking to the communities to support this service both through ridership and partial funding of the deficit if the route is continued in 1981," he said.

"We're doing what we can to offer a flexible, comfortable and energy-saving service. All we can do now is ask those persons who petitioned for the service to use it," Hubert concluded.

Savings Bonds Help Spenders Become Savers

What is the difference between saving and not saving? Is it income, will power or something else? These are important questions, because everyone needs to have some money in reserve to guard against the unexpected.

With the payroll savings plan for Series EE savings bonds, income is no obstacle to saving, because the payroll savings plan lets you save as much or as little as you like — as low as $3.75 in most cases — from your regular paycheck. Will power is no problem either, since only a one-time decision to save is necessary. The rest is automatic.

More than 40,000 companies throughout the nation offer payroll savings. The millions of people who use it to save receive U.S. savings bonds regularly — the safest, most dependable security available. Bonds are guaranteed by the full faith and credit of the United States, receive a fair rate of return, and have been granted a number of tax advantages that can increase the overall yield.

What can be done with savings bonds? Anything the owner wants, from vacation to retirement, can be paid for with bonds. They can be redeemed anytime after a six-month holding period at thousands of banks and savings and loans. And should bonds ever be lost or stolen, the treasury department will replace them without charge.

We all know the importance of saving. Joining the payroll savings plan where you work can make it happen for you. That's the savings bonds difference.

Do it yourself and save!

U.S. Air Force Is Expanding Pilot Training

U.S. Air Force is testing elements of the new Rapid Deployment Force against potential adversaries. In an exercise called Red Flag, American pilots are being pitted against a special force trained in Soviet air battle tactics.

In the deserts around Las Vegas jet fighter pilots receive what Tactical Air Commander W. L. Creech calls "the best training our crews get." According to General Creech the Soviets are quantitatively superior to the U.S. United States air force is adjusting to this gap by expanding its pilot training.

College graduates with a variety of degrees are finding themselves eligible to fly, and fly they do. College trained men and women with an aptitude to fly don't necessarily need to be engineers. Some of the best have degrees in the social sciences. It's through exercises like Red Flag that aircrews increase their capability and proficiency.

According to General Creech "Our adversaries should take very, very careful count of the U.S. forces and particularly the Rapid Deployment Force."

Historians Study Joseph Henry Role

by Madeleine Jacobs
Smithsonian News Service

Any man who has ever longed for fame might wish to have a daughter in the mold of Mary Anna Henry, who spent her spinsterhood as a champion of her father's place in history.

Her father was no less a figure than Joseph Henry, the first great American scientist after Benjamin Franklin, the first secretary of the Smithsonian Institution and a preeminent member of the American scientific community during most of the 19th century.

Working in the 1880s and 1890s, she gathered together many of Henry's personal papers, scientific diaries and correspondence and set out to write his biography. This, she hoped, would establish once and for all that it was her father, not the British scientist Michael Faraday, who discovered the important principle of electrical induction — the process of converting magnetism into electricity.

Mary Henry zealously recopied many of her father's documents; in the process, she corrected his spelling and grammar and sometimes destroyed the originals. She also was fond of cutting snippets of text from original documents and drawings from his notebooks, which she laboriously pasted onto a master manuscript.

Mary Henry never completed her labor of love, but 90 years later a small group of researchers at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., are trying to rescue Joseph Henry from relative obscurity.

The rescue is in the form of a comprehensive 15-volume project, "The Papers of Joseph Henry," and in this effort, the historians are not relying on acts of filial devotion to tell Joseph Henry's story.

Rather, under the direction of Dr. Nathan Reingold, an internationally known historian of science and technology, the Smithsonian group has tracked down nearly 100,000 documents by Henry and his contemporaries.

Joseph Henry is the only scientist on a list of distinguished Americans whose papers are being published under the auspices of the national historical publications and records commission. The goal of these projects is to preserve and recapture, through the words and documents of the past, many aspects of America's cultural, social and political heritage.

Included on this list are Washington, Jefferson and Franklin (chosen as a statesman, not as a scientist). Unlike these men, Henry has not been the subject of many books or research, although he could well be considered "an American success story," Reingold says.

Henry was born into a poor family in 1797 in Albany, N.Y. His early education was sparse, although records show that he studied at the Albany academy between 1819 and 1822, taking some time off to earn money. Because of his lack of formal schooling, Henry always considered himself "principally self-educated."

By the time he was 30, he had been an apprentice to a silversmith and a watchmaker, a schoolteacher, a chemical assistant, a surveyor on a state road project and a professor of mathematics and natural philosophy at Albany Academy.

In 1832 he became a professor at the College of New Jersey (now Princeton university) where he was an outstanding teacher of physical sciences and a pioneer in the field of electrical physics. In 1846, at the age of 49, Henry was selected as the first "secretary," or chief executive, of the newly founded Smithsonian institution. Henry, his wife, son and three daughters moved to Washington, then a provincial village of marshland and mosquitoes, where they lived in an apartment in the first Smithsonian building until his death in 1878.

As secretary of the Smithsonian, Henry spurred the development of many branches of science throughout the nation by enlisting the government's support of research. Under his direction, the Smithsonian became a leading basic research organization. Indirectly, by shifting much of the Smithsonian's book collection across town, Henry also was a founder of the Library of Congress.

"Henry was above all an astute observer of his times and his mail makes interesting reading," Reingold says. "The Joseph Henry papers re-create not only the great events and ideas of the times but also the subtle texture of the past."

To re-create the past so vividly requires diligent sleuthing and patience. When Reingold and his colleagues began to collect Henry's papers in 1967, they had Mary Henry's legacy and the papers in the Smithsonian archives. "Mary Henry's collection was not really very useful, although in some ways we are grateful to her," Reingold says. "I would have preferred that the documents be left unaltered, but she kept many papers that might otherwise have been lost and she gathered together a lot of scattered documents."

On the other hand, the archives was a particularly rich treasury of Henry-related papers, inasmuch as Henry had been secretary for 31 years, longer than any of his seven successors. Even with this large number of documents, it was clear to Reingold that many more were needed to make the collection complete. The search for additional papers eventually led to a worldwide hunt, resulting in manuscripts from 15 countries and 250 institutions. Not all of this will make it into print, but these fresh new sources of information will be available on microfilm and accessible to scholars through a computerized index.

To a non-historian, 15 volumes of documents might seem formidable reading. But the Joseph Henry historians have not been content merely to transcribe and publish the manuscripts. They have indentified individuals mentioned in the documents, putting them into a historical context and giving perspective to events.

Identifying the people alone is a major undertaking. "There were so many names," Reingold recalls, "that in the beginning we ran around in circles. By using local historical society records, old city directories and local newspapers and other sources, we were able to identify most of the individuals."

An individual who appeared several times in Henry's early correspondence, one Jacob Trumpbour, was finally tracked down, literally to his grave, through a local book, "Old Tombstones of Ulster County, New York".

Also in the papers are Henry's original scientific notebooks and the diary of his trip to Europe in 1837, where he met rival Michael Faraday — Henry admired him greatly — and many other famous scientists of the time.

These enable historians and scientists to follow firsthand the train of discoveries that firmly established Henry as a leading electrical physicist of his generation. As a historical footnote, although Faraday was given credit for discovering electrical induction because he was the first to publish his results, Henry's documents reveal that he had observed the phenomenon virtually simultaneously.

Finally, what emerges from all the Henry papers is the portrait of a very human character — a man who adored his wife and wrote her long affectionate letters, a concerned father who was preoccupied with the activities of his four children and daily domestic life in Jacksonian America and a devoted friend.

Perhaps Henry's own words will ultimately establish his proper role in history. Certainly some of his philosophical observations on the value of science show him as a man far ahead of his time, thoughts which guided him in establishing the Smithsonian as a place where basic research could be pursued for the "increase and diffusion of knowledge . . ."

As Henry once told his colleagues after citing the many cases where seemingly pure science had benefited mankind, "These instances should teach us to dispise no persuit in science because its utility cannot be immediately perceived . . . Most discoveries are unproductive until the progress of science in after years directs their application to purposes of practical utility."

Household Hints

By Samantha of Lestoil Homemakers Service

Decorating on a budget? Use paint in zingy, not timid, colors instead of expensive wallpaper. (For the look of wallpaper, add designs with easy-to-use stencils.) Or try tile-patterned stick-on paper instead of high-priced ceramic tile. Shop industrial sources instead of fancy stores for metal shelving, easy-care industrial carpeting, good-looking light fixtures.

Do-it-yourself decorating is easier with Lestoil, the incredible household cleaner. Use full-strength Lestoil to wipe up fresh paint spills without a trace. To rejuvenate paint brushes, soak overnight in a solution of a half cup Lestoil to a pint of water. To keep your new surroundings sparkling, add a quarter cup of Lestoil to a gallon of warm water and wipe painted walls, cabinets, appliances.

Problem walls? Staple on patterned sheets, and use more sheets for coordinated draperies, tablecloths, throw pillows. Cleaning even stubborn fabric stains is a snap with Lestoil, the powerful laundry pre-spotter. It dissolves "impossible" stains, like grease on tablecloths, so you get maximum wear from all your beautiful washables.

DOT Conducts Recycling Test For Concrete

Work is now underway near Worthington on the first large-scale concrete recycling project of its kind in the United States by the Minnesota department of transportation's (Mn-DOT) Mankato district.

Lloyd Nelson, district engineer at Mankato, said the experimental project is the first to incorporate the use of existing concrete pavement in new paving material for a major project.

The project comprises repaving TH 59 from Worthington to Fulda, a 16-mile length of highway.

Nelson said the project is expected to realize immediate benefits in materials and fuel use savings and to provide long-term cost savings.

"Based on Mn-DOT pavement selection analysis," Nelson said, "it is estimated the long-term economics of this recycling project when compared with other alternatives such as virgin aggregate, bituminous overlay or recycled bituminous will justify the concept." Cost for the project is $5.1 million.

The project will also serve as a research vehicle to test the feasibility of concrete recycling, Nelson said.

Contractors, engineers and other officials from cities and counties in Minnesota and officials from the 50 state departments of transportation are being invited to a project demonstration June 10 at Worthington.

Nelson said the project is being undertaken because the highway is experiencing extensive problems with "D-cracking" — the term used to describe deterioration of highway pavement caused by poor quality limestone aggregate used in construction.

Poor quality aggregate was used, Nelson said, because high quality limestone rock preferred for highway construction is not found in southwestern Minnesota.

Nelson said it is now more economically feasible to recycle the existing pavement material than to haul the needed quantities of high quality aggregate to the area.

The highway was last repaved in 1955.

Work on the first stages of the project began May 12. Initial stages include removing the existing pavement and having it crushed at a central crushing operation set up by the contractor.

The crusing process greatly reduces the size of the aggregate particles, increasing the amount of surface area available to bond with the Portland cement mix and thereby increasing the pavement's strength and resistance to Minnesota's extreme freeze-thaw cycles.

The paving stage of the project will begin in August and is expected to be completed in November. Contractor for the project is Arcon Construction of Mora.

Steve Oakey, district materials engineer at Mankato, said research aspects of the project will focus on equipment use, fuel consumption, problems which develop during the project and a cost analysis of the use of recycled aggregate compared with virgin aggregate.

The June 10 demonstration will include visits to the pavement removal and crushing sites and a series of talks to be held in Worthington to explain the process for visiting contractors and officials.

The inspection program is sponsored by the federal highway administration, Concrete Pavement association, Portland Cement association and the project's contractor in cooperation with Mn-DOT.

Additional information and registration forms for the June 10 demonstration are available from Emerson Yess, Mankato District Office, 501 S. Victory Drive, Mankato, MN 56001 or by calling (507) 389-6351. Registration should be made by June 1.

Food Dried At Home Loses Some Nutrients

Food drying is one of the oldest food preservation methods, but that doesn't mean that home food drying is necessarily for you, say two extension specialists at the University of Minnesota.

Isabel Wolf, extension foods and nutrition specialist, and Wanda Olson, extension household equipment specialist, note a resurgence of interest in home food drying. Counter top dehydrators and convection ovens are now available to make the job easier at home, but Mrs. Wolf still sees drying as the least acceptable home preservation method.

"One of the biggest problems in drying food at home is determining when it is sufficiently dry and then storing it so it doesn't pick up moisture from the air," Mrs. Wolf says.

Nutritionally, home dried food also lags behind. "There has been very little research done on the nutritional quality of home dried food," Mrs. Wolf says. "What research has been published shows that drying can result in significant vitamin losses, particularly if vegetables are not blanched or fruits are not treated with antioxidants."

Properly pretreated frozen foods have the highest nutritional value of home preserved foods, she says. Canned foods suffer greater nutrient loss than frozen foods, and dried foods lose even more. Nutrient loss is greatest when home dried foods are stored in warm places, in the presence of moisture or in direct light, she adds.

Although she doesn't advise home food drying for general home food preservation purposes, it can be useful for short-term preservation for campers, hikers or others who need light-weight, non-perishable food.

Mrs. Wolf says some home food drying enthusiasts make claims that dried foods are good almost indefinitely. This is false, she says. Maximum storage time for dried food is six months at room temperature, and some foods should be used within one or two months. Lower storage temperatures prolong the shelf life of home dried foods. To keep home dried items for as long as a year, for example, they should be well sealed and then stored in the freezer, she suggests.

In addition to preserving food for only a short time, the home food drying process is lengthy. Mrs. Wolf and Mrs. Olson report that preliminary research done at the University of Minnesota shows that it takes up to three hours to dry a pound of food (fresh weight). A large, fully loaded dehydrater could take as long as 20 hours to dry its contents.

Mrs. Wolf cautions, "If you do decide to dry foods at home, avoid days with high relative humidity. Under damp conditions, it is nearly impossible to get foods sufficiently dry."

UNSUNG HEROES

A Spanish-speaking American is helping bring future communication into the homes of millions, most of whom have never even heard his name.

The Bell System is in the lead in bringing lightwave transmission to the American public and Manuel R. Santana is helping to assure that lead.

Lightguides are hair-thin glass fibers which use light instead of electricity to transmit information. Lightguide cables can carry many thousands more telephone conversations than comparably sized copper cable. But the hair-thin glass fibers need to be protected. And that is where Mr. Santana came in.

After leaving Cuba in 1962, Santana completed his engineering studies and in 1970 became an engineer at Bell Telephone Laboratories — the research and development arm of the Bell System. One of his early assignments was to develop a rugged protective sheath to enclose the glass fibers.

"What we arrived at was a sheath of polyethylene and steel that protects the fibers at temperatures as high as 170°F and as low as -40°F," explains Santana, who now supervises The Lightguide Cable Group at Bell Labs Atlanta facility.

"Basically, we were asked to find a way to make an idea that functioned in the laboratory viable in the real world. I believe that we have achieved it," declares Santana.

The cable Santana helped design helped bring all America video signals from remote locations at the 1980 Winter Olympics at Lake Placid, N.Y. Other areas where the Bell System has installed lightguide technology are Chicago and Connecticut. Western Electric is producing the lightguide cable for a 611-mile-long installation, announced this year by AT&T, between Washington, D.C. and Boston. A major installation will be completed in Atlanta later this year.

Marijuana Problem Hampers Education

by Donald C. [illegible]
President
MN Education Ass'n

Same song, second verse — ain't no better, but a whole lot worse.

That ditty is appropriate not only for campfire songs, it's appropriate to tie together my continuing efforts to inform the public of the threat that marijuana poses for public schools.

At the risk of sounding like a broken record, the marijuana situation is a problem with which we educators must deal.

And, as the man in the car care ad says: "You pay me now or pay me later." Either we prevent — or pay a bigger price, after the fact.

The statistics are in. Marijuana is not harmless.

Look at a major article by Peggy Mann in the current issue of The Saturday Evening Post, which says in part:

The United States is the most pervasive drug-abusing nation in history and marijuana is our most pervasive illegal drug of abuse. Says Congressman Lester Wolff (D-MY), chairman of (this) committee): "Our young people are the first in all history to have used marijuana on a mass scale. Neither this nation — nor any other nation — have ever before faced a problem that is so insidious and so dangerous." (House or Representatives select committee on narcotics abuse and control.)

Marijuana accounted for the second largest number of admissions to our federally funded drug treatment facilities, and 33 per cent of these had started their pot use before age 14. (The federal government's drug abuse network)

In 1979, one out of 10 high school seniors smoked pot daily, or almost daily — an 80 per cent increase since 1975. Of these, daily users averaged 3½ joints (marijuana cigarettes) a day; 13 per cent smokes more than seven joints daily.

Of the 50 per cent of seniors who smoked pot at all during 1979, 37 per cent said they "usually stay high seven hours or more." (add to this the fact that marijuana is up to ten times more potent than that smoked a decade ago.)

Forty-nine per cent of all seniors who used pot "during the past 12 months" also used one or more additional illegal drugs during that period (The high school senior survey, the only national drug abuse survey taken annually.)

Add to all of this the fact that, according to Dr. Nicholas Pace, one of the founding directors of the American council on marijuana and other psychoactive drugs, it takes three days to a week for the body to rid itself of half the dangerous chemicals in marijuana. It could take up to 30 days to get rid of all of it.

The problems of motivating students are difficult enough without having to cope with the debilitating effects of regular use of mind-altering drugs.

So what? So I think now is the time for us to act. Our schools are a critical part of the environment, so they should be one of the institutions we look to for help.

To prevent, we need to help kids make the right decisions. Give them confidence in themselves. Confidence to deal with peer pressures. Confidence to deal with the freedoms we have. Confidence to live.

How?

Lower class sizes. Add more curriculum. Increase extracurricular activities. Pay teachers more. Establish and expand school health programs.

In short, roll up our sleeves and do a better job.

And to those who say we can't afford it: we are guilty of situation ethics in our government spending. Most politicians agree that we need to spend billions more on the military, because "the Russians are coming". . . again.

However, with drugs a national disaster, we say by our actions that whoever is in charge of rearing our children should just work a little harder, "we need a little more research." Reminds me of the tobacco companies still telling us that research doesn't prove cigarettes cause cancer.

Same song, third verse — ain't no better, still getting worse.

Apple Trees Reclassified For Hardiness

Apple varieties suitable for Minnesota's climate have been determined by the Minnesota state horticultural society's fruit review committee in a survey of private and commercial fruit growers in Minnesota. Survey measured the effects on fruit trees of the "test" winters (so named because of their severity) of 1977-78 and 1978-79.

Committee received reports on over 93,000 fruit trees, 28,000 of which were either killed or severely damaged during the test winters. These dead or damaged trees had previously been recommended as hardy in the areas of the state where they'd been planted.

Reviewing the apple tree results, the committee determined three classifications of hardiness: Hardy — less than 15 per cent mortality; Marginally Hardy — 15 to 50 per cent mortality; and Tender — over 50 per cent mortality. Classifications of popular Minnesota varieties are as follows:

Hardy — Oriole, Beacon, Red Baron, Lakeland, Haralson, Redwell, Paula Red and Minjon;

Marginally Hardy — Wealthy, McIntosh, Cortland, Prairie Spy, Connell Red, Fireside and Viking;

Tender — Spartan, N. W. Greening, Honeygold, Red Delicious, Golden Delicious and Regent.

Those people who wish to plant tender or marginally hardy apple trees should weigh the risks of winter kill (i.e., the likelihood of having to replant these varieties every 10 to 15 years) against the benefits of high-quality fresh apples.

People who wish to have apple trees both for fruit and shade or ornamentation should consider planting only varieties from the hardy category. Those with an orchard of many trees, where the primary benefit is fresh fruit, may well consider the problems and expense of replanting to be secondary in importance to the availability of fruit of a specific marginal or tender variety.

Minnesota state horticultural society was founded in 1866 and is a non-profit, semi-state educational corporation dedicated to advancing the art and science of horticulture in Minnesota. It provides answers to general gardening questions to those who call (612) 373-1199.

FACTUAL NEWS REPORTING EFFECTIVE ADVERTISING

They May Be A Blessing

Following editorial is from the Milbank (S.D.) Herald Advance:

The dilemma of deciding whether or not we as individuals approve of our new status as hosts for more than 100,000 Cubans — be they called "refugees" or some other name — is a cruel one.

As children we were taught to revere the words on the base of the Statue of Liberty: "Give us your tired, your hungry and your poor . . ." As Christians we have been taught to love one another and to believe that "whatsoever you do unto the least, you do also unto Me."

We feel guilty if we give in to our true sentiments. These include fear — fear that the Cubans will take jobs the unemployed citizens should rightfully claim, fear that the welfare benefits for which the Cubans qualify will put our economically troubled nation into even worse condition, fear that the Cubans are, as described in the news, undesirables. They may be criminals or worse.

There may, however, be a silver lining in the cloud of our anxieties.

These Cubans who desire to leave their homeland and settle in a new land may be more desirable as citizens than some of us have become. There's no denying that we (present company excepted, of course), have become lazy, complacent, disloyal to country, greedy and somewhat amoral.

The other day we were discussing the possibility of the national re-institution of the draft with a friend a few years our junior. She, like many of her contemporaries, is violently opposed to a draft and flatly stated, "I could never kill."

For me, this posed an interesting philosophical question. "For what would any of us be roused to homocidal behavior?"

Mother? Father? Husband? Wife? Son? Daughter? Country? Family Jewels? Home? Unpolluted air? The list could go on.

Would you kill? And, if so, for what?

In our opinion, if one's country is not worth defending with one's life, the country's system is one that should be changed. This is the lesson of the Cubans. They have risked their lives to come to America. They want to live here.

Many of our young people who own that highly prized American citizenship say they would not defend their country. Perhaps the incipient new Cuban citizens will be just the injection we need to regain some of our apparently lost regard for what it is to be an American.

In The Wake Of A Fire

Following editorial is from the Ely Echo and appeared several weeks ago:

It took 170 men, a lot of equipment and some rain to get the McDougall lake fire under control last week. Crews are still observing the area this week, watching for hot spots where there is still fire underground which could break out again. As Norman Kainz points out in his column this week, the cost of clearing that land of some old dead balsam, spruce and slash is going to be pretty high. Especially since the fire didn't exactly stay inside the boundaries set up.

The forest service cannot be faulted for becoming a trifle paranoid over management of the forest. There are dozens of politically-oriented organizations across the U.S. which have the concept that "fire is natural" in managing trees and an axe, chain saw, skidder, bulldozer is "unnatural". . . therefore, fire is "good." Few, if any, of the members of these organizations are around when a fire takes off. . . nor do they seem over-concerned about how many hundreds of acres of trees get burned up accidentially or what the cost is. Somewhere, somebody must make a cost comparison of what the taxpayer is getting for his buck. Certainly the taxpayer did not come out ahead over on the Huron national forest when a few acres were being "control burned" to provide habitat for the Kirkland's warbler, a fire that eventually cleared out 70,000 acres of timber and buildings, injured some firefighters and killed one man. All of this must be added in when cost figures are used to compare various types of woodland management.

The forest service is under pressure to burn and under pressure not to burn. As long as the taxpayer doesn't have any idea what the per-acre costs are, no one can make an intelligent assessment of what the program involves. Unfortunately, there is a lot of dead balsam and spruce around the Superior national forest, inside and outside the BWCA. Some of that is going to burn. Maybe all of it. Sooner or later, a lightning strike or a campfire or something is going to set it off. The problem is that conditions are not always the best when the fire starts. With the right wind, a crown fire could go right across the whole Superior-Quetico area and on up to Dryden, Ontario, or someplace. . . or it could go south to Lake Superior.

One thing is certain. Whenever a fire does get away, like the Little Indian Sioux, the McDougall lake fire or the one on the Huron, the advocates of fire management of forests become a little quieter. . . at least for a time.

Doing It Yourself Is Back In Style

Following editorial is from the Long Prairie Leader:

Neither part-time occupation ever completely went out of style in rural areas, but the last few years have seen a great surge of interest in two activities that had threatened to die out in urbanized America: gardening and woodcutting.

Driving through the Minnesota countryside, it immediately becomes apparent that an ever growing number of families are taking into their own hands some of the most basic needs; gardens and woodpiles are everywhere. Just a few years ago most city children, even those in the smaller "outstate" cities, thought zucchini was a Mafia godfather and peas were meant to be mush out of a can. Now more and more of them are learning the unequaled excellence of a fresh carrot or asparagus spear, and just as importantly, getting experience in the laws of cause and effect. You plant the seed, it grows, you eat. If you forget to weed, you don't eat. It seems now that every tiny backyard space has erupted in bush beans and strawberries and Americans are learning again the wisdom of those "victory gardens" of 30 years ago.

Woodpiles, too, have become a common sight in rural and suburban America. In St. Cloud recently, a group of neighbors complained to the city council, asking that the councilors ban a large woodpile in a nearby yard. They argued that the firewood, although stacked neatly, was an eyesore and a nuisance. The city council, however, not only allowed the firewood to remain, but commended the owner for his foresight, adding that many St. Cloud residents might look longingly at that same woodpile before too many years have passed.

It is no longer just the rundown farmer living on the edge of poverty who cuts his wood all summer or the farmwife with a green thumb who grows her own fruits and vegetables. The business of gardening and woodcutting is in style again, and evidently growing fast and furiously.

Still Big Business

Marriage is still big business — or at least weddings are — in spite of fluctuations in the economy, shared living by unmarried couples and soaring divorce rates across the nation.

"Nation's Business" magazine reports that in 1979 weddings accounted for a total of $12.5 billion in retail sales in the United States. Included were $2.6 billion in furniture, $839 million in engagement rings, $765 million in major appliances, $568 million in tableware, $422 million in gowns and veils, $127 million in wedding rings and $83 million in luggage.

And that doesn't allow anything for tranquilizers for the mother of the bride and Alka-Seltzer for the father paying the bills.

Borrowed Nonsense:

The frustrated father was shopping in the supermarket while a little boy in the food cart was howling over some imagined wrong.

"Control yourself, Jimmy" the man said softly. "Calm down. . . this can't go on forever. . . just be patient, Jimmy. . . don't yell. . . stay cool, Jimmy. . ."

A woman shopper remarked, "I think it's wonderful how you try to control your Jimmy without losing your temper."

"Thank-you, ma'am," the shopper replied, "but I'm Jimmy."

Interesting Opinions:

Coming home after being laid off from his job, the husband announced, "Honey, you know all those things we wanted to do when we have the time? Well, now we've got the time."

Does Government Still Work?

It has been 30 years since Congress last posed that question and undertook a comprehensive review of the way government is structured.

Since then, government has grown — new programs have been added, agencies and departments have been created — without the benefit of a systematic overall play.

Every day, I receive evidence of a spreading public perception that the government no longer functions as it should There is a certain disenchantment with Washington that can almost be likened to a loss of faith. One need not be a student of political theory to understand that a government like ours, a representative democracy, depends on public faith in order to continue.

It is time for us to take a good, hard look at the way our government is structured. I have joined more than 100 congressmen in co-sponsoring a bill that would establish a Commission on More-Effective Government, modeled after the first Hoover Commission.

Our objective is really twofold: we hope that such a commission will improve the quality of government and at the same time restore public confidence in every level of government.

Periodically, we should review our system to determine how well it is meeting its obligations and responsibilities to the American people. With the intention of developing a blueprint for better government, the Commission's task will be simply to find out where government operates effectively and where it does not.

Its final report to Congress will include specific recommendations promoting economy, efficiency and improved service throughout the government. This could certainly mean some programs will be eliminated others consolidated and still others expanded.

The commission will also look at the way federal, state and local governments work together. Its final report could include suggestions for state and local governments aimed at improving their relationship with Washington, but under no circumstances will the federal government use the Commission or any of its findings to usurp functions that traditionally belong to local governments.

According to H.R. 6380, which would create the Commission, a total of 18 members would be appointed by the President, the Speaker of the House and the President pro tempore of the Senate. Its membership must be bipartisan and will include six persons who are not affiliated with either party.

The Commission will be equally balanced between public officials, both elected and appointed, and leaders of the private sector. It is crucial that the people who serve on the Commission all share a deep understanding of America, its history and its problems, as well as demonstrated expertise in the major areas of the Commission's study.

The author of the bill to create this Commission, Congressman Richard Bolling of Missouri, summed up its need for passage by saying "The world of the 1940's is not the world of the 1980's. In view of the vast changes which have occurred we must look at the whole picture of government if we are to rekindle that faith which makes our government respond once again to our needs, and it must be held accountable for its actions."

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

by Richard L. Lesher, President
U.S. Chamber of Commerce

Ever get the feeling that, no matter what you may do, someone from the government will always be waiting to pounce on you and say: "Gotcha!" This seems especially true in the area of regulation, where, under the guise of protecting the public, the government is constantly forcing the public into a position of heads I win, tails you lose. For example:

Hospitals in Baltimore were required by city law to keep hot water coming from the taps in patients' rooms at 110 degrees or more; but federal regulations required them to keep the same water at 110 degrees or less.

One federal agency ordered hospitals to use liners in waste containers to protect hospital workers from contamination; but another agency prohibited the use of liners, calling them a fire hazard.

Operators of a meat-packing plant were told by one federal agency to wash the floor several times for cleanliness; but then they were told by another agency to keep the floors dry so employees would not slip and fall.

OSHA ordered builders to put beepers on construction vehicles; but then they were fined by EPA for making too much noise.

The government ordered children's pajamas treated with a flame retardant; but then the government decided the same retardant causes cancer.

One company invested a small fortune in an internal exhaust system to keep the air in its factory clean enough to meet OSHA standards; but then EPA charged the company's exhaust system was polluting the outside air.

Utility companies were told to convert from coal generation to gas; but then the government told them to convert from gas to coal. Utility bills keep going higher.

These are merely a few of the ways the federal government has been forcing the private sector to spend more than $100 billion a year to comply with regulations, so many of which are both unnecessary and counterproductive. Yet people in Washington still shake their heads in disbelief and wonder, "My heavens, just what is it that is grinding the American economy into the ground, and contributing to the spiraling inflation and unemployment that are steadily eroding the standard of living of every American. We should appoint a task-force to conduct an in-depth study right away."

For a while, many of us looked to President Carter for leadership after he promised in 1978 that one of his Administration's major goals would be to free Americans from the burden of overregulation. But as we have all learned, Mr. Carter made many, many promises, and we would have been wiser to have heeded the 253-year-old advice from English poet Alexander Pope who said: "Blessed is he who expects nothing, for he shall never be disappointed."

To dramatize this lack of progress, the U.S. Chamber's July regulatory newsletter, Washington Watch, has invented "The Carter Administration Regulatory Game," played on a game board and replete with dice, wheel of fortune, and "Joker Deck." The game has a "Start" square, labeled "Promise Regulatory Reform," but no "Finish" square, and the programmed steps call for more retreats than forward progress by players.

For example:

—Issue Executive order for Regulatory Reform — Advance 4 Spaces.

—Announce 12-15 per cent increase in Regulatory Budgets — Go Back 7 Spaces.

—Claim Reduction in Paperwork Requirements — Advance 4 Spaces.

—SBA Says Paperwork Costs Small Business $12.7 billion — Go Back 5 Spaces.

—Promist to Heed Recommendations of White House Small Business Conference — Advance 3 Spaces.

—Reject Small Business Group's Recommendation for Legislative Veto — Go Back 6 Spaces.

—Forget about promise to consolidate 2,000 Federal Agencies and Programs into 200 Units — Go Back 15 Spaces.

The President's stonewalling on regulatory reform is the latest in a long series of Presidential flip-flops on critical national issues. However, it does adhere to the pattern which can be seen in so many of his Administration's policies — a pattern which might best be described as, "One Step Forward, Two Steps Backward; Heads We Win, Tails You Lose . . .Gotcha!"

Donald Lambro, a reporter for United Press International, has just written a book that is must reading for every American taxpayer. It's called "Fat City: How Washington Wastes Your Taxes," and Lambro spent more than three years researching it, digging up information about wasteful, mismanaged federal programs, and countless others that are either totally ineffective or outdated. I recently had the pleasure of speaking with him on the Chamber's weekly radio program, "What's the Issue?"

Lambro says no taxpayer can wander through the maze that is official Washington without concluding that we have more government than we need, more than we can afford, and certainly more than the American people want. Nevertheless, as he researched this problem and discovered its staggering proportions — he estimates that through waste alone, the federal government squanders $100 billion in tax money each year — he was shocked to see the news media virtually ignoring it. Indeed, one of the questions he asks is this: "When was the last time you can remember a network news program doing a documentary or a special on unnecessary and wasteful federal spending . . . When was the last time an American news magazine devoted its cover to the story?"

To those who say any cut in federal spending would take food out of the mouths of the poor and throw old ladies out in the snow, Lambro replies:

"What we're talking about are tens of billions of dollars in unnecessary programs which I detail in this book, everywhere from $100,000 a year we spend on the masseurs in the Capitol gymnasiums, to $8 million to a U.S. travel agency, to three-quarters of a billion dollars a year we spend to provide cut-rate groceries for retired military men who are in second career jobs.

"This is the kind of waste we're talking about. And if we get rid of that, neither the national welfare or the national security would be harmed. There would be more money left in the pocketbooks of the American wage earner, and we'd have a little bit more money to put in those programs that are truly necessary."

Why is this waste not being eliminated? Lambro cites two specific reasons. First, Congress is not doing a proper job of oversight. He notes that the subcommittee hearings, where the oversight should be taking place in the form of tough interrogations of federal officials, are normally attended by no more than two or three members of Congress. Sometimes, just one member, the chairman, is present.

But Lambro also points his finger at the Administration, which promised bold initiatives and then failed to deliver. He devotes a chapter of his book to examining President Carter's pledge to reduce the number of federal agencies from roughly 1,900 to no more than 200. Lambro told me:

"When we really boiled it down, you get down to 80 agencies that the Administration says have been abolished. Now, we looked at those 80 agencies and found that . . . the overwhelming majority of them were merged or hidden, if you like, into larger and newly created programs. The only things that have disappeared in the budget are the titles of these agencies. The functions are still being performed. The employees are still there. The program is still there."

Result? Less than a dozen unknown, invisible, little offices have been terminated. By every criterion, the government has grown. The payroll is up by 63,000 since Gerald Ford left office. The commitment to restrain spending remains a hollow promise.

Donald Lambro's book performs a much needed service of translating the debate on federal spending from generalizations to specifics. It provides taxpayers with detailed facts about where and how their money is being wasted. This is precisely the kind of information the public should be receiving systematically from the news media. The fact that apparently it is not, however, only makes Mr. Lambro's exhaustive effort all the more worthwhile.

NEWS OF SAFETY

PROTECTIVE SHIPPING CONTAINER

An added degree of safety for transporting hazardous chemicals and other toxic materials is now available through the use of a special shipping container being marketed for this purpose.

This specially designed container, tagged as the "Super Tiger,®" was originally developed as a protective "overpack" for radioactive materials. Its producer is Teledyne Energy Systems of Timonium, Maryland. The engineered design of the Super Tiger container can prevent the release of any liquid, gas or solid and it is useful for insuring the safe shipment of PCB's, Kepones, and other highly toxic wastes.

Essentially a large box within a box, the Super Tiger container is constructed from a ductile steel that allows for large distortions without tearing. A high-density, rigid foam separates the sealed inner cavity from the outer shell. This protects the container's contents from shock and extremes of temperature.

Designed to fit a flatbed trailer or flat rail car, the Super Tiger container measures 20 feet by 8 feet by 8 feet. It can be loaded with a wide variety of waste containers, including drums, barrels and bins. It can accommodate, for example, 42 standard 55-gallon drums.

The empty container weighs 15,000 lbs., with a maximum payload capacity of an additional 30,000 lbs. In case of a water-related accident, it is designed to float even when fully loaded.

Test results indicate that the Super Tiger can successfully survive almost any conceivable accident without exposing its contents. It promises to be a better method for the safe transportation of hazardous materials.

HOW'S YOUR HEALTH?

About two per cent of the population is hypersensitive to the sting of bees, hornets and wasps. For these people, prompt medical attention is vital advises the Minnesota Medical Association (MMA).

Symptoms to the person truly allergic to bee stings can be varied. In the extreme situation which is not common, death can result. This is what makes it so frightening to the individual sensitive to bees.

There are two types of reactions which can occur as the result of a bee sting. The first type is a local or a toxic reaction to the venum that is injected into the skin. The symptoms of an ordinary bee sting include pain, swelling, a throbbing sensation, at the site of the sting. Usually these symptoms will disappear in an hour or two. This is not an allergic reaction, it is a toxic reaction. The second type of reaction is the truly allergic reaction to bee stings. This may be referred to as the systemic or anaphylactic reaction.

Within minutes after being stung the truly allergic person will begin to develop severe symptoms which may include swelling of the eyelids and lips. There may be a feeling of impending danger or jitteriness. A rash, or hives may develop over the entire body. There may be increased difficulty in breathing which may precipitate an asthma attack. These symptoms do not occur without warning. They are not a result of the first or original sting. There must be the first sting to establish a sensitivity. Successive stings will fortify this sensitivity and increasingly produce the bee sting allergy symptoms.

The person who suspects that he or she is sensitive to bee stings should seek competent medical advice to determine if this is indeed the case. The person who has been diagnosed as having a bee sensitivity should wear some form of medical identification at all times. This will aid in identification of the problem in those rare instances where a severe reaction to bee stings has resulted in the unconsciousness of the victim. The hypersensitive person who has suffered a bee sting should always be considered a medical emergency and prompt medical attention is imperative.

Persons known to be sensitive to bee stings should always carry an insect sting first aid kit. This kit which can be prescribed by the patient's physician contains medication which can be given if a bee sting occurs. The physician can instruct the patient when and how these prescription medications should be given.

Along with everything else, The Great Minnesota Get-Together has always been an agricultural exposition. The tradition continues this year with more animals, more people exhibiting, and more that's new.

This Year It's Goats
What fun this will be — goat judging. Little kids. Big nannys, five different breeds: Alpine, LaMancha, Saanen, Nubian and Toggenburg. Even their names are fun (Aug 29-Sept 1).

The Largest Juried Art Exhibition in Five States
This year's Art Show is important for two reasons. It's larger. Now 400 examples of painting, sculpture, and photography will be on exhibit. And, the former Machinery Hall has been renovated as the new Arts Center. As an example of restorative architecture, it's worth a trip to the fair by itself.

80 Acres of Machinery
Here's where the new ideas shine. Bright, spiffy examples of farm equipment, energy saving devices, new products for home and hobby. There's entertainment as well with Frankie Yankovic or the Chmielewski Funtime Show at Machinery Park.

And So Much Is Free
More than a dozen different areas of the Minnesota State Fair offer you free, in-person entertainment. For example: Doug Kershaw or Paul New at the Band Shell; The memories or Great Western Band at Heritage Square; or Hugo Zacchini being shot from his cannon in the Hamms Hanneford Aerial Thrill Circus. And at the Mexican Village, there will be dancers, musicians and a master glassblower with blazing kilns to produce a keepsake of your place in the fun.

Before Summer Gets Away — Make Sure You Have Fun
The excitement continues with the auto races and demo derbies, the glamour of Grandstand stars, and the competition of horse shows and rodeos.
Fair admission $3.00 adults, $1.00 persons 5-15, no charge for parking.
For complete information, call 612-642-2200; or come to The Fair!

Need Volunteers In Cholesterol Study

by Ralph Heussner
'U' M News Service

University of Minnesota medical school needs volunteers for a nationwide study of the effect of cholesterol reduction on coronary heart disease.

Volunteers, both men and women, must be heart attack victims. Officially launched in 1975, the study is meant to be the most sophisticated and exhaustive examination ever undertaken of heart disease — America's number one killer.

National Institutes of health (NIH) has allocated $15.6 million for five more years of clinical research. The grant, one of the largest ever awarded by NIH, will be shared by the University of Minnesota and three other medical centers participating in the study of 1,000 heart attack victims. The University of Minnesota is home-base for the study.

The study is technically named the "Program on the surgical control of the hyperlipidemias". Hyperlipidemia is the medical term describing a condition where abnormally large amounts of fats, called cholesterol, are in the blood stream.

For years it has been assumed that lowering the cholesterol level after a heart attack will reduce a person's chances of having a second heart attack, but nobody has been able to say for sure. Within five to eight years, the University of Minnesota directed research should produce conclusive evidence to resolve this medical debate.

"I can safely say that when the study is completed, and thanks to the continued funding it will be completed, we will have a definitive answer — yes or no — to the question: Is cholesterol reduction of the magnitude of 30 per cent beneficial in reducing the risk of a second heart attack?" said Dr. Henry Buchwald, University of Minnesota surgery professor and one of the study's two principal investigators.

While experiments with a similar goal have been tried in the past, they have always involved either low-fat diets or cholesterol-lowering drugs. This study involves surgery.

The operation, called the partial ileal bypass, was developed by Buchwald at the University of Minnesota in 1963. The surgery involves bypassing a section of small intestine where cholesterol from digested food is primarily absorbed into the body. (The procedure is not the same as that used to control obesity.)

According to Buchwald, results of previous studies have not been definitive for several reasons. Some studies have used too few subjects. The diet and drug studies have resulted in cholesterol reductions of 10 per cent or less, a change which has not been shown to alter the disease. Surgery, on the other hand, lowers cholesterol levels by 30 to 50 per cent.

Project's next major hurdle is completing the recruitment of patients. To date, 300 qualified participants have been found. Within the next three years, 700 more must be recruited.

Project officials are looking for people who have had one documented heart attack during the past five years, are not more than 20 per cent overweight, have a cholesterol level of 220 or above, and who have no diabetes, severe hypertension or other serious diseases. "By being so selective, we will end up with as pure a population as possible and as sharp an answer as can be attained," Buchwald said.

Those who meet these criteria must agree to random assignment to one of two groups: an operative group of 500 persons and a control group of 500. Those in the operative group will undergo the cholesterol-lowering surgery. The control group will serve as a comparison group. Both groups will receive periodic, extensive physical examinations and laboratory testing. Each patient will be followed for at least five years to see if the expected reduction in cholesterol proves beneficial.

Project statisticians estimate that a total of 1,000 patients must be evaluated to determine if the surgical operation is more effective than diet in lowering the death rate and preventing atherosclerosis. Atherosclerosis is a narrowing of arteries throughout the body caused by the buildup of a gummy substance called plaque, which consists primarily of cholesterol. When this blockage becomes advanced in the heart's arteries, a heart attack is imminent.

Finding qualified patients is not a simple task, according to the project directors. Of every 100 persons who respond to the request for volunteers, only one will meet all the physical requirements. Thus, to find 1,000 qualified participants, 100,000 men and women must be screened.

"The problem is that we are looking for a small sample of the population who are relatively healthy except for high cholesterol and one myocardial infarction (heart attack)," says Sue Ebner, patient recruitment director.

Minnesota clinic is working with doctors and hospitals to recruit patients from Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana, Montana and Nebraska.

"People in the study are very special," said Betty Hansen, director of the four clinics involved in the study. "We cannot guarantee them good health or promise a cure. Our only promise is more knowledge. They know what they are entering into and what to expect if they participate. What they want to gain is more knowledge about the disease for themselves, their families and the rest of mankind."

Dr. John Long, director of the study's coordinating center in Minneapolis which collects and analyzes the research data, offered the story of one patient, a 32-year-old man with an eight-year-old son. No male in his family has lived past 40; each has died of a heart attack. When he volunteered for the study, the young father commented "I'll do whatever I can to be around to see my son grow up."

In addition to the University of Minnesota medical school, the other participating clinics and recruitment centers are Lankenau hospital in Philadelphia, Pa., the University of Arkansas in Little Rock, Ark., and the University of Southern California at Los Angeles, Calif.

Volunteers may contact the hyperlipidemia study at (612) 376-4494.

PITCHIN' IN

UNSALTED SNACKING MAKES SENSE

All over America, people are pitching in to get things done and improve the quality of life. With regard to good nutrition, for example, consumers receive a myriad of confusing messages. Many nutrition experts have worked together to clarify current nutritional concerns. In 1977, the U.S. Senate Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs proposed the U.S. Dietary Goals. More recently, the combined efforts of the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare produced "Nutrition and Your Health," Dietary Guidelines for Americans. Both sets of guidelines advise Americans to modify their diets by increasing consumption of certain nutrients such as complex carbohydrates, while limiting their intake of others such as salt.

In keeping with these dietary recommendations, active Americans have learned to munch nutritious snacks when they need extra energy, or when they do not have time for a meal. Planters has pitched in to make nutritious unsalted snacking a reality. In response to the needs of consumers who wish to limit their intake of sodium, Planters has introduced Dry Roasted Unsalted Peanuts, Cashews and Mixed Nuts. Each contains less than 10 milligrams of sodium per 1-ounce serving and is therefore suitable for low-sodium diets. An excellent source of vegetable protein, B vitamins and complex carbohydrates, cholesterol-free unsalted nuts are just what the smart snacker ordered!

Crunchy Peanut Granola is an easy-to-prepare mixture of Planters Unsalted Peanuts, cereal and raisins. If you love the flavor of fresh peanuts, you will want to dig into this healthy snack.

CRUNCHY PEANUT GRANOLA

Makes 9 cups

- 4 cups old fashioned oats
- 2 cups coarsely chopped Planters Dry Roasted Unsalted Peanuts
- 1 cup wheat germ
- 1/3 cup unsalted margarine
- 1/2 cup honey
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 1 cup dark seedless raisins

Combine oats, peanuts and wheat germ in a large bowl. Heat margarine, honey and vanilla extract to just below boiling point. Pour over oat mixture; toss to coat thoroughly. Spread mixture evenly over bottoms of two jelly roll pans.

Roast at 300° F. for 20 to 25 minutes, stirring occasionally, until mixture is lightly browned. Remove from oven; mix in raisins. Cool. Store in tightly covered containers.

Nutritional information per 1/2 cup serving: 281 calories, 8.6 grams protein, 13 grams fat, 32 grams carbohydrate, 4.5 milligrams sodium, 246 milligrams potassium.

Nuclear Waste Act Proposed By Stangeland

Congressman Arlan Stangeland announced today that he has cosponsored the "nuclear waste research, development and demonstration act of 1980."

"This bill," said Stangeland, "would establish an accelerated research, development and demonstration program in the department of energy for the disposal of high and low level radioactive wastes. The bill is needed to assure that positive and expeditious steps are taken to resolve this urgent national problem."

The bill reportedly formulates a progressive action plan that will complement the process of safely and ef*fectively constructing a full*-size radioactive waste disposal facility. Four small demonstration repositories would be built across the continental United States, one by 1986, one by 1987 and two by 1990. Their purpose is to prove the existence of technological solutions for safely disposing of high level wastes, to implement the hundreds of studies that have been conducted on this issue, and to develop the practical information that is needed for constructing full-size repositories.

The department of energy would also be directed to undertake a research program which may lead to the simultaneous volume reduction and encapsulation in glass of all low level wastes generated at nuclear power plants. The department will explore the possibility of allowing each nuclear power plant in the country to act as a processing center for low level nuclear wastes produced in research laboratories, hospitals and other facilities in its vicinity for conversion to inert and insoluble glass before ultimate disposal, and will examine the merits of permanently disposing of canisters of low level glassified waste in the caverns that have been produced from underground nuclear weapons testing. Finally, the bill provides for research and development to demonstrate dry storage of relatively old spent fuel from reactors.

"One of the major problems we currently face with nuclear energy is disposing of nuclear waste, but this bill will allow the federal government to demonstrate that technology exists for safely disposing of high level radioactive wastes. In addition, it will require the development of needed information to improve the safety and lessen any environmental impact of disposing of low level radioactive wastes.

"I am convinced that if this measure passes Congress, we will be on the road to laying to rest our current fears of this much needed form of energy," Stangeland said.

Study Interest Of Museum Visitors

by Linda St. Thomas
Smithsonian News Service

These days, we evaluate almost everything: television programs, new products, college courses, employee efficiency, even church attendance.

But until recently, very few of the nation's 5,000 museums studied the public's response to their primary product — exhibits. That is changing.

At the Smithsonian institution in Washington, D.C., and at several other museums around the country, programs are now underway to find out what exhibits visitors look for, what visitors read, how they react to certain display techniques and even why they go to museums. In short, there's a new effort to evaluate, and ultimately to improve, museum exhibitions.

"This is an era of accountability for all public institutions, and museums are no longer an exception," says Dr. Robert L. Wolf, director of the Indiana center for evaluation, Indianapolis. He has been studying Smithsonian visitors for the past two years. "Exhibits are not just for the scholars anymore. In fact, many museums are designing their shows with the young visitor in mind. It's much easier to design if you know what people want and how they want it presented."

The survey technique used at the Smithsonian is called "naturalistic evaluation," meaning that visitors are interviewed at the exhibit site where their natural responses to a show can be observed. Interviewers are trained to put the visitors at ease, to ask questions that will elicit responses more elaborate than a perfunctory yes or no. Evaluators also observe how people move in and around a show.

"We don't use questionnaires because they are too inflexible. A nine-year-old cannot answer the questions we pose to an adult," Dr. Wolf says. "For example, we might ask an adult what, in his or her opinion, was the highlight of the exhibit. But to a child, we'd say, 'what will you tell your friends about this exhibit tomorrow?' "

Naturalistic evaluations are not "Do you like it?" surveys, but rather, in-depth probings to understand a visitor's experience in a museum.

A good interviewer will end up with a wealth of observation data before he or she even begins the personal interviews. Just by observing visitors in an exhibit area, Wolf says, the interviewer will be able to tell if a person is a "communter," "nomad," "a cafeteria type" or a "V.I.P." (very interested person).

The "commuter" uses the exhibit hall to get from one point to another but never really sees anything. Many teenagers fall into this category, according to the interviewers. A "nomad" is a casual visitor, wandering rather aimlessly from area to area, and the "cafeteria type" definitely wants to get interested, yet needs to have something eye-catching in front of him. The "very interested person" often has some prior interest in the exhibit subject and goes through the display slowly, stopping to read the many signs or labels that describe the exhibit.

Wolf's team has conducted an ususual study at the Smithsonian. The team evaluated an exhibit in the museum of natural history before it even opened. Last summer and fall, a random sampling of visitors was asked to accompany interviewers to the living coral reef (in an 1,800-gallon tank) located in the basement laboratory. The people were told that the Smithsonian was developing a new exhibit (a similar coral reef will be open to the public in the autumn of 1980) and were asked to help.

"What is it?", they were asked. Answers ranged from an aquarium to a mini-ocean floor. Later, three different sets of mock labels were added, and visitors were asked which set was most informative. After several months, the data was ready for the staff to review.

Curators and exhibit designers were surprised to find that visitors were fairly sophisticated. They knew not only that the coral reef wasn't just a fish tank, but that it was some kind of ecosystem, Wolf reported. With the evaluation report in hand, curators are able to put together an exhibit that answers possible questions before they are even asked.

Elsewhere, the Carnegie museum of natural history in Pittsburgh began using naturalistic evaluations in 1978 in a number of galleries, according to Patricia Reibel of the museum's education department. The Carnegie staff working on a long-term evaluation and publications study spent months conducting unobtrusive visitor surveys, then began doing interviews using the inquiry method, where visitors were asked open-ended questions. This spring, they will evaluate the Botany hall, and the results of this survey will be used in the development of new galleries. Their goal is to make all exhibits more responsive to the public's needs.

A pre-evaluation doesn't have to be expensive, Wolf says. It can be a simple matter of a museum's making an inexpensive mock-up of the show and calling in civic leaders to evaluate it or preparing cardboard labels and asking museum visitors for their opinions.

In another exhibit study at the Smithsonian's museum of natural history, the interviewers found that visitors stopped to read many labels, especially those with catchy titles such as "Have the Ice Ages Ended?" They were inclined to read more labels in the beginning of the exhibit and then taper off towards the end.

Evaluators had assumed that an empty hall would give people an opportunity to enjoy the exhibit in a leisurely fashion, and they were surprised to find that, when there were very few people in the hall, visitors moved through the area quickly.

"The reason that evaluations or pre-evaluations are not done routinely at many museums today is simply that people shy away from anything that's called an evaluation," Wolf says. "They seem to think that it will be too critical or that the data will be too trite, with quotes from visitors saying they like the museums or the building is big."

Several other museums, including the Western Reserve society in Cleveland where a show called "People at the Crossroads" was evaluated last year, are just finishing naturalistic evaluations. The children's museum in Indianapolis has recently completed a two-year study of education programs and plans a new evaluation to begin this spring.

"As the fear-of-evaluations syndrome fades, we may see dramatic changes in some of our museum exhibits," Wolf says.

THEN and NOW!

Remember The Red Baron

THEN: It was World War I. Baron Manfred Von Richthofen, the Red Baron of the German Air Force, was the nemesis of Allied flyers. Although an enemy, he was held in high regard because of his daring and heroic exploits.

Soon you too will remember the Red Baron.

NOW: This summer, the Red Baron—in fact, two Red Barons—will barnstorm American cities to help kids and promote Red Baron frozen pizza, flying antique Stearman biplanes. They'll visit more than 50 fairs in ten states of the Northeast and Northwest.

Each Red Baron and his plane will spend one to three days in each community, overflying fairgrounds, visiting stores and making media appearances. The Barons' ground crews will pass out coupons good for 50 cents off the price of a Red Baron pizza, and announce that another 50 cents will be donated for each coupon to support youth activities. Red Baron pizza is sold in grocery stores and manufactured by Red Baron Pizza Service of Marshall, Minnesota. At the end of each visit, the Red Baron will present a check to youth leaders.

Region I Is Sanctioned By Federal EDA

Congressman Arlan Stangeland announced that the economic development administration, U.S. department of commerce, has officially designated Region 1 as an economic development district.

This designation is a result of a successful completion of overall economic development effort submitted by the Northwest regional development commission at Crookston to the economic development administration. It qualifies the following counties to receive funds from the economic development Administration for business development and job creating projects: Kittson, Roseau, Marshall, Pennington, Red Lake, Polk and Norman Counties.

This designation also enables these counties to receive 10 per cent additional funds for local public works projects to combat high levels of unemployment.

Testing Law Is A Dirty Job . . .

Cite Farmers For Wrestling A Hog

Bob Fincher, John Peoples, Dalton Anderson and Rodney Wayne filled a small niche in Minnesota legal history Sunday when they were busted by the Thief River Falls police department for wrestling a hog.

Actually, the situation is more involved than that simple statement would imply. The four northwestern Minnesota farmers were in fact cited for violation of Minnesota statute 346.34 which states:

"GREASED PIG CONTESTS AND TURKEY SCRAMBLES. No person shall operate, run or participate in a contest, game, or other like activity in which a pig, greased, oiled or otherwise, is released and wherein the object is the capture of such pig, in which a chicken or turkey is released or thrown into the air and wherein the object is the capture of such chicken or turkey. Any violation of this section shall be a misdemeanor."

It isn't that the four men were unaware that their foray into ankle deep soupy mud to capture a 250-pound pig and deposit it momentarily in a 55-gallon drum was probably illegal. As directors of the Northern Minnesota Pork Producers association they waded into the mire to test a law they believe is discriminatory, not equitably enforced and not applicable to this type of contest.

That first step in the legal challenge was taken about 7 p.m. Sunday at what was supposed to be a hog wrestling contest to climax the association's first feeder pig show and sale at the Pennington county fairgrounds in Thief River Falls.

The second step will be taken Thursday, [illegible] when Fincher of Viking, Peoples of Brooks, Anderson of Grygla and Wayne of Goodridge will be in Pennington county court for a first appearance.

Fincher, president of the pork producers association, explained that he had a telephone call last Wednesday from Les Zegart, executive director of the Minnesota Humane society, advising him that the planned and promoted hog wrestle was an illegal act. That call followed notification of Ken Stalboerger, chairman of the show and sale committee, by a local humane society member earlier Wednesday that the contest was against the law.

Fincher checked with attorneys for the association and for the city of Thief River Falls which issued the permit and they affirmed that the law was clear, he said. A deputy attorney general assigned to the humane society also advised Fincher by telephone that the hog wrestle was illegal.

The pork producers association board met Thursday evening to complete final plans for the show and discussed the hog wrestle situation. With eight of the nine board members present, a roll call vote was taken and a decision was made unanimously to go ahead with the hog wrestle event.

By Sunday there were 30 four-member teams entered in the hog wrestle competition, including three women's teams. Advised by Thief River Falls police chief Ken Froschheiser Saturday that local law enforcement had been alerted to the law by the state humane society, Fincher called a meeting of those entered in the event for 6 p.m. Sunday. He summarized the events which had happened since Wednesday and turned the microphone over to Chief Froschheiser, who read

HOG WRESTLE REVIEW is covered in this series of Times photos from Sunday's abbreviated event. In sequence from the top, Bob Fincher, president of Northern Minnesota Pork Producers association, informs the 30 teams entered that the scheduled hog wrestle is prohibited by law; two of the hogs scheduled to be wrestled muddy up and map strategy; the pork producers team hoists the captured hog into the barrel in the timed event; and John Peoples of Brooks is among team members cited for violation of Minnesota statute 346.34.

Reservations Are Taken For Library Trip

Northwest Regional library's bus trip to the Twin Cities has met with considerable public interest but seats are still available for the trip scheduled for September 13 and 14.

Trip includes an afternoon at the Renaissance festival, an evening at the L'Hotel de France and a Sunday brunch performance of "On Golden Pond" at the Chanhassen dinner theatre. CBS-TV described the play as "a new play with real characters, relationships between intelligent people, witty dialogue, sensitivity and loving warmth." Following the performance the group will return to Thief River Falls.

Cost of the trip is $70 per person which includes transportation, entrance to the Renaissance festival, one night's lodging (double occupancy) and the meal and performance at the dinner theatre.

Reservations must be made by September 1 and can be made by sending name, address, phone and check to the Northwest Regional Library, 101 East First Street, Thief River Falls, MN 56701.

Hinrichs Pigs Rate High At Show Sunday

Roger Hinrichs farm of Red Lake Falls carried off several of the top honors in the feeder pig show sponsored by the Northern Minnesota Pork Producers association Sunday at the Pennington county fairgrounds in Thief River Falls.

Hinrichs displayed the reserve champion barrow, first place gilt, first place lightweight commercial pen and second place heavyweight commercial pen.

Lone Pine Farms, operated by Bruce Nelson of Goodridge, had the show's champion barrow, first place heavyweight commercial pen and third place gilt.

Yutrzenka Pig Farms of Viking, owned by Tom Yutrzenka, entered the reserve champion gilt, second place lightweight pen and fourth place heavyweight pen.

Tronvet Pork, owned by Gilbert and Dan Tronvet of Thief River Falls, entered the grand champion gilt and also had the fourth place gilt of the show.

C and O Enterprises, owned by Doug Courneya and Kirk Oseid, took second place in the gilt competition and showed the third place lightweight commercial pen.

J. C. Feeder Pigs, owned by John Peoples of Brooks, placed third in the heavyweight commercial pen class. Arnold Donarski of Argyle captured a fourth place in the lightweight commercial pen class.

The show and sale which followed were proclaimed a success by the sponsoring organization. The pork barbecue was served to an estimated 500 people. The hog wrestle planned for 7 p.m. attracted 30 four-member teams but ran into legal difficulties. A separate story on that part of the event is also in this issue of the Times.

Officers of Northern Minnesota Pork Producers association voted to present Virginia Hallstrom with a Belle Ringer award in recognition of her services in promotion of pork and assistance to the association. The award was presented by Congressman Arlan Stangeland Sunday afternoon.

Roger Petersons Honored For Farm Beautification

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

In the seven years since Roger and Sharon Peterson began developing their homesite about 11 miles southwest of Thief River Falls, they have created a farm yard which this year was selected as winner of the farm beautification award sponsored by the Pennington soil and water conservation district.

Roger was born in Pennington county and grew up on the parental Norman Peterson farm across the road from his award-winning homesite in Sanders township. He graduated from Lincoln high school in Thief River Falls and received a bachelor of science degree in electrical engineering from the University of North Dakota in 1968.

Following competion of his college degree, he moved to southern Minnesota to work for IBM corporation in Rochester. In 1970 he returned to Pennington county to begin employment as an instructor in the electronics department of the Thief River Falls area vocational-technical school, a position which he presently holds.

Roger and Sharon Vigness, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Les Vigness of Thief River Falls, were married in 1966. For the past seven and one-half years Sharon has been clerical secretary for the Red Lake Watershed district, a position which has grown from about a day a week when the office was established to about half-time employment at the present time.

EXTRA TOUCHES add to the attractiveness of the farm yard of the Roger Peterson family. Here Roger and his wife Sharon check on marigolds growing in a pot attached to the mailbox standard. The hanging basket contains geraniums. The field stone placed carefully by hand by the Petersons on both sides of the driveway also add a distinctive touch to the farm yard approach.

They lived in a mobile home in St. Hilaire for three years, then in 1973 put several years of planning into action by building their own home. It was to be a summer project, but even with long days and nights on the job extended into the fall. The Petersons did all of the building, including carpentry, electrical, plumbing, and finishing. And they, like most home owners, still have some modifications and finishing work they would like to do.

Roger readily admits that the large farm yard is Sharon's project. He is busy enough during the farming season with his own land and working with his father and brother Wayne in combined farming operations, he says. But he provides assistance when needed and shares the family's pride in the appearance of the property.

"I couldn't do it without the boys," Sharon said, referring to 13-year-old son Todd and 10-year-old son Troy. "They do the mowing and trimming and help with some of the other work. In fact, they have a real knowledge of how heavy rocks are after working on the driveway!"

Housing Agency, City To Discuss Rezoning Issue

A large turnout again dominated the meeting room of the city auditorium during an adjourned city council meeting last evening as Thief River Falls city council members met to discuss the 3.56 acres of land near Greenwood street and Allwood acres addition considered for re-zoning.

The topic, adjourned three times from the July 22 regular meeting, continued when various representatives from Seth W. Twichell and Associates, of Fargo (developer of the proposed project) and concerned citizens appeared before council members.

Request by the developer is to rezone the parcel of land from agricultural to R-2 with a special use permit for the construction of 40 units of subsidized family housing.

Mayor Bob Carlson began the meeting by reading a letter received from the Catholic Diocese in Crookston stating their support of subsidized housing, but expressing their concern over the city's decision to grant the special use permit which would permit townhouses at the proposed site instead of duplexes.

During a previous planning commission meeting, the planning commission had denied the rezoning due to the incompletion of Greenwood street, because of neighborhood opposition, and because of the manner in which the state had approached the development of the project.

The matter was described last evening as one of the "most controversial issues the city has faced this year," by Mayor Bob Carlson, who added that the "council adheres to all parties involved — both pro and con."

"The main question of concern," he added, "is — in the event that council votes down the request for the rezoning, what stand would the Minnesota Housing and Finance Agency take?" And, that answer had been received yesterday, according to Mayor Carlson, through a telephone conversation with representatives of the agency who stated that they would permit the developer to come back to them (agency) for a renewal of the project which would permit them to erect duplexes in the proposed area.

Dear friends,

When a death occurs in the family, it is wrong to say to a child, "Grandpa is on a trip" or "Mother is living in the hospital". Children must be told the truth; they have built-in 'lie detectors'. Deceptive parents diminish the trust children place in their father and mother.

Respectfully,

Belmont Funeral Home

MEQB Seeking Nominees For Committee

Citizens concerned about Minnesota energy issues may be interested in a new citizens advisory committee. The Minnesota Environmental Quality Board (MEQB) is seeking nominations and applications for its 1980-81 power plant siting advisory committee. The MEQB is a State board which designates sites for large power plants and routes for high voltage transmission lines.

Power plant siting advisory committee will consider ways of better coordinating the power plant siting and transmission line routing processes with the Certificate of Need process administered by the Minnesota energy agency. In addition, the committee will provide advice on MEQB testimony concerning the need for new electric energy facilities over which the MEQB has siting authority. It also will provide advice on obtaining adequate citizen participation in energy facility siting decisions.

NEQB will select 30 members to serve on the committee until June 30, 1981. Committee will hold about eight day long Saturday meetings and some evening meetings. All members will be compensated for travel, food, and lodging expenses. Staff support for the committee will be provided by MEQB's power plant siting program. Additional staff support from other State agencies and private sources will be arranged as necessary.

Nominations and applications should be received no later than September 1, 1980. According to State law, no officer, agent, or employee of a unity may serve on this committee. Each application or nomination should include a brief description of the applicant's or nominee's background, and a complete address and telephone number. Applications and nominations should be sent to Arthur E. Sidner, Chairman, Minnesota Environmental Quality Board, 550 Cedar Street, Room 101, St. Paul, Minnesota 55101.

For more information about the committee contact Sheldon Mains, Minnesota Environmental Quality Board, 550 Cedar Street, Room 15, St. Paul, Minnesota. Telephone (612) 296-2757.

Would Preserve Farms From Corporations

Gene Wenstrom has announced that if elected to Congress he will introduce legislation prohibiting non-farm corporations from engaging in agricultural production.

A farmer from Elbow Lake, Wenstrom is the DFL endorsed candidate for Congress from the seventh district.

"Each year, America's farms are fewer in number and larger in size. In the 1930s, there were close to seven million farms in the U.S. Today, there are fewer than three million. Two per cent of all U.S. farms now receive close to 40 per cent of all receipts," Wenstrom said.

He said his proposal will help slow the decline of widespread ownership of land and "it will eliminate the subversive threat posed by large, non-farm corporations."

For example, he said, Burnlington Northern Inc. now owns 15 million acres of grassland, Bank America Inc. has more than 100,000 acres, and Goodyear Tire and Rubber Inc. has received more than $500,000 in farm subsidy payments from the federal government.

"Now there's a new threat. A chicago investment firm is buying up farmland at inflated prices right now. They plan to hire tenants to operate those farms and plan to use the income to fund corporate pension plans. This has to stop," Wenstrom said.

"I'm proud of being one of the authors of Minnesota's corporate farm legislation that restricts non-farm corporations from engaging in agricultural production. Because of the law, Minnesota is one of the few states able to maintain its number of family farms," he said.

Family farms should be allowed to incorporate, Wenstrom said, and his proposal doesn't prohibit that. "But we have to pass specific legislation to keep Exxon and Goodyear out of the family farm. We either keep large corporations out, or eventually they'll keep many of our young people from the chance of owning their own farm," he said.

FFA Members Attend Camp In Crookston

Annaul Minnesota FFA leadership camp was recently conducted in Crookston, for FFA members from across the state. The camp is designed to help members build FFA leadership in themselves and their chapter, and to promote personal growth and development.

Members learn about different FFA activities and programs, such as safety, BOAC (Building Our American Communities), proficiency areas, and state and national conventions. Areas in personal growth include etiquette and public speaking.

This year, for the first time, there were two state camps conducted. In the past few years, members wanting to attend the camp had to be turned away, because the camp had been filled. Creating a second camp allowed those who might have been turned away to attend camp. These camps were held at McGregor and Crookston.

Daily activities at the camp included flag raising and lowering, four sessions each day on various FFA topics, several hours of organized recreation and reflections given by the state officers each evening. The camp was also visited by speakers from Camp Courage, Kids, Inc., and two young Norwegian ladies who spoke to the members on farming in Norway.

Camp was conducted by state FFA officers who served as the counselors and presented all of the sessions.

Phone Rates To Change On September 1

Starting September 1, Northwestern Bell will offer lower long distance rates for customer dialed calls of up to 40 miles in distance within Minnesota.

The company also will adjust local service rates and will no longer offer four and eight-party telephone service to new customer locations.

Al Bacon, manager of the Thief River Falls office, said the new rates and changes are the result of a recent public utilities commission order in the company's 1979-80 general rate case.

The new long distance rates, which are 12 to 26 per cent less than the previous rate, will make it cheaper to reach nearby communities. Three new service charges also are established for customers who require additional services. The charges include a 25-cent charge for each operator-handled, customer-dialed station-to-station credit card or special billing number call; a charge of 70 cents for all other types of operator handled calls such as third number billing or collect calls; and a $2.05 service charge for operator handled person-to-person calls within Minnesota. A one-minute minimum is also established.

New uniform local monthly service rates throughout Northwestern Bell-served areas in Minnesota will be: One-party service, $8.55; two-party service, $6.85; four-party residence, $5.75; eight-party residence, $5.15; and one-party business, $20.80.

Four and eight party service will no longer be offered to customers at new locations. Mileage charges are also to be eliminated on one party service September 1, Bacon said.

Refunds for additional rate money collected since July 7, 1979, will appear as credits with 14 per cent interest on customer bills starting October 13. For the one party customer who has one basic company supplied telephone and service since July of 1979, the refund will be approximately $3.25. For a similar business customer the refund will be about $10.25. Customers who discontinued service since July of 1979 will receive an appropriate refund by check to their forwarding address.

Customers bills will also take on a new appearance. The monthly $8.55 charge will appear in two parts, $7.55 for the line and $1 for the telephone instrument. If a customer owns the telephone instrument, the charge, $7.55, would be for the line.

Absentee Vote May Be Cast After Aug. 24

Absentee ballots will be available from county auditors August 25 for the September 9 primary election.

"Anyone who will be absent from the precinct on election day or who is unable to go to the polls because of illness or religious reasons should apply for an absentee ballot as soon as possible," according to Joan Anderson Growe, secretary of state.

"Voting by absentee ballot is not something that should be done just because a person feels it would be more convenient," Growe said, "But I would like to encourage every voter who has a legitimate reason to take the opportunity to cast an absentee ballot."

Voters may obtain their ballots from county auditors in person or by mail with a signed and dated written request stating their name, voting and mailing address, and that he or she will be absent from the precinct or the reason she or he will be unable to go to the polling place.

Growe said, "By applying early for your absentee ballot, you will save the election officials a great deal of trouble and ensure that you will receive the ballots in time to return them by mail on election day."

To The Editor:

On re-reading the news release issued on the 10-ton road requests for N.W. Minnesota which your paper published, I noted that highway 32 was inadvertently omitted. Highway 32 was included, however, in the formal request made to the department of transportation; it just was left out somehow in the news release we issued.

Highway 32 carries a lot of grain out of the St. Hilaire and Red Lake Falls area and should be a 10-ton road as should the other highways in N.W. Minnesota. I expect action on the requests soon.

Yours truly,
Marv Hanson
State Senator

NCC Appoints Instructor For Law Program

Frank Cornacchione

Frank Cornacchione has been appointed the first full-time instructor and coordinator of Northland Community college's expanding law enforcement program.

Cornacchione's educational background includes a bachelor's degree in police science and sociology from New Mexico state university and a master's degree in criminal justice from Northeast Louisiana university. He comes to Northland from South Carolina state college where he was an instructor in criminal justice.

Besides instructing, he was heavily involved in curriculum development and student advising. He has also been an instructor in criminal justice at Northeast Louisiana university, as well as instructing in their basic recruit police academy.

From 1968 to 1976, Cornacchione was with the Bound Book police department, Bound Book, N.J., as a patrolman, supervisor and the juvenile and police community relations officer. He has published an article on juvenile vandalism in the "Police Chief" magazine and has been the recipient of a number of awards for his police work.

Decision to employ a full-time person is because of a growing interest and enrollment in Northland's law enforcement program and the recent action by the state legislature requiring state certification of all police officers by the Minnesota police officers training board.

Because of this legislative action, approved law-enforcement programs, which includes Northland, will have to review and evaluate their programs periodically. This will be a major function of Cornacchione. Also, he will have to spend a great deal of effort in counseling law enforcement, students so that they will be prepared to apply for their certification examinations.

Cornacchione has an athletic background in playing and coaching. This background will be utilized at Northland as part of his duties will be as an assistant coach in football.

Cornacchione and his wife Connie moved into the community the latter part of July. "We are enjoying our move to Thief River Falls immensely, especially the friendliness of everyone," he said.

Coaching Changes Announced

Several changes have been made in head coaching positions for the 1980-81 school year at Lincoln high school following one-year leave of absence granted to Gene Jurgens and Sylvia Sjoberg.

Jurgens, who was making plans for his fifth year as the Prowlers' head football coach, announced his decision to accept a position in the Fergus Falls school system on the eve of 1980 preseason football practice. That left Thief River Falls athletic director Russ Smith scrambling for coaches.

John Schmitz, who has been a member of the Lincoln football coaching staff since 1966, was appointed head coach of the Prowlers. He served as Thief River Falls head hockey coach during the 1971-72 season when the Prowlers put together a 15-5 regular season record but lost to East Grand Forks 4-2 in the first round of the Region 8 tournament.

Bill McGann, the Prowlers' cross country coach, was added to the football coaching staff, with Lynn Dyer named the new cross country coach.

Sjoberg, who served as head coach for both the girls basketball and golf teams, will be succeeded this winter by Tom Schafer and this spring by Ruth Onkka.

Schafer moves up to the head basketball coaching position after working with Sjoberg as an assistant coach. He also serves as the girls head track coach.

Several other changes in the assistant coaching ranks were also announced:

+Tim Olson, who had been serving as an assistant coach at Northland community college, was added to the Lincoln football coaching staff, along with John Kopari, head coach of the boys swimming team. Schafer had resigned earlier as a football assistant and school officials had granted the Prowlers an additional staff member.

+Karen Schulte, a first-year member of the School District 564 teaching staff after graduating from Dickinson (N.D.) State College, has been named as an assistant volleyball coach, succeeding Helen Anderson, who moves into the role of elementary school physical education supervisor.

+Dyer has been moved from freshman coach to assistant varsity coach in the girls basketball program, with Schulte taking over as coach of the freshmen girls.

+Tom Hunt, a former head coach of the boys and girls basketball teams at Casselton, N.D., has been added to the Lincoln boys basketball coaching staff where he'll be in charge of the sophomore squad. At the same time Al Buhl will take over as freshman coach and Myron Peterson will coach at the eighth grade level — reversing the roles they held last year.

A coaching vacancy still remains in the Lincoln hockey program where a second assistant position was approved by school administrators.

Jurgens, Sjoberg Coaching Records

Gene Jurgens' four-year won-lost record as Lincoln high school head football coach was 12-24 when he requested a one-year leave of absence in favor of a move to Fergus Falls.

Jurgens succeeded Jim Sims as coach of the Prowlers in 1976 and finished the year with a 4-5 record. The Prowlers struggled through a frustrating 1-8 campaign in 1977, went 4-5 in 1978 and were 3-6 a year ago. He served as an assistant coach under Sims for eight years before taking over as head coach when Sims left for a college coaching position at Crookston.

Sylvia Sjoberg carries a 14-24 won-lost record as head coach of the Lincoln girls basketball program into her one-year leave of absence. Like Jurgens, she has the option of returning as Prowlers' head coach next year.

Sjoberg succeeded Judy Charlebois as coach of the Prowlers for the 1978-79 season and Thief River Falls went 8-12. The Prowlers were 6-12 last winter. A former head coach at Wadena where he led the Indians into the state tournament, she served as an assistant coach under Charlebois here before being named head coach.

Ninth District Site Criticized

Ralph Anderson of the Detroit Lakes Tribune criticized the Ninth District American Legion baseball tournament committee following Detroit Lakes' 5-3 championship game victory over Barnesville earlier this month.

"I think the Ninth District American Legion baseball committee failed to exercise proper judgment when it failed to switch sites for the Ninth District championship game between Detroit Lakes and Breckenridge," wrote Anderson.

"It was known Sunday night that the teams would be in the finals Monday and yet no action was taken to switch the site, so both teams, fans from both communities and umpires were required to travel to Red Lake Falls. For Breckenridge, that's a jaunt of about 120 miles and for Detroit Lakes it's a trip of about 85 miles.

To complicate matters, the team arrived, started their warm-ups and then rain forced a postponement and both clubs turned around and went home and returned for the final game on Tuesday.

I strongly feel that a decision could have been made Sunday night switching the championship game to Moorhead or to Fergus Falls. Needless to say, that would have saved a considerable amount of travel and I don't think it would have caused a great deal of inconvenience.

The Red Lake Falls American Legion post did an excellent job of hosting the double elimination tournament and should be commended for its efforts, but I don't think anyone in that community who was involved in the tournament would have minded had the site been shifted for the championship game. It certainly would have made a lot of sense from a monetary standpoint, to say the least."

Detroit Lakes, which lost its opening game of the Ninth District tournament and then stormed back with six straight victories to take the title, lost twice in the state tournament, 10-0 to Grand Rapids and 4-3 to Alexandria in 10 innings to finish the year [illegible]-1.

Pigskin Preview Set Saturday

Seventh annual Thief River Falls Sports Boosters Club Pigskin Preview will be held Saturday on the Thief River Falls athletic field.

Activity will begin with a 1 p.m. junior varsity scrimmage matching Thief River Falls against East Grand Forks.

Varsity scrimmage at 3 o'clock will feature Thief River Falls, East Grand Forks and Ada, a first-time Pigskin Preview participant.

A charcoal broiled beef-on-a-spit picnic supper will be served at 5:30 p.m. Tickets, priced at $3.50 for adults and $2.50 for students under 16 years old, may be purchased from members of the Lincoln high school football team, or at the Pigskin Preview Saturday.

Thief River Falls opens its 1980 high school football season next week when coach the Prowlers host Grand Forks Red River on Friday, Aug. 29.

Rest of the schedule will find the Prowlers playing Friday, Sept. 5, at Detroit Lakes; Friday, Sept. 12, at Grand Rapids; Friday, Sept. 19, vs. Staples; Saturday, Sept. 27, at Moorhead; Friday, Oct. 3, at Bemidji; Friday, Oct. 10, vs. Fergus Falls; Friday, Oct. 17, vs. East Grand Forks; and Friday, Oct. 24, at Crookston.

All Thief River Falls games start at 7:30 p.m. The October 10 game against Fergus Falls will serve as homecoming.

Pre-Registration Required . . .

Thief Lake WMA Goose Hunt Rules Unchanged

A pre-registration will be required for the 1980 controlled goose hunts at Thief Lake and Lac qui Parle wildlife management areas, according to wildlife officials of the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources.

Hunters may apply to reserve one of the stations within the controlled area. Applications must be made on a standard 3½ by 5-inch post card bearing the applicant's full name and address and listing first, second and third choice of dates. Applicants should indicate whether they will accept any other date if none of their choices are available.

At Thief Lake the reservation system will be in effect through October 20, but after that date stations will be available on a first-come basis. The system will be in effect at Lac qui Parle for the entire season but the area will be closed when the quota of geese has been taken.

Applications should be sent to: Controlled Hunt, Thief Lake WMA, NE Star Rt., Box 17, Middle River, MN 56737, or Controlled Hunt, Lac qui Parle WMA, Watson, MN 56295.

Only one postcard per hunter may be submitted to each area and only successful applicants will be notified. Those submitting more than one application per area will have all of their applications rejected.

Applications will be accepted on the basis of the earliest postmark. Applications postmarked before September 2 or after September 25 will not be accepted. In previous years, applications could be postmarked September 1. Since September 1 is Labor Day this year, September 2 was chosen as the earliest date for applications.

Successful applicants will be mailed reservations for the day of their hunt.

Hunters with reservations will be assigned shooting stations by a drawing at 5 a.m. on the morning of the hunt. Successful applicants may be accompanied by one or two guests.

Hunters without reservations will be assigned shooting stations in drawings to be held daily at 6 a.m. and 9 a.m. The 6 a.m. drawing is to fill shooting stations unassigned during the 5 a.m. drawing. The 9 a.m. drawing is to fill stations vacated by parties who have either bagged their limit of geese or expended a limit of six shells per party member.

Hunters at Thief Lake will be limited to one trip to the stations for the season, either as a guest or as a successful applicant. At Lac qui Parle, hunters will be permitted up to three trips to the stations either as guests or successful applicants. After all other hunters have been accommodated, persons will be eligible for the 6 a.m. and 9 a.m. drawings regardless of the number of previous visits.

This is the seventh year a controlled goose hunt has been held at Thief Lake and the fifth for Lac qui Parle.

Additional information on the controlled hunt and application procedures are available from the Thief Lake or Lac qui Parle wildlife management areas.

Minnesota High Schools Getting Ready For 1980 Football Season

by Larry Larson, Director of Information and Publication, Minnesota State High School League

It begins in August with sweat and strain, cut-off jerseys and two-a-day workouts. There are playbooks, water breaks — and still more sweat.

It ends on a chilly Friday night in mid-November with dreams fulfilled for five teams who had designs on capturing a state championship.

In between there are hopes and fears, dreams, desires, sudden death and sudden victory. There are brilliantly executed plays to win games and dropped passes in the end zone to lose them.

There are decisions — quarterbacks meeting with coaches, coaches meeting with coaches — the handshakes and holding of hands, the homecoming parades, the games, the dances, the no-tomorrow agony of defeat.

For more than three months, this is high school football in Minnesota, with nearly 500 teams battling for high honors. In 1979, on November 2, the field had been cut to 40 (when the state playoffs pairings were announced) and the playoffs got underway. Trophies to the winners were awarded November 16.

The trophies give the teams visible, tangible proof that they're No. 1, but the reward is won exhaustively and with great sacrifice. From the humid, hot sun-blazing days of August to the hazy, gray, chilly evenings of November, the primary goal is striving to win.

Conditioning drills for nearly 25,000 senior high school young men began this year on August 11 with 497 teams participating in the interscholastic program. The first games of the 1980 campaign for most of those teams will be on Friday, Aug. 29. The initial outings on that date are the first of more than 4,300 contests scheduled to be held, mostly on Fridays, August thru November.

All but 19 of the league's 516 member schools will compete in interscholastic football this season. And for the ninth consecutive year the MSHSL will conduct state football playoffs. Champions in five classifications — based on enrollment — will be named on November 14 when title games are held at various playing sites. Each of 487 conference-affiliated schools and 10 independent schools will be in a position to decide their own state playoff dreams on the playing field beginning with this month's opening game.

There is virtually no change in the format for the 1980 state football playoffs. In all five classifications conference champions or independents with outstanding records will be involved in the playdowns. In all 40 teams, eight in each class, will earn berths in this season's state playoffs.

The following reviews each of the five classes for 1980:

Class AA

Class AA football in Minnesota involves the state's largest enrollment schools. There are 83 such schools competing in the class, varying from the Lake South Conference's average enrollment of 1,892 students in the upper three grades to the 1,060 average enrollment of the schools who are members of the Northern Lakes circuit. Other conferences in the class include the Big Nine, Central Lakes, Lake North, Minneapolis, St. Paul, North Suburban and St. Paul Suburban. In addition to the nine conferences, Moorhead is entered as an independent.

Champions of five of those conferences — the Big Nine, Lake South, Lake North, Central Lakes and St. Paul automatically qualify for state playoff berths this year, while titlists from the Minneapolis and North Suburban loops will play off for a sixth berth. The seventh and eighth berths will be filled by champions of the Northern Lakes and St. Paul Suburban conferences, unless Moorhead qualifies as an independent. Should that happen, the victors of the Northern Lakes and St. Paul Suburban conferences would play off for the eighth spot. Moorhead would qualify for the state playoffs only if its record of losses does not exceed one or if its losses do not exceed the number of losses suffered by a conference champion with the most number of losses among all other conference winners.

Qualifying game or games would be played October 25. Quarterfinal state playoff games are scheduled for October 31 with semifinal contests slated for November 6 and 7.

Upper bracket pairings will find the Minneapolis-North Suburban winner meeting the Big Nine champion and the Lake South victor facing the Lake North kingpin. Lower bracket pairings find champions from the Central Lakes and St. Paul conferences squaring off and the Northern Lakes will meet the St. Paul Suburban, unless Moorhead qualifies. Then Moorhead would oppose the Northern Lakes - St. Paul Suburban winner.

State champions in the previous eight years of Class AA play have been the following: 1972, Minneapolis Washburn; 1973, Rochester John Marshall; 1974, Rochester John Marshall; 1975, Stillwater; 1976, White Bear Lake; 1977, Minneapolis Washburn; 1978 Edina West; 1979 Columbia Heights.

Class A

Defending champion Rochester Lourdes is one of 89 high schools competing in Class A. The class is divided into 12 conferences in four geographical groupings for purposes of pairings for state playoffs. There are no independents in this class. Four post-season qualifying games are needed to determine the eight state playoff qualifiers. Within each of the four groupings, the conferences drew for qualifying game byes.

Dates for qualifying games and state playoff quarterfinal games must be played no later that November 1. Semifinal and championship games are set for November 7 and 14.

Sites and dates for qualifying games will be determined by the conference committee of each group. Sites for quarterfinal state playoff games will be the participating school located most geographically west. The NSHSL will determine sites for semifinal and championship games.

Qualifying games for the 1980 state playoffs pit the Suburban West champion against the Central Gopher titlist with the winner facing the West Central kingpin in one upper bracket state playoff game. The other upper bracket qualifying game has the champions from the South Central and Missota conferences meeting with the winner to meet the Southwest conference winner in a state playoff quarterfinal game.

In the lower bracket the Don Bosco and Tri-Metro winners clash in one qualifying contest with the winner meeting the Rum River titlist in a state playoff quarterfinal test, and in the other game the champs of the Iron Range Seaway and Northwest loops will battle for the right to meet the Mid-State titlist in the other state playoff quarterfinal game.

Previous state champions in Class A have included the following: 1972, Burnsville; 1973, Eveleth; 1974, Alexandria; 1975, St. Thomas Academy; 1976, St. Peter; 1977, Fridley Grace; 1978, Fridley Grace; and 1979, Rochester Lourdes.

Class B

Fifteen conferences and seven independents comprise the 119-member Class B division. The 15 conference champions and one independent will participate in qualifying games which will lead to the eight state playoff berths.

Pairings for qualifying games have been determined on a geographical basis. Those pairings will be as follows for 1980:

Upper bracket — Arrowhead vs. North Star; Pine-to-Prairie vs. Heart O'Lakes; Central Minnesota vs. West Lake; and Independent vs. Great River.

Lower bracket — Wright County vs. Minnesota River; Little Sioux vs. Tomahawk; Gopher vs. Hiawatha Valley; and Wasioja vs. Mississippi Valley.

Host conference for the qualifying games will be the conference which traveled in the 1979 corresponding game. The bracket containing the independent school will feature the Central Minnesota and Great River conferences as the hosts determined by a coin flip.

State playoff quarterfinal games will be played at the school located geographically east of the other participating school. Quarterfinal games must be completed no later than November 1. Semifinal and championship games are slated for November 7 and 14 at sites determined by the MSHSL.

Previous state champions in Class B are as follows: 1972, Mountain Iron; 1973, New Prague; 1974, New Prague; 1975, Gaylord; 1976, Caledonia; 1977, Granite Falls; 1978, New Richland-Hartland; 1979, Gaylord.

Class C

Like in Class B, Class C will conduct qualifying games among conference champions which lead to the eight state playoff berths. Qualifying games are scheduled for October 28 at the school which is located most geographically west of the opposing school. State playoff quarterfinal games must be played no later than November 1 at the school most geographically east of the opposing school. Semifinal and championship games are set for November 7 and November 14 at sites determined by the MSHSL.

There are 13 conferences comprising the 93-member Class C division.

Pairings for qualifying games leading to state playoff berths are as follows:

Upper bracket — Top-of-the-State vs. Polar; Park Region vs. Bye; Tri-Valley vs. Bye; Prairie vs. 212.

Lower bracket — Star vs. Bye; Red Rock vs. Middle Eight; Valley vs. Centennial; River Valley vs. Maple Leaf.

Previous state champions in Class C are as follows: 1972, Gaylord; 1973, Gaylord; 1974, Battle Lake; 1975, Esko; 1976, New Richland-Hartland; 1977, Battle Lake; 1978, Alden-Conger; 1979, Bird Island-Lake Lillian.

Nine-Man

For the second consecutive season more than one-fifth of the state's football teams will be participating in the nine-man classification. An all-time high 113 schools compete in this division. This season 15 conferences and two independents will comprise the class.

Qualifying games for conference champions and independents must be completed by October 28. State playoff quarterfinal games must be played by November 1. The MSHSL will conduct the semifinal and championship games on November 7 and November 14 at sites to be determined.

Host teams for qualifying games will be the school located most geographically west of the other, while host teams for quarterfinal contests will be the school located most geographically east of the other.

This year's qualifying game pairings are as follows:

Upper bracket — Northern Lights vs. North Tri-County; No Name Conference vs. Agassiz North; Agassiz South vs. Heartland Six; Longbow vs. St. Louis County.

Lower bracket — Big Seven vs. Pheasant; Little Eight vs. Independent (if qualifies); Mini vs. Circle Eight; Southern Star vs. Border.

Previous state champions in the nine-man division include the following: 1972, Rothsay; 1973, Lake Benton; 1974, Lake Benton; 1975, Ruthton; 1976, Deer Creek; 1977, Deer Creek; 1978, Hoffman; 1979, Russell.

Playoff Attendance

Last November state football playoff attendance was 64,751, the third highest total in the eight-year history of playdowns. Over the eight-year period 388,301 spectators have witnessed playoff contests.

In 1979 there was a total of 499 schools competing. They represented 63 conferences and 11 were independents. This season 497 schools will compete. They represent 64 conferences and nine independents will partake in the program.

Cross Country Practice Begins For Prowlers

Cross country practice began Monday for Lincoln high school boys and girls in grades 9-12, but newly appointed Prowlers coach Lynn Dyer says that additional runners are welcome to join the team's workouts.

Persons who are interested in joining the Cross country team are invited to report to one of the Prowlers' 6 p.m. practices this week behind the National Guard armory in Thief River Falls.

TRF Youth Takes Part In Junior Trap Shoot Clinic

Sixteen-year-old Karl Bjorkman of Thief River Falls was among a select group of junior trapshooters who completed three days of advanced shooting instruction August 5-9 at St. Cloud.

The NRA 1980 Minnesota Junior Olympic shooting program (JOSP) trapshooting summer camp featured instruction in 16-yard singles, doubles and an opportunity to shoot international trap: Students came from Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, and North Dakota, and ranged in age from 13 to 20 years.

JOSP shooting camps are being held in 15 states this summer in the five shooting disciplines, rifle, pistol, running game target, trap and skeet. The St. Cloud program was the only one in the U.S. devoted exclusively to trapshooting.

The NRA hopes to help train an elite group of U.S. young athletes who will become competitive in world championship and Olympic shooting events. Students who complete a state JOSP camp will be eligible for selection for more intensive training at the U.S. Olympic training center in Colorado Springs, Colorado in 1981.

Vs. Action Realty In Fast Pitch Playoffs . . .

Schmidts, Cola-Cola Meet For Spot In The Finals

Thief River Falls fast pitch softball league post-season playoffs resume tonight (Wednesday) when a pair of once-beaten teams — Coca-Cola and Schmidts — meet at 7:30 p.m. on the fairgrounds fast pitch diamond.

The winner will earn a spot in the finals of the double-elimination event against unbeaten Action Realty. Date of the finals has not yet been set.

Latest results in the playoffs, which have faced several postponements, found Schmidts eliminating Melvies 3-2 and Action Realty outscoring Coca-Cola 7-6 in a Thursday doubleheader.

Melvies 2

Schmidts held off a seventh inning Melvies rally to claim a 3-2 win in Thursday night's doubleheader opener to end Melvies' league season.

First run of the game crossed the plate in the bottom of the fourth when Don Foss of Schmidts drew a walk and went all the way to third on Jim Sethre's bunt single. Rick Kofstad unleased a wild pitch to allow the run to score.

Schmidts added two runs in the fifth on a single by Howard Dalager, a double by Larry Coltom, a wild pitch and a ground-out.

Melvies challenged Schmidts' 3-0 lead in the top of the seventh as Karl Chromy led off with a double to left field, Del Beito tripled to right field for a run and Darwin Nelson smashed a double into right to cut the margin to 3-2.

But Nelson was thrown out trying to stretch his hit into a triple and Dalager pitched his way out of any further damage.

Action Realty 7
Coca-Cola 6

Action Realty earned a playoff championship game berth by beating Coca-Cola 7-6 in an eight-inning Thursday night doubleheader nightcap.

On the verge of losing, Action Realty gained a new lease on life in the bottom of the seventh inning when Howard Dalager, pressed into service by the shorthanded Action Realty squad, smacked a three-run home run over the left field fence to erase a 6-3 deficit. Al Erickson and Jeff Ulrich drew walks prior to Dalager's game-tying blast.

Three Coca-Cola errors in the eighth gave Action Realty the win. Mark Thorstad reached base on an error to start things and two throwing errors on Scott Bergland's sacrifice bunt sent Thorstad home with the winning run.

Coca-Cola had opened with a 3-0 first inning lead when Roger Cota and Tony Johnson singled and Paul Walker homered over the left field fence.

Action Realty got one run back in the fourth when Dalager walked and eventually scored on Thorstad's ground-out. The gap was cut to 3-2 in the fifth as Kelly Gutterud reached base on an error, advanced to second on a sacrifice bunt, moved to third on a wild pitch and scored on Jeff Ulrich's sacrifice fly.

Coca-Cola used the long ball to pull away in the sixth as Cota led off with a homer, Johnson singled and Gordie Peterson drilled a two-run shot over the fence for a 6-3 lead.

DNR Will Begin To Accept 1981 Tree Orders September 1, 1980

Minnesota Department of Natural Resources announced that orders for tree planting stock to be shipped next spring will be accepted by the DNR forestry division starting Sept. 1.

Orders will be taken until March 15, 1981, or until supplies are exhausted. In 14 southeastern counties, however, orders will be taken only until January 31, 1981.

Seedlings are sold for the purposes of reforestation, windbreaks, shelterbelts, erosion control, soil and water conservation and for permanent food and cover for wildlife.

The trees may not be planted for ornamental purposes nor can they be resold, given away or be removed with the roots attached.

Most species of evergreen (conifer) seedlings are available from DNR nurseries. The conifer seedlings will sell for $50 per thousand.

Some species of leaf-bearing (deciduous) seedlings are also available and they will remain at the same price as last year — $60 per thousand.

Orders are accepted on a first come, first served basis. Those planning to order trees should send their order in as soon as possible, foresters advised.

Minimum order is 500 trees.

Price lists and order blanks can be obtained from DNR forestry offices, ASCS (Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service) offices, SCS (Soil Conservation Services) offices, county extension offices or by contacting DNR-Forestry, Centennial Building, St. Paul, MN 55155. Phone 612-296-4479.

Summer Basketball League Completed

Following the completion of the 1980 Thief River Falls Backcourt Club summer basketball program, club officials this week termed the first-year venture that attracted approximately 200 youngsters, "a big success."

"Backcourt Club officials would like to thank all the volunteers, coaches, parents and youngsters who worked hard to make the first Backcourt Club summer program a success," reported Dave Vagle, club spokesman. "It's through a united effort that the program can be a success."

Frank Womack headed the summer basketball program as Backcourt Club president. Dean Hams is the organization's vice-president while Vagle serves as secretary-treasurer.

Over $1,000 was raised through the Backcourt Club popcorn sales this summer, with the funds scheduled to be used to purchase uniforms for the boys and girls elementary school basketball teams.

State Fast Pitch Softball Tournament . . .

Coca-Cola Takes Fourth Place

Coca-Cola of Thief River Falls was a fourth place finisher Sunday in the rain-plagued 1980 Minnesota Class B state fast pitch softball tournament at Montrose.

The 16-team double-elimination weekend tournament was altered to a one-day single elimination affair Sunday when wind and rain brought a halt to Saturday's games.

Coca-Cola had its first round game Saturday against Elks River Legion stopped and restarted from the beginning Sunday when the Thief River Falls squad emerged with a 4-0 victory. Coca-Cola added a 5-4 11-inning win over Medina before dropping a 3-2 decision to Murphy City of Stillwater when former Thief River Falls resident Bob Brodin produced a two-run, game-tying single in the fifth inning for the winners.

Reef Lounge of Duluth handled Coca-Cola 10-0 in the third place game.

Murphy City and Hardees of Hutchinson, two teams who had originally been eliminated during Saturday's rain-soaked play, gained new life when tournament officials began anew Sunday and both gained the finals for the berth in the Northwest region tournament this weekend in Fargo. Murphy City won the state title, 1-0.

Coca-Cola made it to the state tournament by winning the District 7 Class B tournament played in Thief River Falls a week earlier. Coca-Cola beat Frazee 3-1 and 5-3 in the finals of the double-elimination event.

1980 Wild Rice Season To Have 72-Hour Notice

Minnesota wild rice harvesters were advised that the Department of Natural Resources will open the season with 72 hours advance notice this year.

Ron Libertus, director of the DNR's special services section, said the 72 hours notice is something new this year and he urged harvesters to be alert for the opening season announcement by the news media.

Also new this year, said Libertus, will be the formation of an advisory committee comprised of local citizens in wild rice areas. He said he will rely on recommendations from the committee in setting the opening date and other regulations.

He said his office is already receiving calls from harvesters regarding the opening of the season but it appears now that it will open sometime in the latter part of August.

He noted that harvesters are required to purchase a state license ($4) and abide by numerous other regulations. A copy of those regulations can be obtained by writing: DNR Special Services Section, Box 4 Centennial Building, St. Paul, MN 55155.

He cautioned those planning to harvest on Indian reservations to check with reservation business offices since regulations differ from one reservation to another.

CASH League Loses St. James As A Member

Central Amateur Senior Hockey League lost a member when the St. James Flyers announced that the club has asked for a one-year leave of absence from the five-year-old league.

In a prepared statement, team secretary John Kinley cited "difficulties in raising sufficient funds to operate a senior level team and in obtaining necessary vonunteer manpower," as reasons behind the request.

The league is now made up of the Warroad Lakers, St. Boniface Mohawks, Steinbach Huskies and East Kildonan-Elmwood Millionaires. The league is expected to adopt an interlocking schedule with the Thunder Bay Twins. Last year the Twins played 16 games with the points counting in the CASH League standings.

District 7 Champion Swenson Plumbing 1-2 In State Meet

Swenson Plumbing, the first Thief River Falls team to win a District 7 tournament title, lost two out of three starts over the weekend while participating in the 1980 Class B Minnesota state men's slow pitch softball tournament at Austin.

Rain and high wind raised havoc with the tournament. Swenson Plumbing lost its opener to Monticello 17-12 Saturday, but stayed alive in the double-elimination tournament by beating Princeton 5-3 later that same day. New Brighton eliminated Swenson Plumbing 24-15 Sunday.

A week earlier Swenson Plumbing emerged as champion in the 29-team Class B District 7 tournament at Detroit Lakes by winning seven of eight games in the double-elimination event.

Swenson Plumbing reached the District 7 finals as the tournament's only remaining unbeaten team with wins over Red Lake Falls Headquarters 15-5, Dahlgren of Crookston 4-3, Aho & Sons of Frazee 11-1, Lakes Sports of Detroit Lakes 8-4 and Hillcrest Mink Ranch of Detroit Lakes 15-11.

Hillcrest Mink Ranch came back through the loser's bracket to reach the finals and handed Swenson Plumbing a 7-1 setback, but the Thief River Falls ball club rebounded to edge Hillcrest Mink Ranch 8-7 in the tournament finale.

Other Thief River Falls league teams playing in the Class B District 7 tournament were McDonald's-Dallmann, American Legion Raiders, Furuseth-Nelson, TRF Merchants, Hobo Haus and Wagon Wheel.

The Class C District 7 tournament was played last weekend in Crookston. Thief River Falls league teams were all eliminated during the weather-plagued tournament, including the St. Hilaire Bears, Schumacher's Tireland, First Northwestern Insurance Agency, Consumer's Co-op, Coca-Cola, First Federal, Hardees and Great Northwest Agency.

American State Bank of Erskine won the Class C District 7 tournament in unbeaten fashion with wins over Ricard Sodding of Crookston 17-1, Noel's of Bemidji 3; Onigum of Bemidji 8-7 and Shelly 4.

Crookston will host the 1980 Minnesota Class C men's and women's state slow pitch softball tournaments this weekend.

Ten-Game LHS Activity Passes Now Available

The tickets are priced $13 for adults, $8.50 for Northland community college and Thief River Falls area vocational-technical school students and $6.50 for high school, middle school and elementary school students.

Steel Shot Rule Covers Refuges

Final steel shot regulations for national wildlife refuges in the North Central Region were announced by Harvey Nelson, regional director for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (FWS) in Minneapolis.

Nelson said steel shot will be required — with no gauge exceptions — when hunting waterfowl or coots on the designated refuges during the 1980-81 waterfowl hunting seasons, adding that steel shot rules will be enforced by federal agents on all refuges and land units managed by the FWS.

Steel shot will also be mandatory — again, with no gauge exceptions — when hunting waterfowl on designated non-toxic zones, which were identified and described in the June 5, 1980 Federal Register.

Hunters are prohibited from possessing shotgun shells containing lead or other toxic shot when hunting waterfowl or coots on all of the national wildlife refuges listed below. The FWS said waterfowl hunters should check with respective refuge managers for conditions special to each refuge.

Regional refuges requiring steel shot: Sherburne national wildlife refuge, Minnesota; Tamarac national wildlife refuge, Minnesota; Shiawassee national wildlife refuge, Michigan; Ottawa national wildlife refuge, Ohio; Crab Orchard national wildlife refuge, Illinois; Chatauqua national wildlife refuge, Illinois; Upper Mississippi River wildlife and fish refuge, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois and Iowa; Swan Lake and Mingo refuges, and all other FWS lands described in state regulations, Missouri.

Nelson said waterfowl hunters should check zone regulations that describe other federal and state lands where non-toxic shot is required. The zones include, among other areas, all waterfowl production areas (WPAs) in Minnesota, state wildlife management areas in some states, and other waterfowl hunting areas. State conservation officers in those states supporting the steel shot program, and federal agents will enforce steel shot regulations on land units within the designated zones, Nelson said.

Portions of national wildlife refuges which are open to hunting of migratory game birds are designated by signs and-or delineated on maps. Information and maps are available at refuge headquarters offices.

SEVEN MEMBER TEAM of representatives from the Agricultural Finance corporation of Kenya, Africa, will be in the Thief River Falls area this week to observe farming practices and rural credit procedures. Leader of the group is John Thiongo, branch manager for the corporation from Nakuru, Kenya. While here the group is being assisted by Phil Bergland, manager of the county ASCS office, who spent five years in Kenya working with agricultural credit and was acquainted with two members of the tour group. Thiongo said the government operated corporation makes loans to farmers for land and equipment purchase, development, livestock acquisition and crop production at interest rates from nine to 11 per cent. It has been in operation since Kenya received its independence from Great Britain in 1963. In addition to the week at Thief River Falls, the group has been at Penn State university in Pennsylvania and will spend time in Syracuse, N.Y., Texas and Washington, D.C., before returning to Kenya early in October. Members of the group are pictured with Duane Vatsaas of rural Thief River Falls who showed them hay-handling equipment in his dairy operation.

HEADACHE? BACKACHE? NECK PAIN?

The above are just three of the problems that bother many people and that can be helped through Chiropractic care. If you have one of them there are three popular ways to take care of it.

One: Do nothing and pray that it goes away.

Two: Take pain pills that will cover up the symptoms for awhile and then pray that it goes away.

Three: Get a Chiropractic examination followed by Chiropractic care and have an excellent chance of getting better.

FEEDER PIG SHOW Sunday at the Pennington county fairgrounds attracted a good number of entries from pork producers in the area served by Northern Minnesota Pork Producers association. The association formed last year sponsored the feeder pig show and sale in the expectation that it will become an annual event. The feeder pigs being judged in the above photo comprised the first lot judged for the day and weighed in at an average of nearly 48 pounds.

LIMITED BLEACHER SPACE was well filled and more spectators stood around the show ring as the first feeder pig show was held Sunday at the Pennington county fairgrounds under sponsorship of the Northern Minnesota Pork Producers association. The show attracted a good number of entries and the sale which followed was also considered highly successful by the sponsoring organization which plans to make the show and sale an annual event.

Housing Agency And City Air Rezoning Issue

the property owners in the proposed area of the project, appeared before those present, requesting a recess from the meeting for further discussion of the issue. Following the introduction of a resolution from alderman Bill Penning to grant the recess, which was followed by a second from alderman Restad, the motion carried.

Regular agenda items continued at that time, when the meeting was moved to the council chambers of the city auditorium to grant property owners and developers the recess requested. And, following an hour of discussion, Olson reappeared before council members to request that council table the rezoning issue for further discussion.

"We would like to check with the Minnesota Housing and Finance agency to see why the particular site selected for the project is so important," he said.

Alderman Bill Penning introduced the resolution at that time to table the issue for further discussion at the next regular city council meeting August 26.

Following a second from alderman Dr. Don Goodrich and a unanimous roll call in favor of the request, the motion carried.

Included in Olson's request was that the mayor, city council and the city planner would contact the Minnesota Housing and Finance agency for further discussion, according to Mayor Carlson.

In other matters listed on the agenda for the adjourned meeting, Jim E. Walker, city engineer, discussed the Highway 59 south frontage road project which had been previously discussed at an informal morning meeting July 28 (among various other meetings). During that meeting, alternatives to the project were discussed as well as the problems involved, including public safety in the area, and a review of cost figures was made.

At an adjourned August 18 meeting, department of transportation representatives Bob Wolfe, Cliff Larson and Mike NyGaard were present to discuss the project. During the meeting, Wolfe, district highway engineer with the Minnesota Department of Transportation (Mn-DOT) from Bemidji, indicated that state funds would be short in the future for the project and that monies would be available for safety and maintenance on a priority basis.

Discussion during the August 18 meeting concerning the project centered around whether or not the improvements proposed for Highway 59 south should be done utilizing a rural design or an urban type design highway. Wolfe suggested that improvements on Highway 59 south could be done on a spot safety program and that $50,000 of state funds may be available for safety purposes for the project.

Following a statement from Walker last evening on Mn-DOT's and the planning commission's recommendation for a rural concept for the project, which would include right-hand turning lanes, a left-hand turning lane, and limited accesses, alderman J. J. Womack introduced the resolution to accept the recommendations, and the motion carried.

It was noted in the discussion that the urban design would be more expensive since it would include curb and gutter.

A second resolution also followed from the one selecting a rural concept which directed the city planner and engineer to contact McDonald's restaurant for the purpose of securing a frontage road in front of the restaurant for safety reasons. The motion, introduced by alderman Penning, followed with a second from alderman Restad and carried.

In matters concerning the parking assessment district project which has been discussed and studied at many previous regular and special meetings, a project hearing date was set September 22 at 7:30 p.m. for the project.

Don Stewart of Stewart and Walker Inc., was present at the regular August 12 city council meeting to discuss the status of the project. At the meeting, Stewart explained that representatives from the Northwestern hospital board had met with parking assessment district project representatives when it was explained that the hospital desired to reduce the cost of their participation in the project to $50,000. It was also suggested that the project include 100 feet of property on Main avenue. At the meeting, a hearing date for the project was set for September 8 to consider final adoption of an assessment roll for the properties included in the project.

However, during last evening's meeting, the date was changed from September 8 to September 22 due to the inclusion of the additional property proposed for the project.

Next regular city council meeting is scheduled for August 26 in the council chambers of the city auditorium.

Peterson Farm Honored For Beautification

The Petersons have lined both sides of their yard crossing with field stone rip rap and still have some finishing work to do on one side of the crossing. It provides an eye-catching entrance to the approximately two acres of wooded yard containing a large vegetable garden, four small flower beds and the two-story home with flower borders and hanging planters.

Each year the yard seems to have expanded as a little more area has been kept trimmed. Tree planting to provide a windbreak on the southwest is planned for next spring with the ground already prepared. Other attractions in the yard are bird houses, feeders and birdbath and a flag pole. Ceramic items made by Sharon add interest to the flower beds.

"Some people might not like living this far out of town but I love it," Sharon said. "We've had moose in our back yard and grouse on the front steps, and there are often deer and always birds around."

Sharon enjoys macrame and her ceramic work as well as interior design and decorating during the non-yard months of the year. Roger likes to hunt and fish when time permits and the boys have been involved in the basketball program at St. Hilaire elementary school.

The Peterson family has been active in the county soil and water conservation district for many years and Norman previously served on the district board. Conservation practices on the farm include a stock water pit, field ditching, crop rotation, legume plow-down and tree planting.

County History Group To View Slide Series

Dean Paskewitz of Thief River Falls will show slides from his travels as well as the Thief River Falls area when the Pennington county historical society meets Thursday, August 28, at 8 p.m. in the city auditorium meeting room.

According to Mrs. Inga Geving, president of the society, Paskewitz has created the slide series with taped music accompaniment. Historical society members are encouraged to attend and others interested in history are invited. A meeting of the board of directors at 7:30 p.m. will precede the membership meeting.

Social Security Men Here Tues.

Ted Hoversten and Neil Rowe, field representatives of the Grand Forks social security office will be in Thief River Falls at the city auditorium August 26 from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.

JIM KREMER

A man with positive farm proposals.

Our family farm is fast becoming extinct. To put an end to this trend I propose the following measures.

1. We should only re-evaluate land when it is sold. If the speculator pays $1,000 an acre for land he should be taxed at that rate while the neighboring farmer's land evaluation should not change.
2. If a retiring farmer sells his land to a young farmer he should not have to pay state taxes on either the principal or the interest from that sale.
3. We should abolish the sales tax on used farm machinery, used cars and trucks and on all used tools and equipment.

Vote JIM KREMER in the Sept. 9 DFL primary and help keep our family farms and rural communities alive in 1-B.

Cite Farmers For Wrestling 250-Pound Hog

the law. The chief noted that any participants in the event would be subject to being charged with a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of up to $500 or 90 days in jail.

Following a brief discussion, Fincher announced that a team from the pork producers would take part in one hog wrestle and would then be cited by the police department. No further competition would be permitted to avoid flagrant violation of the law. At about 7 p.m. the four-man team jumped into the muddy ring, caught the muddy hog and hoisted it into the barrel, then tipped the barrel to let it amble out. The act took less than 25 seconds.

Linda Joppru, president of the local humane society, said the purpose of the local society is to provide information to the public regarding animal abuse and cruelty. She said she advised Stalboerger of the law so that the association would be aware that what it planned to do was illegal.

In regard to the law forbidding the act, she quoted executive director Zegart as stating, "The physiological make-up of the pig lends itself to going into stress shock when it is subjected to harrassment and abuse such as wrestling."

To the suggestion that hog capturing is a day to day activity on the farm, he replied, "Fun and games at the pig's expense is not part of the normal day for the hog producer."

Kurt Marben, attorney for the pork producers association, said a plea of not guilty has been entered for the defendants with the county court.

Whatever happens after that first appearance Thursday, the wrestled hog will not be available to testify. Along with the others which had been on hand for the competition Sunday it went to market for slaughter Monday morning.

PREVENTING SPORTS INJURIES

No one would think of playing tackle football without wearing shoulder pads and a helmet. Yet, far too many youngsters play contact sports, without wearing protection for their mouths. This results in all too many cases of split lips, broken, chipped and knocked out teeth. For example, fifty-two per cent of all football injuries occur in unprotected faces and mouths.

The best way to prevent all this mouth damage, is to wear a mouth protector. Bars across football helmets don't do the same job. They don't protect the teeth and jaws from an upward blow on the chin - only from a blow straight against the face. Dental injuries to football players wearing proper mouth protectors have been almost completely eliminated.

Most old-style mouthguards, such as those we see boxers using, are not very easy to wear because they are bulky. Talking is just about impossible. Many players prefer to talk and be comfortable and risk the chance of injury rather than wear one. However, a modern mouthguard, made to an accurate model of a boy's mouth doesn't interfere with mouth breathing, stays in place when the mouth is opened, allows clear speech and is comfortable.

He first heard and sang and played the organ with two Saastad young girls in 1909; namely, Olga (Saustad) Maruska of Minneapolis and Christine (Saastad) Jevne of Holt at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Saastad, which now is the home of Mr. and Mrs. Orville Larson. Mrs. Jevne did not remember the song. His next move is to have a granddaughter copy it from a recording. Lorentson will be on the grandstand August 28 at the state fair. Why did Lorentson travel from Strathcona to Holt, a long trip in pioneer days? Trail Native Dies In Oregon

Funeral services were held at the Redeemer Lutheran church in Springfield, Ore., July 28, for Arthur Anderson, native of the Trail area, who died there July 23 after a long illness. Interment was in Memorial Gardens cemetery there.

Arthur Anderson was born March 3, 1909. He was married to Audrey Cooly March 23, 1963. Survivors include his wife Audrey as well as a stepson and two sisters: Mrs. Knute (Etta) Flateland and Mrs. Bennie (Lily) Torkelson, both of Trail, along with a number of nieces, nephews and cousins.

Those attending the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. Donavon Moy and Gary Moy of Detroit Lakes, Mr. and Mrs. David Anderson and Adolph Hofstad of Oklee, and Mrs. Howard Flateland.

Albert Aaknes attended the funeral for Gunder Lolland on Saturday forenoon at the Valle church. Gunder Lolland died from a heart attack. He was a brother of Ted Lolland and Mrs. Helga Lambert and Lena Spencer, all of Oklee. Our sympathy to all.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Hovelsrud, Mrs. Duane Rouland, Lori and Marci returned home after spending two weeks visiting relatives in Oregon and Washington. They attended Lorena's family reunion at Madras, Ore., where nine brothers and sisters and all their families and a cousin gathered for a three-day reunion. There were 67 in attendance, the first time all brothers and sisters were together in 28 years. Another highlight of the trip was quite spectacular. Only thirty minutes after they had arrived in Portland, a friend was waiting to take them out to dinner. Shortly after they were seated at their table they realized Mt. St. Helen was erupting again. They had a ring side view all through dinner. The fumes were reaching 65,000 feet in height and the view was beautifully clear. This was the first time the people of Portland had seen a clear view of Mt. St. Helen's actions. At Tacoma, Wash., they visited Alfred and Alvina Hovelsrud, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Wimsley, Mr. and Mrs. Rocco Cellitte, Ed Offner and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Pavalka.

Mr. and Mrs. Dwight Carlson and family, Norma Carlson and Melissa Carlson of Thief River Falls joined other relatives at the Manda Carlson home of rural Fertile last Sunday at a family gathering in honor of Manda Carlson's 81st birthday.

Understanding Your Child

When it comes to education, your kids can't be turned on if you're turned off. Parents' attitudes, say psychologists, are a major influence on the child, not only regarding education, but also in other aspects of growing up.

What constitutes a positive parental attitude toward education? Involvement in parent-teacher and similar school programs, interest in the child's curriculum, concern for the home atmosphere where the child spends time learning, doing homework.

A quiet, well-lit, attractive study area is important. A small home library of good reference literature can also be helpful.

Another way to develop a good rapport with your children, to show them you care, is to occasionally buy them small and useful gifts that are fun to use and create an atmosphere of pleasant associations with learning.

For example, there's now an attractive line of school supplies featuring clever and colorful Strawberry Shortcake characters from St. Regis Paper Co.'s Nifty brand. The characters, developed by American Greetings Corp., promise to be as popular with children as Holly Hobby has been with mothers and daughters for years. Strawberry Shortcake can be found on pencil tablets, subject and theme books, stenographers' notebooks, filler paper and pocket portfolios.

Tasteful school supplies can help make homework more fun.

These cheerful creations can help your youngsters feel more cheerful about school.

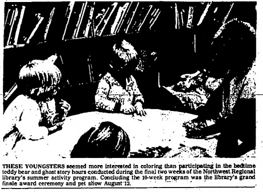
FINISHED PRODUCTS made by the children participating in the Northwest Regional library's 10-week activity program were displayed during the library's grand-finale award ceremony and pet show August 13. Activities included the creation of creatures from soap, and cardboard and papier-mache' projects.



THESE YOUNGSTERS seemed more interested in coloring than participating in the bedtime teddy bear and ghost story hours conducted during the final two weeks of the Northwest Regional library's summer activity program. Concluding the 10-week program was the library's grand finale award ceremony and pet show August 13.

70 Children Involved In Library Event

Over 70 children and 20 pets attended the Northwest regional library's grand finale award ceremony and pet show August 13.

The show was the culmination of 10 weeks of activity at the library under the theme, "Discover Every Creature Under the Sun. . . at Your Library." During the 10 weeks, 1,393 books were read by 100 participants. At the award ceremony explorer awards were presented to the 77 readers who reached their personal goals.

In the 10 weeks preceding the ceremony, children enjoyed creating creatures from soap, cardboard and papier-mache. They also identified animal tracks, learned about pet care and took turns batting a pinata to release the treats it contained.

The summer also featured a trip to Winnipeg in which 38 children joined library supervisors. They visited the Assiniboine park zoo and the museum of man and nature. During the final two weeks, children were invited to two bedtime teddy bear and ghost story hours.

All the summer group activity is over at the library but the staff is hopeful that all their new reading friends will visit again during the school year.

Loan Rates For '80 Crop Grain Are Announced

Alton Nybladh, chairman of the Marshall County ASCS Committee, has announced the following increased commodity loan rates for 1980 crop grain:

Wheat increased from $2.55 to $3.06 per bu.; barley increased from $1.64 to $1.74 per bu.; oats increased from $.98 to $1.06 per bu.; rye increased from $1.78 to $1.92 per bu.; corn increased from $1.79 to $2.15 per bu.; and soybeans increased from $4.36 to $4.88 per bu.

Producers wishing to take out a commodity loan may do so by bringing their bin measurements to the county ASCS office. Because of the severe drought in the area Nybladh recommends that area farmers take the test weight of their grain prior to requesting a loan. In many cases barley and oats have been light in test weight.

Heart Ass'n. Surpasses 1980 Campaign Goal

American Heart association, Minnesota Affiliate Inc., raised $2,033,000, surpassing its 1980 state heart fund campaign goal of $1.85 million, according to James Pehler, 1980 state chairman.

"This is the first time in the Minnesota affiliate's history it has passed the 2 million dollar mark in fund raising and the 14th consecutive year the affiliate has surpassed its campaign goal," Pehler said.

He added that this is a 20 per cent increase in campaign funds over 1979 with local Heart Fund volunteers in 65 of Minnesota's 87 counties raising more dollars than ever before.

"This enables the Minnesota affiliate to increase funds for heart research projects, community programs and professional and public health education programs for the 1980-81 fiscal year," Pehler said.

He noted that to surpass the goal, more than 60,000 Minnesota volunteers donated their time, energy and enthusiasm to raise funds and to distribute life-saving information about heart attack and stroke.

Pehler added that although the Heart Association has helped bring about a 20 per cent reduction in the heart disease death rate in the last 10 years, heart disease is still the nation's number one health problem, affecting more than 40 million Americans and 500,000 Minnesotans.

American Heart Association, Minnesota Affiliate, Inc., is a statewide health agency and is part of the American Heart Association which is represented by 55 affiliates in all states and territories of the U.S. It is the only statewide voluntary health agency dedicated to the reduction of premature death and disability caused by heart and blood vessel diseases.

Plan Culvert Replacement At Newfolden

Bids on 13 road and bridge improvement projects, estimated at $3.5 million, in 15 counties will be received by the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT) at the state transportation building in St. Paul until 9:30 a.m. Friday.

Included among the projects are bridge deck restoration, bridge removal, bituminous surfacing, culverts, traffic signals, signs and barriers, erosion repair, turn lanes and lighting.

In Marshall county improvements call for a culvert to be replaced on highway 59 in Newfolden, 0.8 mile north of county state-aid highway (CSAH) 28. Work is scheduled to begin September 29 and to be completed within 20 working days.

10-Ton Limits Okayed On Four Area Highways

Partial approval of the request by Sen. Marv Hanson of Hallock and Rep. Myron Nysether of Ross for a provisional additional 10-ton road system for northwestern Minnesota has been approved by the Minnesota department of transportation.

In a joint statement issued Tuesday, the legislators said they had been notified that their request had "for the most part" been approved. Approved for immediate 10-ton limits are highway 11 from Baudette to Greenbush, highway 32 from Greenbush to Thief River Falls, highway 59 from Thief River Falls to Erskine and highway 175 from the West state line to highway 59.

Requested but not approved by the transportation department were highway 32 from Thief River Falls to Marcoux corner, highway 89 from Grygla to Redlake and highways 72 and 46 from Baudette to Deer River. These latter routes are to be considered for elevation to 10-ton status later in the year.

Truckers may obtain the $5 monthly permit required by stopping at the department of transportation offices at Crookston or Bemidji. The procedure will be the same as that followed during temporary 10-ton limits last fall.

"I am very pleased that the department has been responsive to the transportation needs of northwestern Minnesota," Rep. Nysether said. "The 10-ton system will definitely help the grain haulers as well as the elevators and farmers."

"We are hopeful that the routes not designated presently can be added at a later time," Sen. Hanson said. "With the stiffer penalties for overweight loads now in effect, the 10-ton system is especially helpful for grain haulers."

Dying Teenagers Feel Abandoned And Dependent

by Jeanne Hanson
'U'M News Service

Teenagers with life-threatening illnesses begin to take on the priorities of much older people. They place more value on meaningful relationships with family and friends and on small experiences like the joy of taking a walk. They come to consider some of the activities of their friends silly. . . .

This is one of the insights Robert Blum has discovered in his work with dying adolescents at University of Minnesota hospitals. Blum, a professor of pediatrics and a fellow at the university's center for youth development and research, works with teenagers who have illnesses like cancer, cystic fibrosis, polio, with lung disease and arthritis. He discusses their illnesses with them and is available to talk with them when they are about to die. He has videotaped some of their discussions.

The teenagers' attitudes toward death don't seem to follow a set progression and depend somewhat on the illness. "Dying is not a straight line trajectory," Blum said. "They are ill periodically, and then they may get better for a while."

Even if the teenagers aren't completely aware of their diagnosis, they can sense an impending crisis in the way people treat them. One told Blum, "The doctor used to come in three times a day and there were a lot of tests. Now he sticks his head in the door to say hi about once a week." Others who get better periodically can have periods of denial.

But denial is less open to those with chronic illnesses like cystic fibrosis, which is present from birth. Most who have it have known about it since early childhood. One told Blum on the videotape, "No one can think about death all the time, but it will get you in the end." The "personable fable" of "it won't happen to me" can't be sustained by the kids after a while, Blum said. But they may focus not on death per se but on the manner of death and say, "I don't want to die like so-and-so died."

Word about death travels fast, especially among teenagers with a particular illness, Blum said. All the teenagers with cystic fibrosis know about the death of one of them within an hour, serve as pallbearers in the funeral and even try to guess who will die next. They support one another, although the relationship may be a bit too somber for them to think of it as friendship, he said.

Friends and school are sources of considerable anxiety for these kids, Blum said. "All your friends just forget who you are because they expect you to go back to the hospital again," one girl told Blum. Another, a 15-year-old who discovered he had cancer, said before his surgery, "It got around school pretty fast. Some people wouldn't even talk to me."

The needs to be dependent and to feel independent cross crucially in these teenagers. Their parents tend to treat them as dependent, a problem accentuated in certain illnesses that slow down physical maturity, Blum said. The kids don't like this, but at the same time they want their parents to take the responsibility for the illness, he said. One teenager, crippled by polio and a lung disease, just wanted to be able to live alone in an apartment.

Another said he wasn't support to find out about his surgery until his parents got there but "I finally got it out of the doctor myself." He didn't like the hospital rule that required him to wait for his parents but seemed comfortable with the policy that required his own approval before a bone marrow transplant operation. "Most hospitals don't send kids to surgery, especially such painful surgery, if they don't say yes," Blum said. If they aren't ready psychologically, there can be "too many unexplained deaths during surgery," he said.

Other psychological aspects of severe illnesses are significant, too, Blum said. During one teenager's most severe episode, he told everyone that he would get better. He did. Later he said, "It's over," and died within 48 hours.

The "home dying" program shows this phenomenon too, according to Blum. Most people in the last stages of a terminal illness die within 24 to 48 hours of returning home from the hospital.

Another program has now been launched for the teenagers less close to death, Blum said. The university and Outward Bound have arranged outdoor wilderness experiences and urban explorations for teams of chronically ill adolescents throughout May and June.

But a lot more needs to be done, according to Blum. For example, more group counseling for families should be available, he said. Parents tend to be afraid to show their own hurt, feeling that they should be strong for their children's sake. "This cuts off a lot of communication with the kids," he said. "The kids end up trying to make it easier for the parents."

Brothers and sisters may suffer from loss of attention and freedom too, he said. Family problems, including the probability of divorce, may also increase after the death of a teenage family member, Blum said.

Escort Service Extended At 'U'M Campus

The University of Minnesota will extend campus escort services for students, faculty and employees through the fall, and hours for the University Hospitals escort service will be increased, Nils Hasselmo, vice president for administration and planning, announced.

"There was never a question of dropping the service," said University Police Chief Eugene Wilson. "The service is not being used as much as we'd like, but we hope that when fall quarter begins we'll have additional requests."

The escort service was started in February after several reported campus assaults in late 1979. Persons traveling alone or in pairs around the Minneapolis campus and surrounding areas have been encouraged through campus publicity to call 376-WALK for an escort. Callers are driven or walked to their destination.

The University Police escort service is available Sunday through Thursday evenings from 8 p.m. to 2 a.m.

Visitors, patients and employees of University Hospitals have a seven-day-a-week escort service, available by calling 373-8383. Its current hours of operation are 5 p.m. to 7 a.m. Beginning August 18, the hospital escort service will operate 24 hours a day.

The hospital escort service links University Hospitals to the Oak Street ramp, the river flats parking areas and other Minneapolis campus parking lots and ramps.

Signs, Posters Illegal Along State Highways

Signs and posters along or on state highways and right-of-way are illegal and will be removed, according to the Minnesota department of transportation (Mn-DOT).

Minnesota statute (chapter 160) makes it unlawful to place or maintain an advertisement within the limits of any highway. It is also illegal to paint, print, place or affix an advertisement on any object within the limits of a highway.

The 1971 Minnesota outdoor advertising control act (chapter 173) states that advertising cannot be erected or maintained on private land along state roadways, except in commercial and industrial areas. The act prohibits advertising on trees, shrubs or utility poles. The painting or drawing of advertising upon rocks or other natural objects is also illegal.

In order to place advertising on private land along state roadways in commercial and industrial areas, sign owners need the consent of the property owner or occupant, permission of the local zoning authority, and a permit from Mn-DOT.

Today your boy's world is a wonderful place of trees and blue sky, puppy dogs and best friends. Perhaps his greatest decision is which tree to climb and how high to go.

But it won't always be so. As he grows, his choices must grow in scope and seriousness also.

Just as you today can't choose for him which tree to climb and how high; so also, as he grows in wisdom and stature, you cannot choose for him the proper values and goals for his life. But you can guide and direct him in the ways you have found to be good and right.

Attend the church or synagogue of your choice and take your child with you.

ONE WOMAN'S OPINION

Energy Risks 'And Rewards 'A Look At The Figures

By Sandra Kelfer

Kelfer

During one five-week period, our country experienced the death of its first woman coal miner in a mine accident. Two people were killed by a propane gas explosion. Fifteen people were injured by a natural gas explosion. Four crew members of an oil tanker were killed and 39 lost at sea when the tanker collided with a freighter.

Some of these people were workers, others were passersby. But dead is dead. And by whatever means, these people lost their lives because of energy production or consumption. However, there wasn't a single voice raised in opposition to the use of coal, oil or gas.

The use of nuclear energy results in the least loss of lives of any of our energy sources. Per unit of energy produced, fewer workers are killed in the extraction and transportation of uranium than with the similar operations for coal or oil.

No member of the public has ever been killed from the operation of a nuclear power plant in constrast to the thousands who die every year from the air pollution emitted from plants burning coal and oil.

But no one seems to care about the thousands who die every year. People are more concerned with that one-in a-trillion chance that 1,000 people may die from a nuclear reactor fuel meltdown. It's a hypothetical accident. I haven't heard much concern about the possible (although unlikely) failure of a hydroelectric dam which could result in 200,000 deaths. And I haven't heard much about the possible explosion of a liquid natural gas tanker which could wipe out a port city.

Why not shut down all our energy supply systems or at least the most dangerous ones? Because nothing is perfect and everyone knows that. And because despite the risks, we receive a lot of benefits from our consumption of energy.

But what about the basics? Many of us tend to forget about the electric-driven pumps that supply millions of people with water and remove their wastes. Many forget about the electric-powered lights, refrigerators and other useful devices. Some people suggest that we should return to a "simple life." I say fine for them, but I've already been there.

Nuclear power plants will never be perfectly safe, but they are safer than the alternatives.

Sander Kelfer is a nuclear engineer and energy consultant.

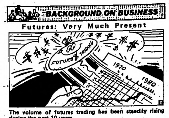
BACKGROUND ON BUSINESS

Futures: Very Much Present



The volume of futures trading has been steadily rising during the past 10 years.

As trading in futures markets continues to grow, so does the number of investors who are making it their business to find out more about them.

In addition to markets in such traditional commodities as grains, markets now exist in various interest rate futures, precious metals and forest products.

Commodity futures exchanges have provided a marketplace for such transactions since 1848 when the Chicago Board of Trade was founded. The quantity and quality of a commodity, the delivery months and the delivery procedures are specified by the exchange on which it is traded. The contracts are traded by many individuals, including those who wish to profit by price fluctuations of the commodity but who do not necessarily want to make or take delivery.

The investor or speculator in the futures market performs a vital economic role. Through such speculation, risk can be undertaken by people willing and able to assume it. Thus, as the risk-bearing ability can be separated from production and marketing, production can be expanded and prices will be reduced.

Information on futures trading is available by writing the Chicago Board of Trade, Department NP2, 141 W. Jackson Blvd., Chicago, IL 60604.

More On Nuclear Power

A recent article by M.T. Owens Jr., instructor of economics at Northlake college in Irving, Tex., sheds further light on the question of nuclear power. His statements are directed primarily toward those who advocate solar power, and he makes the following points:

"The optimism concerning social power as a major source of energy is unwarranted," he states. "This is due to the simple physical limitations to solar power. These limitations cannot be revoked by Congress: They are provided by nature.

"Responsible solar advocates, those who have progressed beyond the bumper-sticker mentality, expect solar power at best to constitute seven to 10 per cent of U.S. energy output by the end of the century. Realistically, this would be confined to water and space heating. Even the solar energy research institute states that most of the nation's supply of electricity will be provided by coal or nuclear. Coal then, not solar, is the only real alternative to nuclear."

Owens points out that the responsible way of assessing risk is to compare the risks of alternative sources per unit of power produced. "Considering both long and short-run effects throughout the entire production cycle, nuclear energy is, per unit of power produced, safer than the feasible alternatives," he states.

"The anti-nuclear Union of Concerned Scientists issued a report in 1977 which said that IF the U.S. had a very vigorous nuclear program, we MIGHT have 15,000 associated fatalities by the end of the century. What they neglect to mention is that from burning coal — the only alternative to nuclear — we NOW have 15,000 fatalities PER YEAR. Thus, by burning coal instead of implementing nuclear power, we will — not could — have 300,000 excess fatalities by the end of the century."

Owen also points out that responsible solar advocates would also dispute the assertion that solar power does not produce dangerous wastes, carcinogenic or otherwise.

"To assess the risks of any energy system it is necessary to 'think economically'," he said, "to trace the effects of an action through what is seen to what is not seen. Solar energy, for instance, must first be collected and then converted into usable energy — either into electricity through direct conversion photovoltiac units or into heat through thermal conversion units.

"There are severe physical and technological limitations to both collection and conversion. For one thing, solar collection requires truly massive amounts of glass and steel, which are not found in nature but which must be produced with an increase in attendant risks. Conversion to electricity requires tons of toxic chemicals; conversion to heat requires huge amounts of toxic coolant coursing through complicated plumbing.

"Responsible solar advocates are rightly concerned with the dangers to workers and the general public caused by massive production of these necessary materials. They recognize the risks involved in putting tons of silicate particles into the air we breathe. They understand that sunrays cannot become usable energy without these expensive, complex and sometimes dangerous intermediate steps of collection and conversion," Owen said.

He points out that despite its limitations, solar energy can eventually contribute to U.S. energy production but that economic reality will require large scale development. As solar corporations become dominant in that field, we can expect warnings to issue forth from dissident groups about the dangers of solar power.

As we see it, there is no choice. Responsible development of nuclear power production is necessary if there is to be light when we turn on the switch in the future.

Fast Spenders

U.S. chamber of commerce, which invented the "Federal Spending Clock," never sleeps when it comes to keeping an eye on federal spending for taxpayers.

It now has invented the "Federal Spending Index" (FSI), which is designed to measure the growth of federal spending from month to month. This means it can be compared with the consumer price index (CPI), which records changes in consumer prices, and tell whether the cost of government is going up faster than the cost of living.

In the current analysis, the chamber found — using 1967 as the base period equal to 100 — that in June :

— The federal index stood at 354.

— The consumer price index stood at 247.8.

In other words, said Martin Lefkowitz, a senior economist who devised the index, federal spending has gone up 72 per cent faster than the cost of living since 1967.

The FSI, based on monthly data from the treasury department, is a more accurate sign of government costs than taxes collected, since it includes dollars spent the government does not have.

The spending clock, which is on view at the U.S. chamber in Washington, is a machine that illustrates how fast the government spends tax dollars — currently at a rate of $1 million every 55 seconds.

The spending index arms taxpapers with a new question for their legislators: Why should the cost of government go up faster than their own family budgets?

Washington First

Following editorial is from the Ely Echo:

Back in 1978, when there was considerable controversy over what kind of recreation was to be allowed in the Boundary Waters Canoe Area and who was to be allowed to recreate, one of the organizations pushing hard for restrictions on use, curbing of resort operations, etc., was the Friends of the Boundary Waters Wilderness.

While there were many sincere conservation organizations involved and thousands of individuals who were concerned over the preservation of the canoe country, there were also a noticeable number of scientific figures and a very great push from the Carter administration to get the timber people out of the woods along with a lot of others, and a very deliberate effort, through legislation, to remove resorts from the perimeter of the area along with private property ownership.

All of this was somewhat baffling until recent developments have involved a near-frantic search on the part of the federal government to find nuclear waste disposal sites. We are now being informed by federal scientists that the hard granite shield underlying this area is "stable", not apt to be disturbed by earthquakes, and "probably won't leak" radioactive material. It is also nice and remote, away from the cities, away from the nuclear plants and, really, who cares about a handful of people living up in the woods?

Uh huh. As the pattern shapes up, and this is no spur of the moment decision, it begins to look like a lot of the support, at least on the federal level, for the Friends of the Boundary Waters Wilderness, were more like Friends of the Boundary Waters Nuclear Dump. Frankly, we think a lot of those wilderness people were duped... misled into what was really intended with the canoe country. It is now more understandable what the geologists were looking for when they criss-crossed the area with airborne sensors the past couple of years. It is also understandable why they want the loggers, fishermen, resort owners, and property owners out of the area... they don't want anybody nosing around or raising a squawk if they start drilling and shoving those neat little radioactive capsules into the rock.

The scientists point out that since they cannot neutralize the waste, like they said they were going to do when the nuclear power plants were sold to the nation, the only answer is to drill holes in solid, stable rock and bury them. The granite here, they say, is such a type of rock. Burial up here would be "safe." To which we reply: "What about marble?" Isn't marble extremely hard, "Stable" and otherwise impervious to leakage and other accidents?

Perhaps there is a better idea. If burial in hard rock is "safe", let us suggest that they drill out the center in the marble pillars holding up the White House portico roof and store the stuff in there. Not only would it be "safe" but it would be a great morale factor for the nation and the nuclear power industry. If the First Family can live in the shadow of a nuclear dump, then it should be "safe" for everyone.

As soon as the White House pillars are filled, we will accept our quota up here, friends.

Borrowed Nonsense:

"Is he cheap?" the new bride complained about her husband. "We were half an hour leaving on our honeymoon because he had to try on all the shoes tied to the car."

Patient: "What does it mean when I get dizzy with spots before my eyes and have a ringing in my ears?"

Doctor: "It means the wife and I can go to the Riviera after all."

NEWS IN PICTURES

When it comes to computers, often less is more. Advances in computer logic technology are illustrated by the picture, above, of two integrated circuitry systems developed by Control Data Corp. The large-scale integrated (LSI) circuitry, at left, is used in the new CDC CYBER 205, a computer capable of performing up to 800 million operations in a single second and providing four million words of central memory. The equivalent workings of the CDC STAR-100 are at right.

The CYBER 205 is designed to help solve the problems and meet the socioeconomic needs of the '80s, especially those related to the search for new and alternate energy sources, to provide accurate, long-range weather forecasting and process environmental data affecting agriculture, world food supplies and prices.

The CYBER 205 is the only "supercomputer" using LSI, which increases reliability and simplifies maintenance. The cost for all this? The model is priced from $7.9 million to $16.5 million. It will be available for shipment in January 1981.

Rudy Boschwitz reports to Minnesota

Senate Agriculture Committee Hearings Set During State Fair

The Agriculture Program developed by Congress during the coming year will set the stage for Ag policy through much of the 1980's. It is important that this program be responsive to the needs of the farming community and all of rural America.

The twists and turns of agriculture policy under the current administration have convinced me more than ever that our farmers and agri-business people need to have a policy that is consistent. They need a policy that is stable enough for them to depend on for years at the time.

If possible, the Agriculture policy and program we develop should be our basis for decision making for at least the next decade. We cannot leave rural America at the mercy of sudden shifts in policy such as the grain embargo. Equipment, land, capital investments and planning involve years of commitments on the part of rural America. Farmers like businessmen plan ahead and to do so successfully they must know how to factor in the affect of their government.

A responsive farm program cannot be developed without the input and suggestions of those directly involved in farming and agri-business. For that reason, the Senate Agriculture Committee has agreed to hold hearings in Minnesota during the State Fair. I will be chairing those hearings to be held in St. Paul on August 28, 29 and 30.

Leaders of farm organizations, officers in agri-business corporations and representatives of organizations like the 4-H and FFA have already requested and been allotted time to testify before the Committee. In addition, written testimony will be accepted and entered in the hearing record. I am pleased that these people have accepted our invitation to address the committee and I am also delighted that on Thursday, August 28, Governor Al Quie and Sen. Roger Jepsen of Iowa will be testifying while on Friday, August 29, former Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz will speak.

On Thursday, August 28, the Committee will examine the current farmer held reserve policy and its impact on farm prices. The session will begin at 8:30 a.m. in the Earle Brown Continuing Education Center on the St. Paul Campus of the University of Minnesota adjacent to the fairgrounds. This session will continue until 12:00 noon.

The Friday meeting on August 29, will deal with transportation in agriculture with emphasis on legislative proposals which would improve grain transportation in the upper midwest. This session will begin at 8:30 a.m. in the Earl Brown Continuing Education Center.

The Saturday session on August 30, will get underway at 8:00 a.m. on the fairgrounds at Machinery Park in Machinery Hill. The topic to be discussed will be "The Future of Agriculture in the 1980's." During the discussion period a number of panels will discuss issues facing farmers in the coming decade. Separate panels will address pork production, cattle production, dairy production and poultry production. In addition there will be a youth panel with representatives from the University of Minnesota, the 4-H and the Future Farmers of America.

I hope Minnesotans involved in and interested in Agriculture will take this opportunity to attend the hearings of the Senate Agriculture Committee. Anyone wishing to testify before the Committee should contact me or my Agriculture Legislative Assistant Randy Russell at (202) 224-5641 or my office in St. Paul (800) 652-9771. Due to time restraints we are limiting oral testimony to five minutes.

Written testimony is invited for inclusion in the hearing record. Those wishing to submit written testimony should send their comments to Don Mosher or Julie Hasbargen at my St. Paul Office, 210 Bremer Building, 419 North Robert Street, St. Paul, Minnesota 55101.

Car Safety Checklist

When it comes to keeping your car on the road to safety, little things mean a lot. Little things done properly all the time can add up to a lot more safety and save money in the long run.

Most pros advise checking your car's basic equipment before you start on a trip. Here are a few tips:

Seat Belts—Be sure you fasten them before you start out.

Windows and Doors—See that windshield wipers work and that the blades are good. Make sure all windows are clean and keep the rear window deck clear of articles that can obstruct your view. Lock all doors—especially if there are small children in the car.

Engine—Before you start it, check the radiator, battery and windshield washer fluid levels. Check drive belts for wear: look for cracks on the inside edge or glazed contact surfaces.

Tires—Inspect them for unusual wear and check the pressure, before driving, with a quality gauge. Proper inflation will save fuel and reduce the chance of tire failure. For added protection equip your car with Uniroyal's new puncture-sealing tire called Royal Seal. The Royal Seal is an energy-efficient steel belted radial tire with a patented compound that protects against 90 percent of punctures 3/16-inch in diameter or less.

Battery—Inspect, test and, if necessary, replace it. Have the terminals, cables and battery itself cleaned. Take along a good set of battery booster cables.

A check of your car should help you drive danger away.

Since cables are no good unless they work, it makes sense to invest in a top-rated product like the M. Black TPR 16Q from M. Black Manufacturing Co. of Philadelphia. These cables are insulated with Uniroyal TPR, a high-technology rubber that protects and ensures high performance.

Cooling System—Check the coolant's strength; drain and flush if under par and add more antifreeze coolant. Inspect the hoses and connections for cracks or leaks.

Following this professional advice can help you arrive safely and on time.

Hints For Homeowners

Home Improvement, Safety And Economy,
DO-IT-YOURSELF!

Considering the uncertain state of the economy, the fact that modern employment schedules provide more free time, and the difficulty of getting a repair or improvement contractor when most needed, it's no wonder homeowners and apartment dwellers, too are becoming skilled amateur repairers and improvers in ever-increasing numbers.

While expense-saving is doubtless the main attraction, pride of personal accomplishment in expanding one's capabilities comes a close second.

If you think you're "all thumbs" and have therefore shunned the do-it-yourself trend, why not try with a very easy but highly rewarding project requiring only basic and minimal investment tools?

Surveys show that more storage is a major need of most families—shelves are a quick answer, with only a measuring tape, saw and screwdriver to complete the job.

Dripping faucets are a nuisance, energy-wasteful, and really inexcusable—when a few washers, a Crescent adjustable wrench and that same screwdriver will solve the problem.

Is the lawn mower's rotary blade just chomping, not cleanly cutting the grass? All it takes is a "Home and Garden" file to restore a once-sharp edge.

If lack of experience makes you hesitate, talk to your neighborhood "know-how" hardware dealer. He's been a do-it-yourselfer for years, and he knows lifetime quality tools. Tell him Cooper the Toolmaker sent you—you'll be in good hands.

WHEAT HARVESTING in the Central Plains is nearing completion, and is progressing northward nearly on schedule, indicates the U.S. Department of Agriculture in its latest crop report. And despite dry weather in some grain growing areas, USDA predicts the 1980 winter wheat crop will be up 15 percent from last year. The USDA forecast for this season's winter wheat is a record 1.85 billion bushels, up from last year's crop of 1.61 billion bushels. The current record is 1.64 billion bushels in 1975. This season's projected winter wheat crop also is up from USDA's initial forecast of 1.57 billion bushels. The latest estimate is based on field surveys taken through July 1. According to USDA, this year's average estimated winter wheat yield is 35.4 bushels per acre, compared with last year's record high 36.9 bushels per acre average. The predicted yield average still is high by normal standards, however. Final crop tabulations won't be available until wheat harvesting is completed in northern states later this summer.

The Thief River Falls School District No. 564 today announced its policy for determining eligibility of children who may receive free and reduced price meals and free milk served under the National School Lunch, School Breakfast, and Special Milk Program.

Local school officials have adopted the following family size and income criteria for determining eligibility.

FAMILY SIZE	ELIGIBILITY SCALE FOR FREE MEALS AND FREE MILK			ELIGIBILITY SCALE FOR REDUCED PRICE MEALS
	Annual	Monthly	Weekly	Annual	Monthly	Weekly
1	$ 5,230	$ 436	$ 101	$ 8,150	$ 679	$ 157
2	6,900	575	133	10,760	897	207
3	8,580	715	165	13,380	1,115	257
4	10,250	854	197	15,990	1,333	308
5	11,930	994	229	18,600	1,550	358
6	13,600	1,133	262	21,220	1,768	408
7	15,280	1,273	294	23,830	1,986	458
8	16,950	1,413	326	26,440	2,203	508
Each Additional family member	plus 1,680	plus 140	plus 32	plus 2,610	plus 218	plus 50

Children from families whose income is at or below the levels shown are eligible for free or reduced price meals or free milk. In addition, families not meeting these criteria but with other unusual expenses due to unusually high medical expenses, shelter costs higher than 30 per cent of income, special education expenses due to the mental or physical condition of a child, and disaster or casualty losses are urged to apply.

Application forms are being sent to all homes in a letter to parents. Additional copies are available in the principal's office in each school. The information provided on the application is confidential and will be used only for the purpose of determining eligibility. Applications may be submitted at any time during the year. A simple statement of income and family size is required, plus a signed certification by the parent or guardian that the information provided is true and correct.

In certain cases foster children are also eligible for these benefits. If a family has foster children living with them and wishes to apply for such meals and milk for them, they should contact the school.

Under the provisions of the policy, Mrs. Kay Fleegel will review applications and determine eligibility. If a family is dissatisfied with the ruling of the approving official, they may wish to discuss the decision with the approving official on an informal basis.

If they wish to make a formal appeal, they may make a request either orally or in writing to Dr. Milton Hoff, Franklin Middle School Principal, (218) 681-2700 ext. 266, for a hearing to appeal the decision. The policy contains an outline of the hearing procedure.

If a family member becomes unemployed or if family size or income changes, the family should contact the school to file a new application. Such changes may make the children of the family eligible for reduced price meals, or for additional benefits such as free meals and milk if the family income falls at or below the levels shown above.

In the operation of school nutrition programs, no child will be discriminated against because of race, color, or national origin.

The main office of the School District has a copy of the complete policy, which may be reviewed by any interested party.

If you have a fire, will you have to pay money out of your pocket to help cover the loss?

Most homeowner insurance policies pay only replacement cost, less depreciation for personal property. For example, an $800 sofa could be valued at just $200 when depreciation is taken, and upon replacement, you would have an out-of-pocket expense of $600, plus the deductible. NOW MSI INSURANCE HAS A BETTER SOLUTION! It will insure most of your personal property at replacement cost value. With this type of coverage, you would receive the full $800, less the deductible.

Check with me today. I'll be glad to give you all the details without obligation. We're people helping people.

PUT UP FREEZER JELLY TODAY

Think about tomorrow today when you see fresh plums and Concord grapes in the market. They're a delicious combination in a freezer Grape-Plum Jelly you can serve on fresh bread and muffins when fresh fruit is just a memory. This no-cook jelly is easily prepared with the help of powdered fruit pectin, which assures a good "set." Use standard jelly jars with lids or reusable glass or plastic containers of not over a pint capacity. Freezer jelly can be stored in the freezer for up to six months or, if freshly made or thawed from the freezer, it can be kept in the refrigerator up to three weeks. Select the best fruit available, have ingredients ready, follow the recipe accurately and write labels for the finished product with a flourish. That's good reason to congratulate yourself.

GRAPE-PLUM JELLY

3 cups prepared juice (about 1-1/2 lb. fully ripe Concord grapes and 1-1/2 lb. fully ripe plums)
6 cups (2 lb. 10 oz.) sugar
3/4 cup water
1 box Sure-Jell fruit pectin

First prepare the juice. Thoroughly crush, one layer at a time, about 1-1/2 pounds Concord grapes. (For ease in extracting juice from grapes, heat fruit slightly; then crush with potato masher or in food mill.) Place crushed fruit in jelly cloth or bag and let drip. When dripping has almost ceased, press gently. Measure 1-1/2 cups into large bowl or pan. Pit about 1-1/2 pounds plums; do not peel. Chop very fine; then place in jelly cloth or bag and let drip. When dripping has almost ceased, press gently. Measure 1-1/2 cups; add to grape juice.

Then make the jelly. Thoroughly mix sugar into juices; let stand 10 minutes. Mix water and fruit pectin in small saucepan. Bring to a full boil and boil 1 minute, stirring constantly. Stir into the juices. Continue stirring 3 minutes. (A few sugar crystals will remain.) Pour quickly into scalded containers. Cover at once with tight lids. Let stand at room temperature 24 hours; then store in freezer. Small amounts may be covered and stored in refrigerator up to 3 weeks. Makes about 6 cups or about 7 (8 fl. oz.) containers.

Some more raffle tickets were made and bed and throw pillows were stuffed and ends sewn up. We now have a good supply of bed pillows on hand, so if you need some for your own family or for gifts remember us. We are open for business as well as visiting and a bit of work every Thursday at one o'clock.

Door prizes went to Polly who received Irene's, Evelyn got Ida Bruce's, Elsie and Irene got the two Mabel donated, Ida Bruce got Ruth Harper's and Charles Kronz received Elsie Kimbrough's. Anna Brekke was hostess.

Thursday, August 14, was another busy day at our center. We laid out a piece quilt top and pinned blocks together so another day we will sew the top and later make it into a quilt. We sewed up ends on more bed pillows and some ladies made balls out of skeins of yarn so some day when we decide we can make something out of it. We also worked with our raffle tickets.

Our center together with other centers in our district, have been invited by the people who run the "Old Mill" for us all to come for a picnic August 20 when the mill will be working. This should be interesting to many and a good way to become acquainted with folks in other centers. We will hear more on that.

Thanks to Ella Thun for pieces and thread, etc., she gave our center. It was fun to have Ella join us on Thursday. Sharon Wayne and Hulda Stromberg were also visitors, along with Ellen and Mary Ellen Flaten.

Eighteen registered in our record book Thursday.

Eight door prizes were given away. Sharon Wayne gave two prizes that Ruth Harper and Irene received. Ida received Evelyn's, Mildred got Mabel's. Hulda got Evelyn's. Mabel got Ruth Harper's gift and Amanda got Polly's.

Mabel Borsvold was our hostess Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Art Kleinwachter, Sophie Benson, Pat and Wayne Larson of Thief River Falls were last Sunday visitors at the Julius Kleinwachter home. Mrs. Stanley Stancyk visited there on Tuesday evening.

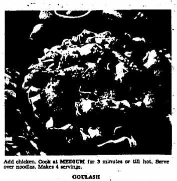
Shelby Baehr, Ricky and Dick and Todd Lund of Roseau visited with Gladys Henrickson on Tuesday. Mr. and Mrs. Steve Chwialkowski also visited there Tuesday.

Mildred Nelson accompanied Lavern Swan of Hallock to Newfolden Tuesday evening where they attended the Marshall county committee on aging at the senior citizens building there.

Hilmer Johnson and Lucille Underdahl of Middle River visited at Laurel Klines Tuesday evening.

FASTER WAYS WITH MICROWAVES

In the heat of late summer, why make your kitchen even warmer by using your conventional oven? With a microwave oven you can keep cool when the weather is hot and still prepare a nutritious summer meal. Paprikas Chicken and Goulash, recipes from a Whirlpool microwave oven cookbook, are delicious economical dishes tailor-made for hot summer days.



PAPRIKAS CHICKEN

Total cooking time: 34 minutes

1 cup chopped onion
½ cup chopped green pepper
3 tablespoons cooking oil
¼ cup paprika
2½- to 3-pound broiler-fryer, cut up
½ cup water
1¼ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 cup dairy sour cream
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
Hot cooked noodles

In 3-quart casserole, cook onion and green pepper in oil at HIGH for 3 minutes or till tender, stirring twice. Stir in paprika. Mix well. Add chicken to paprika mixture, turning pieces to coat well. Cook at MEDIUM LOW for 5 minutes, turning chicken once. Add water, salt, and pepper. Cook, covered, at MEDIUM HIGH for 20 minutes or till tender, rearranging chicken pieces once. Remove chicken from sauce; skim off excess fat.

Pour sauce into blender container; cover and blend till smooth. Add enough water to mixture in blender to measure 2 cups. Mix sour cream and flour. Add to blender; blend till smooth. Return sauce to casserole. Cook at MEDIUM for 3 minutes or till thickened, stirring 3 times. (Do not boil.) Add chicken. Cook at MEDIUM for 3 minutes or till hot. Serve over noodles. Makes 4 servings.

FANCY THAT!
Gas-Thrifty Mopeds Help America Work

America's moped population has just passed the one-million mark, a 20-fold increase from 1975 when just 50,000 mopeds were on U.S. roads. Everyone expected this fun, two-wheel motorized pedal vehicle to capture the U.S. imagination, but the energy crunch clinched the matter. Mopeds average 135 miles to the gallon!

America's million mopeds will replace 4.4 billion miles of auto travel during 1980. That total is the equivalent of making 24 trips by moped from the earth to the sun and back!

The 1980 gas savings comes to 240 million gallons. For each moped owner at today's gas prices, that comes to more than $300. Mopeds, it turns out, are a thrifty way of being patriotic!

BANK ROBBERY is going to be one of the features during a parody of local historical events to be held Saturday evening in Goodridge as part of the celebration commemorating the Tri-County fair held there in 1919. Here Lynn and Mike Hanson practice making their get-away on horseback after robbing the Goodridge state bank. Although no bank robbery took place in Goodridge, it was inserted into the parody by its author, Mrs. Norma Hanson, as a situation which could have happened at that time. The parody is entitled "And To Think That I Saw It on Pennington Avenue" and it will take place Saturday at 7:30 p.m. on the south side of the city hall in Goodridge.

Outdoor Play To Be Staged At Goodridge

The Goodridge Area Historical Society, Inc. will have an outdoor play in conjunction with the celebration commemorating the Tri-County fair held in 1919 in Goodridge.

The play, "And To Think That I Saw It On Pennington Avenue", is written by Norma Hanson. This is a parody of local historical events using community people as actors in the various activities.

The play will be held on the south side of city hall in Goodridge and the backdrop for the play is being designed and built by Ethel Wiseth and Lynn and Norma Hanson.

Play time is set for 7:30 p.m. on August 30 and will include such scenes as "Town Bum", "Horse Power — A Four Horse Hitch", "Market Day", and the "Biggest Holdup".

Bring your own chairs for assured outdoor seating. The society will supply as many as possible.

Airport Given $150,440 For Building

Senators Rudy Boschwitz and Dave Durenburger announced recently that the Thief River Falls regional airport has received a grant of $150,440.

The airport received this funding from the United States department of transportation and will use it to expand the services of the airport in three ways:

(1) To remodel the terminal building for easy access by handicapped persons;

(2) To construct a ramp extension and an apron and fillet for fire truck use; and

(3) To construct an addition to the fire truck maintenance building.

Townships May Lose Revenue Sharing Funds

Senator Rudy Boschwitz has learned that 64 local governments in Minnesota are in danger of losing over $132,000 in federal revenue sharing funds.

Boschwitz said that he was contacted by the office of revenue sharing in Washington, D.C., about the possible loss of funds because necessary reports are not on file.

The reports must be filed by September 30 for the local government units to receive the federal funds. Boschwitz reported that his office has been in contact with local government organizations to insure that all the appropriate officials are notified. He urged that anyone with additional questions contact Dan Meyer of his staff by calling toll-free 1-800-652-9771.

Among townships listed are several familiar in this area. Since counties are not listed, however, the townships may be in other counties. The list includes Mayfield, Germantown and Garfield townships.

Classes To Start Tomorrow . . .

Expect Decline In School Enrollment

Poised for the beginning of 1980-81 classes tomorrow morning, Thief River Falls public schools are anticipating an enrollment drop of 61 students from a year ago, according to Dr. William Corliss, superintendent of schools.

Major decrease is projected in the high school where a drop of 42 students is anticipated in grades nine through 12. A drop of 15 students is expected in the middle school where classes are held for grades six, seven and eight. In the district's five elementary schools a loss of only four students is anticipated.

The upturn in enrollment which is foreseen for later years apparently begins with the coming school year. Kindergarten enrollment is expected to be 210 this year, and increase of 12 from the 198 listed in attendance in October of 1979.

Comparative 1979 and 1980 enrollment is as follows with the 1979 October count listed first and the 1980-81 projection shown in parentheses:

Kindergarten, 198 (210); first grade, 211 (201); second grade, 214 (208); third grade 209 (216); Fourth grade, 220 (207); fifth grade, 214 (222); sixth grade, 199 (198); seventh grade, 214 (220); eighth grade, 232 (212); ninth grade, 236 (233); tenth grade, 256 (230); eleventh grade, 249 (250); and twelfth grade, 245 (231).

Projection for kindergarten through fifth grade is 1,262, down four from 1,266 in October of 1979. Grades six through eight are projected at 630, down 15 from 645 last year; and grades nine through 12 are projected at 944, down 42 from 986 in 1979.

In terms of pupil units, on which state aids are based, the decrease is considered substantial, Dr. Corliss said. This is because the greatest drop is in the high school where each student represents a pupil unit of about 1.6.

Classes will begin Tuesday at 8:25 a.m. in the elementary schools and 8:30 a.m. at the high school. Buses will run on regular schedule and noon lunches will be served. Students in grades nine and 10 should go directly to the Lincoln auditorium to start the school day Tuesday. Those in grades 11 and 12 should report to the designated classrooms posted by the school entrance doors.

Classes in the area vocational technical institute will not begin until September 2. In-service program for AVTI faculty will be held on Thursday and Friday of this week. In-service for faculty in grades K-12 is being held today and tonight, with a dinner being served at 6:15 p.m. in the Lincoln cafeteria.

Eighteen new faculty members have been hired for the 1980-81 school term, according to the school personnel office, and there are still about five vacancies to be filled. Arrangements will be completed today, however, and all classes will meet tomorrow with either full-time or substitute teachers on duty.

Paris Exchange Student Enjoys American Living

by Bonnie Reed
Times Reporter

Sometimes few words are needed to express ideas between those from different countries. And, the words were few but the facial expressions and hand gestures plentiful enough to communicate effectively when an exchange student from Paris, France, was the subject of a recent Times interview.

Axelle de Saporta, 16, has been residing with Mr. and Mrs. Lester V. Larson of this city for the past month. The exchange program she is presently involved in — the North Atlantic Cultural Exchange league — does not permit students to travel for longer than one month and Axelle will be returning to her country August 29.

Her outfit — consisting of a floral skirt, matching blue shirt, white pearl necklace and pink ballerina slippers — not only portrayed the differences in clothing between the two countries, but illustrated the type of person Axelle was and aided in understanderg her and the pleasant personality she possessed throughout the interview.

Axelle had returned from registration for classes at Lincoln high school before the interview, even though classes will begin at the school August 28 and she will be leaving for Paris August 29.

"I wanted to see what it was like," she said.

Her school years in Paris were spent at girls' schools and she was curious to see what it would be like attending a public school, she said. This year in Paris will be her first year at a public school also.

The school season begins in September and continues through July 3 in Paris, Axelle said. School days begin at 8:30 a.m. and generally run until 7 p.m. with two hours permitted for lunch.

"The hours are different every day," she explained, using her arms to help convey her ideas. "But generally, we get done at 7 p.m."

Most students complete high school when they are 18, she said. And at that time an exam is required of students before they are permitted to graduate.

Certain classes are required by all students in school, Axelle said. Every student must take math, French, another language (Axelle took English as most students do), science, history, geography and physical education. But the eager French student traveled beyond those required subjects throughout her school years. She has learned to speak two other languages — Latin and Greek.

PKU Victim Ready For School Tues.

by Marvin Lundin
Times Editor

While a number of Thief River Falls school children will be picking at or complaining about their school lunches this week as children seem wont to do, Kyle Svendsgaard will probably be wishing he could be partaking of the same fare. Five-year-old Kyle, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Svendsgaard of rural Goodridge, is on a severely restricted diet due to a rare genetic disease.

Only one in every 10,000 to 15,000 infants is affected by phenylketonuria — more commonly known as PKU. Kyle is believed to be the only youngster diagnosed to have the disease among babies born at Northwestern hospital in Thief River Falls although tests for it are given routinely to all newborn.

Had the disease not been diagnosed and the special diet started, there is an 80 per cent chance Kyle would not be going to his first day of kindergarten classes Tuesday. He probably would have been severely mentally retarded. Half of the children with untreated PKU never walk and a third never talk, according to researchers at the University of Minnesota.

Kyle is normal in every respect, so far as his parents can tell and tests can disclose. He is generally healthy, swims, rides his bicycle, likes to help feed hogs on the farm and ride with his dad on the tractor, and for two years has skated in the recreational skating association's annual ice show. He is different from other youngsters only in what he can't eat.

Kyle's daily fare consists primarily of fruit and vegetables and a liquid called Nofenalac which serves as his principal source of protein and calories. "It is his milk and medicine," Mrs. Svendsgaard said.

Nofenalac comes in powder form, six cans to the case. It is purchased through drug stores and although the Svendsgaards say it is given to them at the druggist's cost, it still costs $180 a case. A case lasts about six weeks.

Children suffering from PKU are born without an important digestive enzyme. Therefore their bodies are unable to metabolize phenylalanine — a common amino acid present in foods like meat, milk, cheese,

FARM BOY AT HEART is five-year-old Kyle Svendsgaard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Svendsgaard of rural Goodridge. He will be starting school in Thief River Falls Tuesday and looks forward to that experience. Kyle is a victim of phenylketonuria, a genetic disease more commonly referred to as PKU. The disease is rate, affecting only one out of every 10,000 to 15,000 babies born in the United States, and Kyle is the only victim discovered despite routine testing of infants born at Northwestern hospital here. Had the disease not been discovered and treated by extremely restricted diet, it is likely Kyle would not be going to school Tuesday.

It's O.K. To Chisel On Your Plowing . . .

Crop Residue Prevents Erosion

CHISEL PLOWING can leave enough crop residue on the surface to protect soil from wind erosion. While the field in the foreground remains stable, the field in the background is losing valuable topsoil. Tillage makes the difference.

Small grain harvest is in progress, and many fields are already turned black. More farmers each year are using a chisel plow or disk for fall tillage — for a number of different reasons. The big one could be the savings on fuel and time. Other factors are wind erosion control and moisture buildup in the soil, reports Allan Gustafson of the Pennington county soil and water conservation district.

The moldboard plow is the conventional tillage equipment used by our forefathers and by most farmers today. However, reduced tillage operations in northwestern Minnesota have favored the chisel plow, and it is a common piece of machinery on many farms. While the soil type is an important factor in deciding your tillage equipment, the old excuse that "a chisel plow won't work on my heavy soil" is starting to go by the wayside, Gustafson said.

Farmers up and down the Red River valley are, and have been, using chisel plows for years. The soil type, surface roughness, distance between barriers and amount of residue left on the fields are the major factors in the effectiveness of conservation tillage in controlling erosion.

Soil erosion can begin when wind velocity reacher nine miles-per-hour at ground level. Due to the dry conditions this year, there is less crop residue produced and the ground is very hard. Farmers are turning to the chisel plow of disk, as ground is too hard to use the moldboard plow and it is too expensive to be replacing plow lays. Recent rains may give some relief for plowing.

On an average, 500 to 750 pounds or crop residue per acre will protect the soils in northwestern Minnesota from wind erosion. Following guide for the amount of residue is provided by Gustafson.

Small Grain — Small grain provides about 60 to 100 pounds of residue per bushel, with oats providing the least

Two Vegetable Contests Set By Deer Park Club

Deer Park garden club is sponsoring two contests at the Goodridge celebration set for Saturday, August 30.

The first contest is in vegetable sculpturing for elementary students in area schools, grades one to six. Flowers in the arrangement must be fresh or dried. Artificial flowers may not be used.

The main rule is that vegetables are to be used in the catagories. Nails, pins and etc. may be used for fastening the articles together, but can not be used as a part of the sculpture, such as for arms or legs.

Babinski And Yonke Wed In East Grand Forks

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Yonke are at home in East Grand Forks, at 3½ Garden Court Northwest, following an exchange of marriage vows at the Sacred Heart Catholic church in East Grand Forks, and a wedding trip to the Yellowstone National park.

The bride, the former Carol Babinski, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Babinski of East Grand Forks. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Yonke of Thief River Falls.

Rev. Stanley Bourassa was the celebrant, Larry Bittner, the lector, and Gary Delvo and Dean Bittner, the servers. At the organ was Kim Plante. She played a number of nuptial selections for the prelude; "Trumpet Voluntary," for the processional; and "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring," for the recessional. During the ceremony, Carol Kringlen, a friend of the bride, sang "Follow Me," "The Wedding Song," as the couple lit the unity candle; and "God, A Woman and A Man," following the communion.

The altar was graced with a floral arrangement featuring white mums and pink and red carnations. On either side were potted lilies.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her parents. She was attired in a gown of white qiana with a sheer cameo embroidered yoke outlined by a wide lace ruffle. A lace ruffle also edged her long sheer sleeves and formed the flounce that complemented her skirt and flowing train. Her walking veil of bridal illusion was trimmed with scalloped lace. For sentiment, she wore her grandmother's locket. She carried a cascade of pink and white roses, accented with green foliage and babies' breath.

The bride's personal attendants were Deborah Kuta, Carol Kringlen and Gayle King.

Maid of honor was Wendy Jo Grenier, East Grand Forks, a friend. Bridesmaids were Sue Ackerman, Detroit Lakes, a friend; Patty Delvo, Langdon, N.D., a cousin; and Mary and Nancy Babinski, East Grand Forks, sisters of the bride. All wore mauvette floor-length gowns topped by ruffled capes. They carried three long-stemmed mauve roses tied with white ribbon streamers.

Flower girl was Amanda Babinski, a niece of the bride. Her white floor-length gown, made by the bride's mother, was trimmed with ruffles on the bodice and around the hemline. The rings were carried by Mike Brown, a cousin of the bride. He wore a white tuxedo with tails, also made by the bride's mother.

Best man was Wayne Sourdif, Thief River Falls, a friend of the groom. Groomsmen were Jeff Shern, Minneapolis; a friend; Larry Swanson, Thief River Falls, a cousin; Mike Babinski, East Grand Forks, a brother of the bride; and David Yonke, Thief River Falls, a brother of the groom. The ushers were Patrick Babinski, brother of the bride, and Tim Vind, Crookston, a friend of the groom. All wore silver grey tuxedos with mauve trimmed shirts and a mauve rose boutonniere. The groom's attire was in all white.

The mother of the bride wore a lilac street-length dress with a pleated skirt. The groom's mother was attired in a baby blue dress, also with a pleated street-length skirt. Their corsages were of two large mauve roses and three sweet-heart roses.

Honor guests were Mrs. Harry Babinski, Minto, N.D., grandmother of the bride; Mrs. Henry Althoff, grandmother of the groom; Helen Nagle, Langdon, N.D., godmother of the bride; and Lucille Yonke, Thief River Falls, godmother of the groom.

Host and hostesses at the wedding supper that followed were Mr. and Mrs. James Marynik and Mr. and Mrs. Chester Yonke. Jackie Kuta and Paula Wilkens registered the guests and Viola Brown and Idella Rewertz presided at the gift table. Gift bearers were Mr. and Mrs. David Babinski and Mr. and Mrs. James Kosmatka. Flower hostesses were Norma Swanson and Deborah Kuta.

The three-tiered wedding cake, supported by crystal pillars, was decorated with mauve roses and white love birds. Topping the cake was a hand-blown glass heart with a Christogram, tinted pink in the center. The cake was cut and served by Helen Nagle and Lucille Yonke.

Approximately 200 relatives and friends attended the ceremony and reception.

The bride is a graduate of the East Grand Forks senior high school and AVTI. She is currently employed at the East Grand Forks senior high school. The groom is a graduate of Marshall County Central high school, Newfolden, and the East Grand Forks AVTI. He is attending the University of North Dakota. Photo, Bye's Treasure Photos, Grand Forks.

The group then assembled at Mrs. Fischer's next door neighbors, the Thomas Hendricksons, to view his vegetable garden. Hendrickson led the tour and gave a detailed account of the care and harvesting of his vegetables.

The business meeting was held at the Fischer home. The seven members present answered roll call by giving their phenology report pertaining to vegetables, flowers and birds. They also named their favorite berry. Members also read the Garden Creed and August poem in unison.

Report on the 20th anniversary celebration of the Deer Park garden club was given by Bertha Hastad, Olga Johnson and Geneva Overum, who attended the observance. The event included a garden luncheon and program at the Robert Wiseth home, and a tour of the gardens at the Bennie Svanjord farm, Lois Swansons, Bert Coans, Selma Sanders, the Lions Park and the Lynn Hanson farm.

Other reports were on the Pennington County fair, the treasurer's report and the Good Cheer report. Due to the absence of Mrs. Emil Koglin, the secretary's report wasn't given.

The birthday song was sung for Marie Fischer and Bertha Hastad, and a birthday card was signed for Amy Meyer.

Lunch included a sack lunch brought by the members. Salad, bars and coffee were provided by the hostess.

Special guest at the meeting was former member, Mrs. Dorothy Berve.

Northland Will Begin Classes On September 9

Northland community college will begin its 1980-81 academic year on Tuesday, September 9 with 72 daytime and 14 evening college credit classes commencing for the fall quarter.

Students planning to attend Northland but who have not enrolled as yet are encouraged to do so as soon as possible to avoid class scheduling problems. Also, veterans who are planning to enroll and would like information regarding educational benefits should contact Dennis Bendickson, college registrar, as soon as possible.

Northland's fall quarter daytime schedule includes course offerings in anthropology, art, biology, business, chemistry, computer science, economics, English, geography, health, history, journalism, law enforcement, mathematics, music, nursing, philosophy, physical education, physics, political science, psychology, science, social science, sociology, speech and theatre.

The evening college credit course offerings include 14 courses in business, English, history, law enforcement, music, physical education, psychology, science, sociology and speech. Evening classes are offered primarily for persons unable to attend daytime college classes, for personal enrichment and for people who are exploring career opportunities.

The college year will begin with a freshmen orientation day under the direction of Ken Wiebolt, dean of students, on Monday, September 8 beginning at 8:30 a.m. with registration. Following registration freshmen will meet in the college auditorium where they will be informed about various aspects of college life such as activities, financial aids, health insurance, housing and food services, counseling, graduation requirements, grading system, class attendance, bookstore services and parking.

Freshmen orientation will close with a picnic in the college patio area beginning at 6 p.m. After the picnic, freshmen are invited to attend a free movie at the Galaxy Twin theatre.

Because of the growing interest and enrollment in Northland's law enforcement program, Frank Cornacchoine will be joining the college staff as its first full-time instructor and coordinator in that program. He will also be associated with the college's football program as an assistant coach. Dornacchione is coming to Northland from South Carolina state college where he was a professor in law-enforcement.

Two additional instructors have been employed to fill positions because of sabbatical leaves that were granted to Barbara Hauger, English instructor and James Dalager, physics and mathematics instructor. During their one-year leave, Margaret Stallkamp will be teaching English and Gregory Schow has accepted the assignment to teach physics and mathematics.

"Preliminary enrollment figures are inconclusive but Northland will probably have some decline," said Dennis Bendickson, registrar.

PKU Victim Is Ready To Start School Tuesday

bread, cake or any food containing protein.

If children are not placed on a severely restricted low protein diet soon after birth, phenylalanine builds up in the blood and can damage the brain. It was earlier believed that the diet could be discontinued after the child's brain had developed at age five or six. Recent research, however, has indicated pronounced drops in IQ among pre-teenagers who had begun to eat normally. Because of this, Kyle's diet is being continued indefinitely.

"It has made a difference in our meals as a family," Mrs. Svendsgaard says. "Kyle eats mostly carrots, beets and green beans as vegetables and apples, pears and nectarines as fruit. Our family eats many of the same foods. A special treat is popcorn and another is French fries. He has been very good about eating only what he should have and he always asks 'does this have too much protein?' when confronted with a new food."

During this year in school the problem shouldn't be too great because Kyle will eat his noon meal at home while attending half-day kindergarten. He should be able to get by with a snack of raisins during the half day at school. Next year the greater test will come and Mrs. Svendsgaard will be discussing what the school food service can do when she meets with the head of that department this week.

Kyle was born Jan. 25, 1975, and had his PKU test at 10 days of age. The test showed 12.7 milligrams of phenylalanine in his blood. Normal count is five to 10 milligrams. On his next test February 7 the content had rocketed upward to 49.6 milligrams. Kyle was placed on the Lofenalac synthetic milk diet and by February 19 the phenylalanine content was down to one milligram. Lofenalac is an infant formula; Nofenalac is used later in the fruit and vegetable diet.

Every week for two months the Svendsgaard's took Kyle to visit Dr. Tom Schaffer, the pediatrician they had been referred to in Grand Forks. There five cc's of blood would be drawn for testing. Occasionally this drawing would cause Kyle to lose consciousness.

Making good progress with the special diet, Kyle next contracted spinal meningitis when he was eight months old. It was not related to his PKU condition, but it resulted in a 105-degree fever and landed him in the hospital for eight days with antibiotics fed by tubes in his head.

He recovered from the meningitis with no ill effects but was not done with his hospital experiences. At age two and one-half he was a rider with his sister on a bicycle involved in an accident with a car. His sister was fatally injured and Kyle was hospitalized for a month with a concussion and fractured leg.

During the past few years if Kyle's phenylalanine count became elvated, he would be placed on a diet of soda pop and jellybeans to bring the test down. "Some kids might like that kind of a diet," his parents laughed, "but it's not the kind of nutrition a growing youngster needs." Now Kyle visits his pediatrician only two to four times a year to have blood tests.

It was only in the 1930's that a Norwegian doctor linked high levels of phenylalanine in the blood to mental retardation. The synthetic diet was developed in the 1950s and the quick and reliable blood test was developed in the 1960's to permit mass screening of infants.

University of Minnesota researchers are not satisfied with the success of the special diet. It does not cure the disease. Women with PKU are advised not to have children of their own because of the likelihood of giving birth to children with major birth defects.

Under present treatment, PKU victims can expect to live a normal lifespan and, except for the diet, a normal life. But the Svendsgaards hope that further developments can find a means to improve on that aspect of the problem as well.

As for Kyle, his present concerns are keeping an eye on the farm's feeder pig operation and attending that all-important first day of school.

Hog Wrestlers Enter Pleas Of Not Guilty

With pleas of not guilty entered with the court in advance, four area pork producers charged with violation of state statute 346.34 were not present at their scheduled first appearance in Pennington county court Thursday.

Bob Fincher of Viking, John Peoples of Brooks, Dalton Anderson of Grygla and Rodney Wayne of Goodridge were cited by city police following one round of a scheduled hog wrestling contest Sunday, August 17, in Thief River Falls. All are directors of the Northern Minnesota Pork Producers association which sponsored the event.

Attorneys for both sides of the legal question can now investigate the case in preparation for a pre-trial conference which will be held in several weeks. That conference is provided by law to consider motions and other issues on all constitutional, evidenciary or procedural grounds for disposing of the lawsuit.

Should it be determined at the conference that the case will come to trial, such trial would probably be held several weeks later. Since the violation of the law is a misdemeanor, it would be tried in county court. Judge J.A. Harren presided at the Thursday court session where the not guilty pleas were read.

The statute under which citations were issued involves prohibition of greased pig and poultry capture contests. The pork producer group is testing the law on the basis that it is discriminatory, not equally enforced and not applicable to the type of contest being held.

Paris Exchange Student Enjoys American Life

She has no "favorite" subject in school. "I like them all," she said. "It's different every day and every year. Sometimes I like one subject one day and another one the next day."

And, although she has not totally decided upon her future plans, she has considered the idea of attending a university in Paris after completing high school to learn to work with problem children.

According to Axelle, our school was larger than the one she attends in Paris. There are no sports such as swimming, tennis or golf in school. Students wishing to participate in these sports must join clubs out of school, which is "very expensive" according to Axelle.

But Axelle has been fortunate enough to be able to participate in two of her favorite sports — swimming and tennis — without having to belong to a club.

"My grandpa has a pool and tennis court in his backyard," she explained.

She also enjoys wind-surfing (which she claims she is not very good at but enjoys doing), sailing, reading and playing the piano (which she has been working at for the past four years).

Axelle has three sisters, Usire, 17; Yolande, 15; and a twin sister, Helene. Her father is a missile engineer while her mother works in a government office in Paris.

During her stay here, Axelle has participated in various sports as well as accompanying her "American sister," Coreen, 14, to work at Northwestern hospital and on various babysitting jobs. Although hospital work was a new experience for her, she is well acquainted with babysitting, she said.

She has also toured Winnipeg and Minneapolis during her stay here and she left for the state fair with the Larson family last Wednesday.

Because she had a late start in applying for the exchange program, she was not able to select the state in which she wanted to reside for a month as most exchange students under this program are permitted to do.

But to Axelle, the organization made a good choice for her.

"I am very happy to be here," she said. "I think the people here are very friendly. They make you feel welcome."

And, when asked if she will consider coming back to our country, she simply replied, "yes," and brought forth the smile she had shown frequently throughout our interview.

Crop Residue Helps Prevent Wind Erosion

residue and wheat the most.

Corn — For each bushel harvested, about 56 pounds of residue will remain on the field. Corn residue is only half as effective in controlling erosion as small grain, because the large bulky corn stalks do not cover the fields as uniformly as straw.

Sunflowers — An average sunflower crop of about 1,500 pounds per acre provides about 2,250 pounds of residue per acre. For adequate protection from erosion, at least half of this — about 1,000 pounds per acre — should be left on the surface.

Potatoes and Sugar Beets — Residue from beets and potatoes requires more careful management than other crop residue. This is because these crops provide less residue than others and it deteriorates faster than that from other crops. Residue from beets and potatoes does not cover the field as thickly as small grain residue and is only half as effective at controlling wind erosion.

For adequate protection for wind erosion, at least 1,000 pounds per acre of residue should be left on the field. This is about 30 to 50 per cent of residue that would remain from an average yield of 10 tons per acre of beets and 20 tons per acre of potatoes.

Equipment used makes a difference in crop residue remaining. Percentage of residue remaining after each trip over the field with various types of equipment is as follows:

Chisel (twists), 50 per cent; chisel (points), 80 per cent; field cultivator (points), 60 per cent; field cultivator (sweeps), 70 per cent; disk (3-inch depth), 50 per cent; disk (1-inch depth), 75 per cent; and moldboard plow, 10 per cent.

Anyone interested in more information on reduced tillage is encouraged to stop by the local soil and water conservation district office.

Thomas Drug

TO: THE VALUED CUSTOMERS OF J & B AND CORNER DRUG

After many years of serving you individually in various locations in Thief River Falls, we would like to take this opportunity to inform you of the merger of these two businesses into one which will be called Thomas Drug.

With the availability of the Gambles Building, we found the time just right to join together in bringing you one of the finest drug stores in Northwestern Minnesota.

We have planned carefully, with a watchful eye toward energy conservation, in the hopes of providing you with a store that is functional and beautiful. Together, we hope to offer you a much larger selection of merchandise in more comfortable surroundings.

Each store brings to the new endeavor its own unique personality formed by the people who work there, the individual merchandise mix, and the people who shop there. Certain parts of this "personality" will not change; some will be changed a lot. The people who work there will not change at all. The same people who served you so well in each location will be on hand to help you in the new store. In addition to the expanded selection of merchandise throughout the store, our Hallmark and Gift Department will be all new, with the added Gourmet Section. We will have a Fanny Farmer Candy Shop, with bulk candy as well as boxed. With the combination of great cosmetic lines from each store, we will have one of the most complete cosmetic departments in the area. Our Pharmacy, with its trained professionals, will continue to bring you that same quality of service you have come to expect from them over the years.

We are very excited about this new store and the opportunity it gives us to serve you better in a beautiful new facility. It will still be approximately a month before we will have all the finishing touches on it, but we will be open for our first day of business on August 25th, so stop in soon to see us in our new location.

We'd like to say thanks for your understanding during our remodeling. Hope to see you soon.

Sincerely,

Lee Erickson (J & B Drug)

Jim Carlson (Corner Drug)

Dear friends,

Dr. E. Kuebler-Ross studied the reaction of several hundred patients who had been declared medically dead, but who were later revived. Such patients "can describe in detail what they experience — how they float out of their body. They have a feeling of peace and wholeness, a tremendous feeling of 'stop all this attempt to revive me — I'm all right' — a perfectly good feeling", so reports Dr. Ross.

Respectfully,

Belmont Funeral Home

Travel Info Centers Note Inquiry Boost

Inquiries at Minnesota's travel information centers increased 3.7 per cent during the first half of 1980 over the same period last year, according to the Minnesota department of transportation.

Centers at Albert Lea, Beaver Creek, Dresbach, Moorhead and Thompson Hill handled a total of 59,289 travel inquiries during the first six months of 1980. This compares with 57,189 inquiries recorded January through June 1979.

In addition 8,417 inquiries were made in 1980 at Anchor Lake, a new travel information center that opened in August 1979.

The 67,706 total inquiries recorded at the six information centers in the first half of 1980 represent personal service to approximately 330,000 center visitors.

The largest increase in travel inquiries was 14.4 per cent at Beaver Creek. Thompson hill followed with an increase of 12.5 per cent; Dresbach, five per cent; and Moorhead, four per cent.

Although travel inquiries decreased seven per cent at Albert Lea, this center recorded the greatest number of inquiries, 18,088, among all six centers. Thompson Hill followed with 13,972 inquiries, Dresbach, 10,908; Beaver Creek, 8,583; and Moorhead, 7,738.

Caterpillars Strip Trees In Several Areas

A July report on forest pests released by the Minnesota department of natural resources identifies several areas where forest tent caterpillars have caused heavy defoliation this summer.

In Kandiyohi county, the caterpillar has defoliated approximately 900 acres of hardwood (broadleaf) trees in three separate locations. On outbreak occurred between Norway and Games lake, another east of Sibley state park, and the third north of Green lake.

The report said the caterpillars seemed to prefer basswood and elm but also attacked oak, maple, cherry and hackberry trees.

Another outbreak, covering an estimated 400 acres, was observed on the west and south side of Lake Koronis in Stearns county.

In general, said the report, defoliation in northeastern Minnesota was somewhat less than last year. The same situation is true in Lake of the Woods county, however serious defoliation was noted around Baudette.

Central Becker county has been very heavily defoliated this summer, the report concluded.

PBS Member Drive Will Be Ending Sunday

Prairie Public Television's annual summer membership drive, "Ten Good Nights On The Tube," will wrap up this weekend with special programs and, with luck, $70,000 in pledges.

Saturday, Aug. 23, will be one of Prairie Public TV's longest days of broadcasting — the Flash Gordon movie, "Rocketship" is scheduled to begin at 3 a.m. The entire Saturday schedule is made up of special programming beginning with G.I. Jive at 5 p.m. G.I. Jive is a tribute to the entertainers of the WWII era; the three-hour program includes performances by Cab Calloway, Maxene Andrews, Maxine Sullivan and Andy Russell. At 8:15, "A Gala Of Stars" finds its way into the public TV schedule — it's a celebration of the "partnership" between public TV and the performing arts. Guests include Beverly Sills, the Metropolitan Opera orchestra, James Levine, Merrill Ashley, Pacido Domingo, Cornell MacNeil, Natalia Makarova, Peter Martins, Luciano Pavarotti, Renata Scotto and Isaac Stern.

The late part of Saturday night is filled with four hours of "Moll Flanders" beginning at 11 p.m. "Moll Flanders" is the story of a very determined young woman.

Final day of "Ten Good Nights On The Tube," Sunday, Aug. 24, features "Dolphin" at 1 p.m.; James Cagney and Doris Day in "Love Me Or Leave Me" at 2; Judy Garland and Van Johnson in "In The Good Old Summertime" at 4:30; and Pete Fountain on "Evening At Pops" at 7 p.m.

The usual Sunday night public TV line-up is altered slightly for the finale — another segment of "Lillie" is scheduled for "Masterpiece Theatre" at 8:10 p.m. "Spin" follows at 9:30. John Cleese's "Fawlty Towers" will precede "Monty Python's Flying Circus" at 10:15 p.m. "Soccer Made In Germany" follows at 11:30.

Travel Limits Cancel Bemidji Visits By SBA

Paul W. Jansen, district director of the Minnesota small business administration, announced that because of general travel restrictions placed on government employees, the monthly trip by an SBA representative to Bemidji has been suspended until after October 1. This is a state-wide policy and does not affect the Bemidji area only.

Those small business men and women who wish to get financial support are urged to visit their bankers to see if they will make the loan, either directly or with SBA's participation. A daily loan seminar will be conducted in Minneapolis at the SBA office, 12 So. Sixth Street, Plymouth Building, Room 530, Minneapolis, at 1:30 p.m. or the publication "SBA Business Loans" can be received by writing the SBA office.

Jansen said he regrets this inconvenience and looks forward to when funds are available to directly serve people in the Bemidji area again.

BECKY GUZEK, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Guzek of Terrebonne, will be one of nine candidates competing this year for the title of Miss Brooks. Becky has one sister and three brothers and will be a senior at the Lafayette high school in Red Lake Falls this fall. She has been involved in band and choir and enjoys biking, cooking, reading, playing basketball, football and listening to music. She is a member of St. Anthony's church, is a CCD teacher and enjoys working with children. Becky is sponsored by the Brooks cheese factory in the competition.

Those making the trip were Scoutmaster John Helley, John Maki, Billy Traxler, John Maki Jr., Billy Maki and Gary Torkelson. The Scouts stopped at Memorial Park near Watertown, S.D., and spent the first night camping at Fisher Grove state park near Frankfort, S.D. The second day they toured the Bad Lands and hiked up to a large plateau. The next two days were spent camping in the Black Hills between Hill City and Mt. Rushmore. While there the Scouts attended historical movies and lectures about the sculptors Gutzon Boeglum and the Mt. Rushmore monument displaying presidents Washington, Jefferson, Roosevelt and Lincoln. This was climaxed by a helicopter ride over the monument and an aerial tramway ride in Keystone, S.D., to photograph the monument closer and sightsee from the air.

On the return trip home the Scouts visited Marine Life Aquarium in Rapid City, S.D. They toured Ellsworth air force base and after lunch at the base bowling alley, they all returned home Saturday evening.

The Scouts financed their trip to the Black Hills by selling newspapers, shoveling snow, cutting grass, donations from private citizens and financial assistance from the Plummer legion post.

Four new Scouts are scheduled to join the Troop 61 after school starts and the invitation to all boys 10½ years old to get involved in Scouting, adult help and support in scouting is always appreciated. Call 465-4587 for information.

Delaying The Budget

Dr. Jack Carlson, executive vice president and chief economist for the National Association of Realtors, doesn't care much for procrastination among lawmakers who seem bent on ignoring one of their own laws. Here is what Dr. Carlson writes:

This is a time of year when it is easy to become annoyed with the actions of politicians, who are trying to persuade us that they are the ones to vote for on November 4.

Some of them have the audacity to try and explain away their broken promises, and some go so far as to make promises that everyone knows can't be kept.

We should get angry at these people — incumbent or challenger — because they are questioning our intelligence.

But one of the most insensitive and blatant actions of ignoring the dictates of the law and ignoring the residents of this nation is going on right now in Washington, D.C.

There is a law on the books, called the Budget Act of 1974, that the Congress of the United States adopted, which states quite clearly that tax and spending ceilings will be fixed prior to the beginning of a fiscal year. This year's action, according to law, must be taken by September 25.

Will Congress act by then? Probably not. Why not? Well, you see, if the voting record of an incumbent were to include a vote for higher federal spending for fiscal year 1981 and thereby result in higher taxes, that might mean a lost vote or, worse, a lost election. Judging from the vote on the first concurrent budget resolution for fiscal 1981, there are many incumbents who don't believe government should spend less or that households are already overburdened with taxes.

The House Speaker Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill, of Massachusetts, has stated that he doesn't expect a vote until after the November 4 elections.

It is time for the voters to say to Mr. O'Neill and his fellow legislators that this is unacceptable. This is, in reality, an arrogant and ill-advised maneuver.

Do you want a lame-duck legislator determining spending levels for fiscal 1981?

Would you like to vote for or against your present legislator on the basis of a voting record — not a promise?

Do you believe that the U.S. House of Representatives is above the laws that it passes?

Right now most every household in this nation is suffering from loss of spendable income, reeling under the highest personal income taxes in history, staring at a recession and hearing tales of possible new record inflation in the next four years. And what is being done to attack one problem — excessive federal spending? Nothing but a postponement of the vote that will clearly show the voter what Congress intends to do about that spending.

We have a chance to ask for a vote before the election and if we, the voters, are ignored, then we should show every incumbent who ignores us just what voter power is.

Welcome Your Dollars Home

Following editorial is from the Renville Star-Farmer:

So there will be no misunderstanding, it should be pointed out that a news report in last week's Star-Farmer headlined "Local Units Get $1.8 Billion From State Tax Collections" did not involve money that was being given to local governments by a generous state. More accurately it referred to tax money which was returned closer to the source of its collection.

Minnesota, as a state, collects taxes generally in the area of sales, income and motor fuel. Most of the money returned to local governmental units is for schools and property tax relief on local levels; and for highways and welfare on county levels. According to the latest available figures, the reimbursements added up to $1.8 billion throughout the state.

The reimbursement figured that year to an average of $451, and amounted to 47 per cent of taxes collected by Minnesota. Of course, each resident didn't receive $451, but at least that much returned to the township, city, school district and county, on the average.

In a national ranking, Minnesota stood only behind Alaska and New York in the amount of money returned to local governments. That's fine, and it provides the state with a favorable position in this comparison, at least. But it would raise the question, too, whether even that high ranking should be made even better.

Two of Minnesota's major tax sources, the income tax and the sales tax, are by their nature closely tied to the rounds of inflated salaries and inflated consumer prices. When the paycheck of a Renville resident goes up, the income tax also goes up by a graduated amount; and when the cost of whatever is bought at the store, save for food, goes up, so too does the sales tax.

But when it comes to reimbursements, only a deflated 47 cents out of each dollar of increased taxes comes back home. Thus, the state has reaped 53 cents from inflation; the taxpayer at home is left to fight the battle against inflation with only a more tightly stretched budget and his fortitude for weapons.

What Profiteth A Company

Following editorial is from the Worcester (Mass.) Telegram:

If you run a big industry in this country, how can you enhance your popularity and reputation?

The answer is simple: Don't be successful. Be a failure.

Take Exxon, for example. Exxon has done all the wrong things. It has produced its product with great efficiency. It hires workers by the thousands, seldom laying any off. It pays good wages. It pays hundreds of millions of dollars in state and federal taxes every year.

Worst of all, it has consistently made a profit. For the most recent quarter, it has turned a profit of $1.1 billion for its shareholders and for further capital investment.

Exxon's reward has been vituperation from President Carter on down. One U.S. representative called its profit report "pornographic." House Speaker Tip O'Neil said it was "sinful."

By contrast, take Chrysler. Chrysler is losing an estimated $1 billion this year. It has laid off 27,000 workers, with little chance they will ever be hired back. It has closed its biggest assembly plant. It can't meet hundreds of millions of dollars of obligations.

Now Chrysler has come, with its hands out, to the federal government, pleading for $1 billion or more to be bailed out.

Its reward? Tender loving care in Lansing and Washington. An offer by the Michigan state government to advance a $160 million mortgage. Talk of a $1 billion credit from the feds. Sympathetic congressmen on all sides. A friendly White House. Every likelihood that the government trough will be filled to overflowing for the benefit of the ailing company.

And, of course, no nasty words like "pornographic" or "sinful."

Politicians would rather attack Mom's apple pie than they would question Chrysler's good faith.

If anyone wants to know what's wrong with America, maybe the Exxon-Chrysler story will give him a clue.

The Only Way To Go

Gov. Al Quie's directive to cut back $195 million in state spending and payments to local governments has not come without advance warning. State agencies were advised by the governor's office a month ago to begin preparing for the cutback as a result of state revenues being far below budget projections.

Effect of the order will filter into local governments as anticipated state participation in programs will be somewhat reduced. Areas and amounts of reduction are presently unknown but some hardships are bound to be created.

It didn't take long for the economic problem to become a political sounding board. The DFL quickly noted that the Republican governor inherited a surplus in the state treasury when he took office and during his administration the surplus turned to a deficit.

The governor responded that the DFL had pushed for greater state expenditures in the last legislative session which would have made the situation worse; that the Carter administration's "mishandling" of the national economy has caused a recession too severe for Minnesota's resilient economy; and that the surplus he inherited was accumulated because the DFL had refused to reduce taxes in excess of the state's needs.

At any rate, the governor's decision to cut expenses rather than call a special session of the legislature to consider raising taxes was the right one. Given the status of the state's and nation's economy, it was the only way to go.

THE VOICE of BUSINESS

U.S. Chamber of Commerce

The Senate's Superfund — Another Boondoggle For Big Brother

For centuries, people believed the oceans, land, and air could absorb any amount of human or industrial waste. Consequently, very little attention was paid to proper. But now, in view of the discovery of the infamous, abandoned, hazardous waste site at Love Canal in New York, and given the federal government's failure to adequately assist the residents of that stricken community, Americans suddenly have become very concerned about waste site dangers.

Everyone today agrees that these sites must be cleaned up, and as quickly as possible. Everyone does not agree, however, on how best to do the job. This is a question that concerns you, since, as a consumer, you will be paying for the incremental costs of clean-ups either through higher prices of higher taxes. What we must decide is: Should we move ahead calmly and intelligently, looking for the most cost-effective ways to meet these responsibilities; or, should we embrace the extravagant demands of hysterical environmental extremists — demands which could cost enough to buy us all gold-plated garbage containers, but which would have all the effectiveness of trying to kill flies with an ax?

The environmentalists are determined to make Americans believe that Love Canal is merely the first of many more industrial time bombs to come. Thus, once the public is in a state of panic, the conditions will be right for the federal government to massively intervene, bulldozing its way through all the regulations and laws many states have already enacted to deter improper disposal and storage. To accomplish this goal, the environmentalists have grossly misled the American public in two fundamental ways.

First, the Environmental Protection Agency released the results of a study it commissioned which estimated a national inventory of 50,666 hazardous waste sites. Upon inspection, however, it was revealed that the study had been conducted in just 60 days, and that it was based on questionable assumptions extrapolated from 232 cases — only 24 of which were actually visited. Texas Congressman Bob Eckhardt's Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigation, which estimated the country has only 851 potentially hazardous waste sites, had this to say about the EPA's commissioned report:

"While this report has many methodological flaws, the inadequancy of its fundamental data base alone is enough to discredit the study. The estimate of the number of sites and the degree of hazard that they pose is little better than pure guesswork. . ."

Second, Michigan Congressman Dave Stockman has pointed out that EPA's definition of hazardous is so sweeping it includes any substance that is flammable, corrosive, reactive, or toxic. He remarked:

"My own home is filled with hazardous substances, including sodium hypochlorite (bleach); sulfuric acid and lead (batteries); naphthalene ('Mr. Clean' or 'Fantastic Spray Cleaner'); as well as essentials for life on Capitol Hill such as 'Mouse-Rid' 'Rat-Kill', and 'Rat-Guide'. . . Every municipal dump in the country probably contains hazardous substances. . . Every telephone pole or railroad tie treated with creosote — a hazardous substance on the EPA list — might need to be inventoried and assessed."

So, by enumerating as hazardous thousands of waste sites which are not, and by defining hazardous substances so broadly that virtually any substance could be included, PEA has laid the groundwork for a bill called a "Superfund," which is now being considered by the Senate. It could more accurately be called a $50 billion super-boondoggle. The bill embodies a scope which extends far beyond the primary problem of inactive hazardous waste sites. It is so punitive it would establish legal procedures exposing industry to incalculable financial liability, and it would probably create situations where companies will have to pay for cleaning up wastes for which they were not even responsible. Indeed, the bill would turn the burden of proof of existing law upside down by forcing defendants to show that releases did not cause injuries of illnesses allegedly suffered by plaintiffs.

The U.S. Chamber understands that the business community has responsibilities, that it must clean up abandoned or inactive hazardous waste sites, and that it must support third party injury claims. But that is a far dry from the legislation now in the Senate which makes not even the pretense of being equitable.

55 mph Speed Limit Saves Gas And Lives

Key to maintaining a safe following distance between your car and the car in front is to learn the two-second rule, according to the Minnesota safety council.

When the vehicle ahead of you passes a fixed object like a bridge or a sign, slowly count one thousand, two thousand. That is about two seconds.

If you finish counting before you reach the object, you're at a safe following distance. If you haven't, allow more room. Leave another second if the road is slippery or wet.

Minnesota Safety Council reminds drivers to observe the 55 mph speed limit as another safeguard against rear-end collisions. It takes less time for your vehicle to stop at 55 mph, and you have more time to react to situations ahead of you when you travel 55 mph. Be independent — drive 55 mph to save gasoline and save lives.

Independent School District 441 of Newfolden, Minnesota today announced its policy for determining eligibility of children who may receive free and reduced price meals and free milk served under the National School Lunch, and Special Milk Programs.

Local school officials have adopted the following family size and income criteria for determining eligibility:

FAMILY SIZE	ELIGIBILITY SCALE FOR FREE MEALS AND FREE MILK			ELIGIBILITY SCALE FOR REDUCED PRICE MEALS
	Annual	Monthly	Weekly	Annual	Monthly	Weekly
1	$ 5,230	$ 436	$ 101	$ 8,150	$ 679	$ 157
2	6,900	575	133	10,760	897	207
3	8,580	715	165	13,380	1,115	257
4	10,250	854	197	15,990	1,333	308
5	11,930	994	229	18,600	1,550	358
6	13,600	1,133	262	21,220	1,768	408
7	15,280	1,273	294	23,830	1,986	458
8	16,950	1,413	326	26,440	2,203	508
Each additional family member . . .	plus-1,680	plus-140	plus-32	plus-2,610	plus-218	plus-50

Children from families whose income is at or below the levels shown are eligible for free or reduced price meals or free milk. In addition, families not meeting these criteria but with other unusual expenses due to unusually high medical expenses, shelter costs higher than 30 per cent of income, special education expenses due to mental or physical condition of a child, and disaster or casualty losses are urged to apply.

Application forms are being sent to all homes in a letter to parents. Additional copies are available in the principal's office in each school. The information provided on the application is confidential and will be used only for the purpose of determining eligibility. Applications may be submitted at any time during the year. A simple statement of income and family size is required, plus a signed certification by the parent or guardian that the information provided is true and correct.

In certain cases foster children are also eligible for these benefits. If a family has foster children living with them and wishes to apply for such meals and milk for them, they should contact the school.

Under the provisions of the policy, the Secondary principal will review applications and determine eligibility. If a family is dissatisfied with the ruling of the approving official, they may wish to discuss the decision with the approving official on an informal basis.

If they wish to make a formal appeal, they may make a request either orally or in writing to Halward Anderson, Viking, Minnesota, telephone 523-3232 for a hearing to appeal the decision. The policy contains an outline of the hearing procedure.

If a family member becomes unemployed or if family size income changes, the family should contact the school to file a new application. Such changes may make the children of the family eligible for reduced price meals, or for additional benefits such as free meals and milk if the family income falls at or below the levels shown above.

In the operation of school nutrition programs, no child will be discriminated against because of race, color, or national origin.

The main office of the Independent School District 441 has a copy of the complete policy, which may be reviewed by any interested party.

16% Of Taxpayers Pay Half Of Taxes

Half of the individual income taxes collected by the state of Minnesota are paid by 16 per cent of the state's taxpayers, according to the Minnesota Taxpayers association.

The state income tax liability totaled $1.261 billion for income earned in 1978 and taxes filed in 1979. The 299,000 taxpayers who comprise the highest 16 per cent of the state's earners — those whose incomes were over $20,000 — picked up 50.3 per cent of the tab.

In addition, the association reports that about half of those who paid income taxes in 1979 were shouldering 87 per cent of the liability.

On the federal level these burden figures are more dramatic. Half the income taxes collected by Uncle Sam come out of the pockets of 10 per cent of the taxpayers. The highest 10 per cent of the nation's earners — those with incomes above $29,414, in 1978 — picked up 49.7 per cent of the tab. In addition, half the taxpayers in the nation are shouldering 94 per cent of the liability.

According to Don Paterick, executive director of the association, "In 1970, 76 per cent of Minnesota's income taxpayers reported income of less than $10,000, and paid 37 per cent of the burden. Eight years later, this income group represents 52.5 per cent of filers who pay 14 per cent of the burden.

"These figures point to significant inflationary impacts. Every year the $10,000 or below category has diminished, as income earners move into higher income categories. This is a well known gradual movement which takes on significance over a period of time. In Minnesota's progressive income tax system where higher income means higher tax rates, the significance is shown by the total tax increase from $349 million in 1970 to $1.261 billion in 1978," Paterick said. "This automatic inflationary tax increase was abruptly halted by the 1979 Legislature through enactment of 'indexing'. Beginning with income earned in 1979, the tax brackets were expanded by 85 per cent of the rise in the cost of living, which computed out to a 10 per cent bracket expansion. The brackets will again be expanded, based on 85 per cent of the August consumer price index, for taxes payable in 1981. Current price index indicates an additional 10 per cent adjustment for 1980 income."

Paterick added that Minnesota continues to rank as a high income tax state despite the first year effect of indexing. "A survey just completed by Minnesota's department of revenue shows that Minnesota ranks second or third highest in the nation for single filers with income between $7,500 and $35,000. Minnesota's ranking drops for income above $35,000.

"The state ranks highest in the nation for one wage earner families with incomes between $12,500 and $50,000, and generally second highest for two wage earner families. Furthermore, the latest statistics from the U.S. department of commerce for fiscal year 1979, rank Minnesota third highest in per capita income tax collections," Paterick said.

Minnesota Taxpayers association cites other trends since 1970, including: the number of taxable returns filed increased by about 542,000 — from 1,384,000 in 1970 to 1,926,000 in 1978, or by 39 per cent; those reporting incomes in excess of $100,000 increased from 994 in 1970, to 5,238 in 1978. Taxpayers in this income category paid an average tax of $14,000 in 1978.

Average tax for all taxable filers in 1978 was $655, compared with $252, nine years ago. For those earning less than $10,000 the average tax increased from $121 in 1970 to $177 in 1978, or 46 per cent. The $10,000 to $20,000 income group witnessed an increase of 53 per cent in the average tax paid — from $474 in 1970 to $727 in 1978. Those earning from $20,000 to $30,000 paid an average tax of $1,170 in 1970, compared with 1,415 in 1978 — a 21 per cent increase. Letters to the Editor

To The Editor:

On Sunday, August 17, the Northern Minnesota Pork Producers association held a feeder pig show, sale, barbecue and hog wrestle. The event was designed to promote pork and hog production in our area. Because of good advertising and widespread interest, over 1,000 persons were in attendance. A small admission fee was to be charged to raise money for the prizes and provide a profit for the Pork Producers.

Everything went as planned — except for the hog wrestling contest. Over 30 four-person teams were entered in the competition for the prizes. Prior to the day, the local humane society, with the help of our law enforcement agencies, found a never before enforced Minnesota statute to stop the entertainment.

Isn't it great that narrow individuals will, with the help of some misinterpreted laws, hold back free enterprising individuals who are trying to have fun? This organization asks for no government help or aid. All they wanted to do was promote their product. The 250-pound hogs used were to be slaughtered the next day and if they were abused, certainly they would not pass the government inspection.

Let's face it, this is an example of laws passed by our legislators that are used against our freedom. Let us hope that those present, including Congressman Stangeland and the three prospective reps from District 1B, took note. Let Christensen, Kremer and Stumpf think seriously about the far reaching ramifications of all laws they author.

As a four member team, we feel we were cheated by our freedom loving country from participating in this event. We hope that next year when the second annual pork days are held, the interpretation of the laws will be corrected so that we will be allowed to proceed with the entertainment.

Sincerely,
Judy Yutrzenka,
Pam Yutrzenka,
Dawn Ose,

Lincoln high school football teams have produced just one winning season over the past seven years and an inexperienced 1980 Thief River Falls ball club may have to pull off an upset or two if the Prowlers are to climb above .500 for the first time since 1974.

Thief River Falls' 1980 schedule hardly guarantees a winning season. It features Moorhead and Grand Rapids, names synonymous with strong athletic programs; defending Northwest Athletic Conference (NWAC) champion Crookston, a Class A state playoff semifinalist a year ago with a predominately junior team; perennial NWAC favorites Bemidji and Fergus Falls; an always tough opener against Grand Forks Red River; and evenly matched foes Detroit Lakes, Staples and East Grand Forks.

"We realize we have a very difficult schedule," admitted Thief River Falls coach John Schmitz. "Crookston, we would expect, will be strong again this year, and we know Moorhead, Grand Rapids, Bemidji and Fergus Falls will all be strong competition. But if we didn't feel we could win the games, we wouldn't schedule them."

Thief River Falls finished 3-6 a year ago when the Prowlers beat Crosby-Ironton 26-14, shut out Staples 37-0 and upset No. 2-ranked Bemidji 22-21 while losing to Grand Forks Red River 30-8, Detroit Lakes 13-6, Moorhead 41-14, Fergus Falls 28-22, East Grand Forks 20-18 and Crookston 28-8. Grand Rapids replaces Crosby-Ironton on the 1980 schedule.

There are just 13 seniors on this year's squad. A bulk of the team will be juniors, who were unbeaten through a six-game sophomore schedule in 1979.

"We're just hoping the sophomore group of a year ago can continue their winning ways as varsity players," mentioned Schmitz.

Bryan Grand Criticized

Bemidji high school hockey coach Bryan Grand was criticized at a Bemidji school board meeting last week by John Buckanaga, who protested the cutting of his son from the Bemidji high school varsity hockey team during the 1979-80 season.

After hearing Buckanaga's presentation, the board called a special meeting for Thursday, Sept. 4, to consider parent and student complaints as well as hearing from administration on the issue. Board chairman Frank Goodell said Buckanaga had made some serious accusations and that the board needed some answers.

According to the story appearing in the Bemidji Pioneer, Buckanaga said his son was cut one day before the first varsity game and no satisfactory reason for the action has been given.

"I wanted to know the real reason for his being removed from the team," Buckanaga is quoted in the Pioneer. After he had received "excuses or irrational cover-ups," Buckanaga told the board he then talked to teachers, coaches, parents and students to find some answers. A list of statements from those discussions was presented to the board last Tuesday accusing Grand of practicing favoritism and a double standard in varsity squad selection and of lacking leadership.

It further alleged that Grand had a serious and difficult communication problem both as a teacher and as a coach; showed inability to discipline; had allowed drugs and alcohol to be used in the dressing rooms and on bus trips; and had violated rules of the Minnesota State High School League by using ineligible players.

According to Buckanaga, he first discussed the situation last spring with superintendent Clinton Barter, but the problem has not yet been resolved.

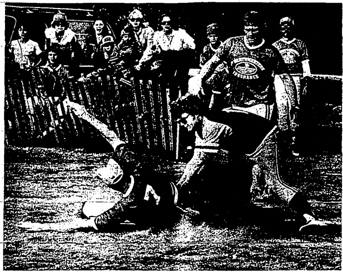
In a meeting last spring attended by the superintendent, Buckanaga, Frank Saccomen and Lem Pierce, Barter said Grand "has to go" and that he has serious problems handling the hockey program, according to Buckanaga.

Barter denied the statement, calling it a "categorical untruth."

Saccomen reiterated at the meeting that Barter told them previously Grand "had to go" and that it was a question of how that should be done.

According to Barter, though, Saccomen's statement was "not true." Barter added that "there are some concerns," but that John Luoma was appointed athletic director last year and requested the opportunity to deal with the problem. "I've agreed to support that position," Barter said.

Brother of Thief River Falls head coach Wendell Grand, Bryan has served as the Lumberjacks' head coach since the 1976-77 season. A Bemidji State University graduate, Bryan coached Bantam and junior varsity hockey before succeeding Chuck Grillo as Bemidji head coach.



FIRST FEDERAL CATCHER Jim Barry applied the tag to First Northwestern Insurance Agency base runner Tom Kays for a fifth inning out during Thursday's National League playoff finals in the Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball association. Kays tried to score from second base on the play but was thrown out by left fielder Bob Forberg. First Northwestern Insurance Agency fans and on-deck batter Scott Kays kept a close eye on things. First Northwestern Insurance Agency, with Scott Kays hitting a three-run home run, won the game and the National League playoff title 4-2.

Inexperienced Prowlers Face Major Rebuilding Job This Fall

You better have a program in hand Friday when the Lincoln high school football team, featuring 18 new starters, three new assistant coaches and a new head coach, opens its 1980 season against Grand Forks Red River on the Thief River Falls athletic field.

With just one starter back on offense (and he's playing a different position this fall) and only three starters returning on defense, newly appointed head coach John Schmitz faces a major rebuilding job this fall after inheriting the position vacated just prior to the start of preseason practice by Gene Jurgens, who left to accept a job opportunity in Fergus Falls.

A long-time member of the Thief River Falls coaching staff, Schmitz will be assisted this fall by Charlie Cornell and new staff members Tim Olson, Bill McGann and John Kopari.

"Our inexperience is going to be the big thing," admitted Schmitz.

Hardest hit by graduation was the Prowlers' offensive backfield where five seniors — Bill Jury, John Dillon, Jeff Ulrich, Tom Bjorkman and Dave Odegaard — cornered the market in playing time a year ago.

This year's offense will be geared around quarterback Scott Wiebolt, a strong 6-1, 180-pound senior; the biggest back in camp.

"We feel Scott, with his size, should give us a good year at quarterback," noted Schmitz. "With his size, Scott will surely be able to run the option. His passing will be adequate, or more so."

Juniors Brent Schmitz and Eric Bondy are working behind Wiebolt at quarterback.

Schmitz rattled off seven names that might be found in the Prowlers' offensive backfield this fall, including seniors Scott Kezar, Steve Jorstad and Marty Semanko, along with juniors Tom Ose, Jim Dillon, Dan Odegaard and Jeff Imgrund. Ose is the quickest back in the bunch, but he's only 5-6, 142-pounds. Kezar is the heaviest runningback at 182 pounds.

"We're small in the backfield," acknowledged Schmitz, "but we have some good quickness in some of the backs."

Inexperience will be a major flaw in the offensive backfield. Jury led the 1979 Prowlers with 716 yards rushing and 36 points. Wiebolt has the top 1979 statistics for the 1980 returnees with just 44 yards rushing and six points. He was 0-for-3 passing a year ago when Ulrich went 26-for-65 for 402 yards. Ose rushed for 38 yards and Odegaard had 19 in brief varsity duty last fall.

While inexperience surfaces again in the offensive line, size won't be a major concern, says Schmitz. "Our line won't be big, but we'll be in the 190-pound category, at least from tackle to tackle," he reported.

Dave Kays, one of only 13 seniors on the squad and the only returning starter on offense, is expected to anchor the interior line. But the 6-2, 210-pounder is playing tackle this fall after spending 1979 as a center.

This year the centering will probably be done by 5-11, 190-pound junior Mark Harder.

Top guard prospects include senior Rick Gobell (5-9, 196), the team's captain, and juniors Rob Jorstad (5-7, 188) and Wade Hruby (5-8, 193).

Tackles will probably be senior Dean Dokkin (6-1, 198) and juniors Steve Olson (5-9, 180) and Jon Ness (5-9, 214).

Tight ends are seniors Greg Harder (5-11, 196) and Kevin Grochow (5-10, 165), along with junior Dave Upham (5-11, 162).

Senior Jeff Spencer (5-8, 155) and junior Kent Kainz (5-8, 154) are wide receivers.

"We feel we'll be adequate offensively," mentioned Schmitz, "but we have to have some concern, naturally, because of our inexperience."

Although he handles the offensive backs, its the Thief River Falls defense that is on Schmitz' mind during preseason drills.

"This (defense) is the area of our game that has to improve the most," pointed out Schmitz. "If you look over the past few years, our offense hasn't been all that bad. But we've given up an awful lot of points on defense. That's the area we have to improve upon. We feel we can improve, but again, we're inexperienced."

Gobell, Semanko and Steve Jorstad were starters a year ago on defense. Gobell and Semanko are likely starters in the line again this year, with Hruby, Kays, Ness, Dokkin, Olson, Dillon and Greg Harder also looking for playing time.

Steve Jorstad, Rob Jorstad, Kezar, Upham and Mark Harder have the best shots at the three linebacker spots, while Wiebolt, Odegaard, Imgrund, Kainz, senior Jon Stimac and junior Rick Langlie are among the candidates for positions in the defensive backfield.

Slow Pitch Playoffs . . .

National League Title Decided

First Northwestern Insurance Agency, on the strength of Scott Kays' two-out, three-run home run in the top of the fourth inning, defeated First Federal 4-2 Thursday in the finals of the post-season National League Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball association playoffs.

The two teams were meeting for the third time in the double-elimination event after splitting earlier meetings when First Federal won the first encounter 11-7 and First Northwestern Insurance Agency took the rematch 12-8.

During the 1980 regular season, First Northwestern Insurance Agency (17-5) and First Federal (15-7) finished 2-3 behind Schumacher's Tireland in the National League West Division.

Finals in the American League portion of the playoffs will be played this week. Swenson Plumbing has the edge after coming up with a 17-16 victory over McDonald's-Dallmann Wednesday in a match-up of the playoffs' final two unbeaten teams.

Tonight's (Monday) elimination games will find Furuseth-Nelson playing the TRF Merchants at 6:20 p.m., with the winner going against McDonald's-Dallmann at 7:40. The survivor will tackle Swenson Plumbing in the finals, tentatively scheduled to be played Tuesday at 6:20 p.m. A second game, if needed, would follow at 7:40.

Four American League teams were eliminated Wednesday. The TRF Merchants ousted the American Legion Raiders 15-7, Furuseth-Nelson scored six times in the first inning to sideline Phase II 14-5, Popplers-Action Realty knocked out Hobo Haus, but then lost to Furuseth-Nelson 6-5 on Kurt Muzzy's one-out RBI single in the bottom of the seventh inning.

McDonald's-Dallmann began with a 3-0 first inning lead Wednesday, but Swenson Plumbing scored seven times on eight singls in the fourth inning to go ahead 10-5. It became 14-5 after 5½ innings and it looked like a rout.

But the regular season American League West Division champion McDonald's-Dallmann squad battled back, scoring six times in the bottom of the sixth to make it 14-11.

With darkness setting in, Swenson Plumbing came up with three runs in the top of the seventh for a 17-11 edge, but still had to sweat out the bottom of the inning when Greg Higdem's two-out, two-run home run highlighted a five-run McDonald's-Dallmann come-back try.

There are an estimated 10,000 snowmobile clubs in North America.

LHS Volleyball Season Opens At Detroit Lakes

A trip to Detroit Lakes Friday will kick off the 1980 season for the Lincoln high school volleyball team, and coach Sharon Stauss indicated the Prowlers appear ready for the 8 p.m. match against the Lakers.

"Right now I'm really pleased with the way things have been going in practice," reported Stauss. "We had about a dozen girls who attended volleyball camp during the summer — seven on the varsity — and their skills were right up where they left off last year."

Leading the Prowlers this year will be senior co-captains Stacy Ehrenstrom and Marlys Huot. They were feature performers in 1979 when the hard-hitting Ehrenstrom led the team with 46 ace (unreturnable) spikes and 13 ace blocks, while Huot used finesse in leading the team with 15 ace dinks (shots dropped lightly across the net instead of the hard spike).

Others likely to see varsity playing time are seniors Barb Pfeifer and Suzanne Gere, along with juniors LeAnn Paetznick, Karmon Espe, Joleen Gibson, Jackie Kappes, Sheryl Stimac, Jill Matson and Tara Nicholson.

We've got a lot of height on the varsity and some good jumpers; that shoul make us tough," warned Stauss, whose Prowlers were 9-7 last fall. "I'm pretty optimistic."

A new offensive wrinkle — a 6-2 alignment — should give Thief River Falls' taller lineup an opportunity to do some damage at the net. "It gives us a three-man attack on the front line," explained Stauss. "It'll help us both offensively and defensively, making us tough on the hits or the blocks."

Development of a stronger bench is uppermost in the minds of Stauss and new assistant coach Karen Schulte, a four-year college volleyball performer at Dickinson (N.D.) State. "I need a stronger bench," admits Stauss.

Other squad members are juniors Darlene Grothe and Denise Updahl and sophomores Lynette Huot, Gretchen McEwen, Pammy Bergan, Patty Meyer, Lisa Nepper, Susie Waale, Julie Melander, Pam Finney, Carla Thompson and Collette Thune.

"We have some goals," pointed out Stauss. "Moorhead is always going to be our toughest opponent, and Warren and Fosston have strong volleyball programs; we want to beat those teams."

Thief River Falls will open with three road matches before the Prowlers' home opener Tuesday, Sept. 9, against Fisher.

Lincoln Girls Open 1980 Tennis Season

First Lincoln high school athletic team to open its 1980 season will be the girls tennis squad, scheduled to play three matches on the road this week.

The Prowlers, coached by Whitey Olson, were scheduled to be at East Grand Forks for a 4 p.m. match today (Monday), followed by 3:30 p.m. matches at Moorhead Tuesday and at Roseau Thursday.

Fifteen girls were on the roster, but because of the Minnesota State High School League — required five days of practice before they are eligible to play a match, only nine Prowlers were ready for today's opener.

The Prowlers' season-opening line-up was expected to feature senior Pam Wassink, junior Christie LaCoursiere and freshman Kim Lawrenz in singles, with junior Christie LaCoursiere and freshman Kim Lawrenz in singles, with junior Nancy Swanson and eighth grader Michelle Olson set in at No. 1 doubles. The second doubles was up for grabs between sophomores Kristy Peterson and Renelle Twistol, freshman Amy Thorstad and eighth grader Natalie Wilson.

Wassink, Swanson and Olson were letter winners on last year's team that finished 6-8 in dual meet competition.

"I think we'll have an improved team over last year," mentioned Olson. "I think we've got a good young group of girls. I look for them to improve as the year goes along and we hope to peak at tournament time. At this point we've progressed well."

Rest of the squad members who will be ready to join the team for the matches at Moorhead and Roseau, include junior letter winner Marsha Erickson, senior Jamie Hanson, sophomore Lisa Glass, Freshmen Kristian Pollick and seventh graders Connie Grovem and Michelle Puetz.

Mark Collins, a member of Olson's Region 8AA championship boys team last spring, is now aiding Olson as a work-study student assistant from Northland community college.

Even though the Prowlers were scheduled to open play today, they won't play a home match until Tuesday, Sept. 9, when Crookston will be here for a 3:30 p.m. match. Thief River Falls will play its first five matches on the road.

No one knows precisely who invented the first over-the-snow (snowmobile) machine, but primitive snow-go machines have been traced back to the 1800's.

A WIDE THROW by pitcher Mike Kosel pulled Swenson Plumbing third baseman Keith Daley off the bag, but he stretched for the ball, turned and tagged out McDonald's-Dallmann base runner Greg Higdem, who was trying to go from second to third on a force play in the fourth inning of Wednesday's American League playoff game in the Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball association. Swenson Plumbing outlasted McDonald's-Dallmann 17-16 in a meeting of the final two unbeaten teams in the double-elimination event.

Minnesota Amateur Baseball Hall . . .

Former TRF Resident Named To Hall Of Fame

Glenn Carlson of St. Cloud, a former Thief River Falls resident, was one of five men who have been selected for induction and membership into the Minnesota amateur baseball Hall of Fame in 1980.

The new Hall of Fame nominees are Dennis Campbell, Winsted; Robert Heidmann, Gaylord; Art Rolfzen, New Munich; Robert J. Zellmann, Norwood; and Carlson.

Four of the members are still active and promoting amateur baseball in their area. Robert Heidmann is deceased.

The five finalists were selected from a list of 92 men who have been nominated by amateur baseball fans in Minnesota. With the five new members, the Hall of Fame will have 102 members on its roster.

The new members will be inducted into the organization during the 18th annual Hall of Fame banquet which will be held at the VFW Post 428 in St. Cloud Sunday, Sept. 21.

Tickets are now available for the banquet and can be obtained from members of the board of directors of the Minnesota baseball association or by sending your check to St. Cloud Sports Inc., Box 549, St. Cloud, MN 56301. Tickets are $4.75 each.

The Hall of Fame was founded and is sponsored by St. Cloud Sports Inc. During the banquet the Minnesota baseball association will host and honor their 1980 A and B state tournament champions.

Glenn Carlson is the executive vice president of the St. Cloud Area Chamber of Commerce and is the founder of the Hall of Fame and has been its secretary-treasurer for the past 17 years. His nomination was supported by former ball players and umpires and many of the members of the Hall of Fame. His activity in amateur baseball was in the Thief River Falls area and central Minnesota and he was the host community secretary for seven state tournaments that were held in St. Cloud since 1963. He was an all-state first baseman on the 1955 Lincoln high school state tournament consolation championship baseball team reached by Ralph Skay.

Memory of Robert Heidmann, former resident of the Gaylord area will live on for many years because of the large number of supporters of his Hall of Fame nomination. His support came from all walks of life, including the two U.S. Senators and a Congressman from Minnesota. Newspapers and radio stations from Mankato, St. Peter, LeSuer, New Ulm and his hometown of Gaylord urged citizens in the area to join in his support.

Dennis Campbell will be 75 years old September 30. He is a painter when he is not spending his time in the promoting of amateur baseball. His nomination was supported by the Winsted Civic & Commerce Association and over 350 people in his area who wrote letters or signed petitions.

Nomination of Art "Jackson" Rolfzen, who is the mayor of New Munich was backed by baseball players and umpires in central Minnesota who have watched his involvement in amateur, American Legion and Little League baseball in his area.

Although forty-eight years of age is relatively young for most members of the Hall of Fame, Robert Zellman has spent over 32 years in his participation in the Minnesota amateur baseball program. The support for his nomination came from a large group of amateur baseball fans from the Norwood area.

District Court Rules In Favor Of H.S. League

In February 1980 the Minnesota State High School League (MSHSL) defended its policies regarding the separate seasons established for girls and boys tennis and swimming before Ramsey District Court Judge Edward Mulally in the case of Striebel and State Department of Human Rights vs. Minnesota State High School League.

Judge Mulally's decision was reached on July 30, 1980. His ruling:

"That defendant, Minnesota State High School League, is entitled to judgement:

1. That the rules and policies of the Minnesota State High School League establishing separate seasons for boys and girls in the sports of swimming and tennis are constitutional and are authorized by and in compliance with Minnesota Statute Section 126.21 presently in effect, and by Minnesota Statute Section 126.21 as amended by Laws of 1980, Chapter 355.

2. That defendant, Minnesota State High School League, is entitled to its costs and disbursements herein."

The court's finding of fact stated:

"That separate seasons for boys and girls in the sports of tennis and swimming are necessary to provide all members of each sex an equal opportunity to compete in the athletic program in light of the inadequate pool and tennis facilities, larger number of participants of each sex in these sports, and the intensive use to which these facilities are subject.

That the rules and policies of the Minnesota State High School League establishing separate seasons for boys and girls in the sports of swimming and tennis are reasonable and rational and provide equal athletic opportunity to all members of each sex."

In the judge's memorandum, he also states that:

"In the opinion of the court, neither Minnesota Statute Section 126.121 (1978), nor Minnesota Statute Section 126.21 as amended by the Laws of 1980, Chapter 355, which is effective as of August 1, 1980, violates the equal protection clause or any other provision of the constitution of the United States."

DNR Firearms Auction Nets Record $22,610

An auction of firearms and other items of hunting and fishing equipment confiscated during the past 12 months from state game and fish law violators produced $22,610 for the state treasury at a sale held Aug. 2.

The annual sale was held at the National Guard Armory in St. Paul and approximately 700 persons participated.

A total of 250 items were sold including 139 firearms. Highest price received for a single item was $500 paid for a Winchester .410 gauge Model 23 pump.

Total amount produced from the sale was up $5,000 from the previous year and was the highest figure ever received in the history of the sales.

Snowmobilers in Canada and the United States spend over $2.6 billion on their sport each year.

Derby Winners

A muskie weighing 31-pounds, 8-ounces won first place in the 18th annual muskie northern derby days sponsored by the Leech Lake Area Chamber of Commerce. Caught by Turk VanLith of Delano, the fish was 50½ inches in length and 21 inches in girth. He caught it on Leech Lake on a Mepps.

A Chicago fisherman, Ben Bleiweiss, won second place with a muskie weighing 25-pounds, 9-ounces. He was using a Cisco.

Third place muskie weighed 22-pounds, 12-ounces and was caught by Kenny Hohensee of Goldfield, Ia.

Winning northern weighed 12-pounds, 8-ounces and was caught by Dan Brown of Golden Valley. Jan Johnson of Eagan took second place in the northern division with a fish weighing 12-pounds, 2-ounces. Third place northern weighed 12-pounds, 1-ounce and was caught by Paul Bury of Minnetonka.

Mac Davis Fishes

Mac Davis, famous singing star who was appearing at the Celebrity Room of the Carlton House in Minneapolis, took time out to do some fishing in the Brainerd area at the recommendation of Walter Bush, president of the North Stars hockey team. He was guided by 16-year-old Kevin Koep, son of Marv Koep of Nisswa Bait & Tackle and the Nisswa guides league. The first afternoon Mac caught six bass and one northern. The next day both Davis and Koep caught limits of northerns.

Lake of the Woods

Donna Hamre of Elmer's Sportsmen's Center in Baudette paints this picture for us:

"The reef and rocky areas are still yielding the larger walleyes. Fishing slowed up a bit this week but the Lake of the Woods gave up her limits. The launches are still going 15-25 miles up the lake for their walleyes.

Again all three live baits are doing well with the nitecrawlers putting in overtime. The fish are starting to move a little and as a result fishing has picked up around Pine and Sable islands, and in the two gaps.

As far as we can tell, this year's fishing schedule is about three weeks ahead of time. This is probably due to the low water conditions and fine weather we've been experiencing lately. The muskies are starting to bite with the jerk baits doing the best job. Muskie Hogs are bringing them in as well. Black seems to be the best predominant color. Hot spots are north of Oak Island in the Monument Bay area and around Sabaskening Bay."

Wolves

Injustice has dealt the wolves a low blow — a move to his extinction. Mankind is not content to hunt mankind by war, he now must prove he is "king of all beasts", by killing for the fun of killing.

When 'game' is unavailable to hunters, it is invariably the fault of other wild animals — the so-called nonessential predator. Conservationists recognize that severe winters of the past several years, or the disturbance of habitat, illegal hunting, etc., which created adverse conditions that decreased the herds.

But the wolf has served as the scapegoat; being blamed for what is really not his fault.

Research is the guide to good hunting, and to hunters everywhere, conservation education is the essential criteria of knowledge.

With every hunting license should come a credit card of knowledge in conservation degree. We wouldn't permit teeth extraction by a nonprofessional. Yet we permit people loose in the woodlands if he proves he has a 'ticket' to enter and to kill.

It is a guaranteed fact that wolf numbers are governed by prey numbers, all very carefully conservationally researched. We gave these researcher-conservationists-scientists their jobs because they are educated educators in their fields. Why can't we all learn from their findings? They are our teachers.

Let's all use more conservation and less conversation.

Yet our very own Secretary of the Interior, Cecil D. Andrus, lifted his ban on the wolves, by blocking the aerial hunting of wolves on public lands under federal jurisdiction. Federal lands had been closed to Alaska's aerial hunting since last year. For more on this vital information, kindly write or call the publishers of "Mainstream," (which is a vital publication in the preservation of all animals) Animal Protection Institute Of America, P.O. Box 22505, Sacramento, CA 95822. The book also deals with the late assault upon the seal herds, traps, dog packs, etc.

Bass Contest

Todd Bodeen of Shakopee and Keith Eastin of Longville have caught the two largest bass so far in the "Minnesota Outdoors" annual bass fishing contest. Each fish weighed eight pounds, three-ounces.

Bodeen caught his in Lake Waconia. Eastin caught his bass in Big Sand Lake at Longville. Last year's winning bass weighed eight-pounds, ten-ounces. There were two of them.

Dan Berry of the St. Paul Pioneer Press informs us that in addition to the two bass reported above two bass weighing over seven pounds have been taken. Dan has charge of the "World's Largest Fishing Contest" sponsored by the Pioneer Press. The "Minnesota Outdoors" bass contest ends November 1.

To enter the contest a fisherman should register his catch at any bait shop.

Muskie Fishing

Five muskies all over 20 pounds were caught in Leech Lake during the last week in July. All were caught on the Mepps muskie bait. The largest was caught by Keith Ogle of Hackensack. It weighed 31-pounds, six-ounces.

A muskie weighing 27-pounds, 13-ounces was taken by Mark Bruns of Walker. The third largest was caught by Dorothy Risnes of Brandon, South Dakota. It weighed 27-pounds, nine-ounces.

Enforcement Director Is Named By DNR

A new director for the enforcement division of the Department of Natural Resources has been announced by DNR commissioner Joseph Alexander.

Named to the post was Fred Hammer, 46, area enforcement supervisor at Brainerd. He assumed his new duties Aug. 13.

Hammer succeeds Richard Tarte who was appointed in April, 1979, and is retiring after 32 years of state service.

Conservation officers enforce all of the state's fish and wildlife laws in addition to most other laws and regulations under the department's jurisdiction.

Hammer first joined the department in 1951, working at the DNR's Madelia game farm and research station. He was promoted to game keeper in 1953.

After two years in military service he returned to the department and was assigned the duty of a refuge patrolman at the Red Lake wildlife management area. In 1957 he was transferred to the Whitewater wildlife management area in southeastern Minnesota.

In 1960, Hammer became a conservation officer and served in posts at Blue Earth and St. Peter and in 1972 he was promoted to area enforcement supervisor at St. Peter. In 1976 he took over the duties of area enforcement supervisor at Brainerd.

He was born near Odin in Watonwan county and attended high school in St. James.

Drought Hits Trees Across No. Minnesota

Drought conditions in portions of northern Minnesota are affecting oak, birch and other forest trees by weakening them and reducing their resistance to insects and disease.

Department of Natural Resources forestry division this week cited the example of Maplewood state park in Otter Tail county where large "sawlog size" red oaks have died this year as a result of drought conditions and an invasion of boring insects.

Birch dieback is even more widespread, said foresters, because birch are more sensitive to environmental conditions and are more popular with homeowners.

Building a home among birch trees or planting them in the lawn often results in rootlet death due to an increase in soil temperatures.

Lawn conditions are usually hotter and drier than conditions found in a wooded situation where birch normally grow.

Foresters advised homeowners to take the following steps:

+Water birches heavily once every seven to 10 days during dry periods;

—Apply a balanced fertilizer such as 10-10-10 at least once every three years;

+Put a four-foot diameter (two-four inch thick collar of mulch) on the ground around the trunk.

+If the top starts to droop and shed leaves, cut off the infested portion of the branches by cutting through sound clear wood between the infestation and the trunk of the tree.

+Limit playing and other activities that cause soil compaction away from birch trees.

Ginseng May Be Harvested Through Dec. 31

Minnesota's second annual season for the harvest of wild ginseng will be from August 15 through December 31, the Department of Natural Resources announced.

Wild ginseng is a medicinal herb which has been dug in Minnesota since the state was first settled by pioneers. The plant is typically found growing in the hardwood forest regions of central and southeastern Minnesota.

A state season was begun last year to comply with federal requirements. These requirements were established to insure that the plant will not become endangered because of overharvest.

Last year, during the state's first regulated ginseng season, approximately 1,400 pounds of dry roots were harvested. From 30 to 50 plants are required to produce one pound of roots, but ginseng is sold for more than $100 per pound.

Wild ginseng roots may be dug during the open season without limit, however it is not legal to dig any wild ginseng plant unless the plant has at least three prongs (leaves) with five leaflets each.

Immediately after digging or removing any wild ginseng plant, diggers are required to remove all the seeds from the plant's berries and to plant them in the area where the plant was dug.

Seeds must be planted by removing the dead leaves and other surface litter, planting each seed at a depth of one-half inch, and then replacing the surface litter.

Ginseng diggers who sell their roots within the state are not required to have a license. However, buyers of ginseng are required to purchase a $5 license from the DNR License Center, 625 North Robert Street, St. Paul, MN 55101.

Ginseng digger who sell their roots to out-of-state locations will need to purchase the "dealers license". The Department of Natural Resources will provide these diggers with the proper out-of-state export papers required by federal regulations.

Wild ginseng may be harvested on state forest lands, without permits. Harvest is allowed on state wildlife management areas only if the digger first obtains a free permit from the local state wildlife manager. No one may harvest wild ginseng in any state parks or other areas under the administration of the DNR division of parks and recreation.

Help Wanted

HELP WANTED — Middle aged person to live in and care for elderly couple. Good wages and working conditions. To start immediately. Call 218-437-8231. 10t66c

This might be a woman's most equal opportunity.

In the Army today, ambitious women routinely get opportunities they don't get elsewhere.

This might mean operating construction equipment, repairing engines, driving trucks, or dozens of other important duties. Of hundreds of occupational specialties available in the Army, only a relatively few in Combat Arms are closed to women.

Women who qualify will have a chance to train for a valuable skill. They'll have a chance to continue their education during off-duty hours, plus a chance to see more of the world.

For women equal to the challenge, the Army has a lot to offer.

County Board Proceedings

August 25, 1980
Official Proceedings
Board of County Commissioners
Pennington County, Minnesota
August 5, 1980

Pursuant to adjournment the County Board met in the Commissioners' Room in the Courthouse in Thief River Falls at 10:00 A.M., August 5, 1980.

Members present: Hoffman, Grabanski, Koop, Stenberg and Tasa. All present.

Reese Hall, Director of the Minnesota Juvenile Training Center of Bemidji appeared with a financial statement of the last years operation and a request for budget approval of the fiscal year 1980-81. The Board discussed with Mr. Hall the usage of the Center and the satellite Homes that are included in the total budget. The extent of State participation was enumerated with the request for the County being $10,117.00 compared to last years budget of $9,197.00. The following resolution was introduced by Commissioner Koop and moved its adoption:

BE IT RESOLVED, that the budget of the Minnesota Juvenile Training Center of Bemidji be approved as presented with the amount of $10,117.00 being pledged to support the Center for the fiscal year 1980-81, and said amount be appropriated and paid from the County budget of 1981.

The foregoing resolution was duly seconded by Commissioner Stenberg and upon vote declared unanimously adopted.

A representative of the Rieke, Carroll, Muller Associates, Inc. firm of Architects and Engineers, Ann Leviton, presented an 'Adaptive Re-Use Study' of the old Sanatorium Building also known as the Oakland Dormitory. The study enumerates the numerous alternative uses that may be made of the building along with an intensive evaluation of those uses and a study of the needs of the area. A summary of the study indicates that there are three possible uses for the building that may be appropriate. For Supervised Apartments for the Elderly, a Dormitory and for a Residential Treatment Facility. In order to determine whether any or all of these alternatives will be financially feasible it was moved by Grabanski seconded by Koop that the firm of Rieke, Carroll, Muller Associates, Inc. be engaged to perform phase two (2) in the feasibility study proposal. Motion declared unanimously carried.

Lois Swanson and Norma Hanson representing the Goodridge Area Historical Society presented a short history of the development of their organization, its purpose, functions and future plans. The organization owns an old school building that is presently on the school grounds in Goodridge and is the basis for a request that was made to the Board. The building needs an estimated $933.00 worth of repairs to windows and for a ramp for access. The presentation emphasized that the organization is involved in local presentations and are organized to represent the area and are not in competition with the Pennington County Historical Society with headquarters in Thief River Falls. The Board took the matter under advisement.

Commissioner Stenberg introduced the following resolution that had been inadvertently omitted from a previous meeting, and moved its adoption: BE IT RESOLVED, that rent agreement before the Board involving rent for Probation Officer, a State Office, covering an area of approximately 500 sq. ft. of space, be approved. Resolution

Involve Clergy In Workshops On Aid To Battered Women

by Neal St. Anthony
'U' M News Service

Few would agree with the sick adage that "Women, like walnut trees, should be beaten every day."

But the ugly reality is that battering of women continues in large numbers in Minnesota and elsewhere. "An estimated 26,965 assaults on women by their partners have occurred in the past 12 months in Minnesota," states the 1979 "Battered Women" report of the Minnesota department of corrections.

"Medical reports indicate abused persons required medical attention 78.5 per cent of the time; hospitalization, 12.2 per cent. Eighty per cent of the women exhibited bruises and lacerations."

In response to the problem, the legislature three years ago appropriated funds to establish "shelters" where battered women can seek refuge in each of the state's 13 economic regions. But the shelters are chronically overcrowded, and increasing numbers of women are seeking help. Moreover, the problem is considered too vast for that sort of response alone.

Last May, Gov. Al Quie told participants at the "Governor's Conference on Battered Women: The Religious Response," that "physical abuse is only a facet of the larger problem of emotional and psychological abuse. When a woman looses her self-respect, her dignity, when she feels isolated and forsaken, these are problems of the spirit and we need to involve the spiritual and religious community in resolving them."

Participants at the conference resolved that one of the best ways to get at the problem is through the local spiritual community of clergy and laity.

To that end, Joe Bash, director of Continuing Education for Religious Ministry at the University of Minnesota, is organizing 26 workshops on family violence — which include battering, child abuse and incest — throughout Minnesota for clergy and wives, staffs of faith communities, leaders of women's groups, and others. He is assisted by 13 regional chairmen.

"We wish to teach clergy and lay leadership some basic counseling and leadership, and referral techniques," said Bash, a Lutheran minister who has spent most of his professional life involved in community social projects. "We want to establish an ongoing educational thrust in the community about caring about these situations. It calls for quite a bit of wisdom and experience, and we will focus on the question of the 'batterer' as well."

Bash said clergymen frequently are unaware of the battering problem or are ill-prepared to cope with it in a counseling situation, a tragedy considering that community spiritual leaders are important sources of counseling and solace to many.

Most seminaries, he said, teach "little about it . . . if it is covered, it is touched on only lightly." But Bash cautions that the day-long workshops will not make instant professional counselors in domestic violence of those who attend.

"A clergyman has to be a generalist. It's not to put all the weight (on dealing with the situation) on them. But this will help them know where additional help can be found. Referral becomes important when it goes beyond a clergyman's gifts to give expert counsel in a particular area," he said.

"It's so intense a problem that we've got to get beyond just our ideological stance," Bash said. "I don't think the conferences will save society. But it's a good beginning. It opens doors."

Some 1,300 people are expected at the teaching sessions, Bash said. No religious doctrine will be taught, he emphasized. The workshops will be sponsored by two private organizations — the Northwest Area foundation and the Bush foundation — and not by public dollars. The governor's conference was underwritten by the Bremer and General Mills foundations, and the Minnesota Humanities commission.

Workshops will "have a secular focal point" of helping people whether they are religious or not, he said.

It's important to involve the clergy, Bash said, because they are integral parts of their communities. Workshops will include factual data about family violence, presentation of typical scenarios, referral service aids and other tools.

"The clergy person knows best about how he or she works in a community, whether it's a pulpit kind of thing or not," Bash said. "In the final analysis, the communities have to find out themselves how to help."

Bash said the response among clergy to the seminars has been generally positive, though some, he said, find battering a difficult subject to deal with.

Dates and locations of the conferences will be announced in the fall.

ETHEL WISETH does some painting on the backdrop to be used in the play "And to Think That I Saw It on Pennington Avenue" which will be presented in Goodridge Saturday at 7:30 p.m. The production was written by Mrs. Norma Hanson. She and her husband Lynn joined Mrs. Wiseth in working on the 50-foot long backdrop which will depict the street of downtown Goodridge in 1919. The play will be part of a commemoration of the Tri-County fair held in Goodridge in 1919. The program is sponsored by the Goodridge area historical socety.

Arnold Haugens Conservation Farm Couple

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Haugen of Middle River were chosen as "Conservation Farmer of the Year" for 1980-81 by the Marshall-Beltrami soil and water conservation district.

Arnold and Beulah Haugen live in Thief Lake township right by the entrance to the Thief Lake refuge headquarters. The Haugens live in a modern two-year-old home set back among the large oak and elm trees on their farmstead. Arnold has lived at this location all his life and purchased the farm from his parents. The Haugens now own 450 acres and rent 40 acres. They have two daughters, Cheryl (Mrs. Cedric Gustafson) and Jill, who is in college.

Main crops grown on the farm are wheat, barley and oats, some as certified seed. They also have a fine herd of dairy cows. Conservation practices installed on the Haugen farm include about six miles of ditching, clearing of 60 acres of woods and brush, planting or replanting 110 acres of pasture and hayland and cropping systems on 328 acres.

Arnold has been a member of the Thief Lake township board and of the Farmers Union for a number of years. Beulah works at Polaris and is a member of the North Star homemakers club. They are members of the First Lutheran church in Middle River.

Four Plays On Chanhassen Theater Menu

With four different stages and 31 performances weekly at the Chanhassen Dinner Theatres this summer, there is a play to meet just about everyone's theatrical taste.

"Annie Get Your Gun," the musical comedy filling the big dinner theatre stage with cowboys, Indians and all the excitement of a Wild West show, is almost guaranteed to satisfy audiences of all ages and persuasions. Based on real American folk heroes of the last century, sharpshooters Annie Oakley and Frank Butler, and their actual romance, "Annie Get Your Gun" is set to the music of Irving Berlin.

A number of the show's songs — including "The Girl That I Marry;" "There's No Business Like Show Business;" "They Say It's Wonderful;" "Lost - In His Arms;" "You Can't Get a Man with a Gun" — have become all time classics in the American repertoire of popular music.

Playing nightly except Mondays with afternoon shows Wednesdays and Saturdays, "Annie Get Your Gun" is expected to play into the fall.

Two other plays on Chanhassen's current bill have broad appeal. "I Do! I Do!" will soon be in the last six months of a 10-year stand at Chanhassen. Its plot, recounting a marriage from wedding night through some 50 years, is almost as well known to people of the Upper Midwest as the story of its stars, David Anders and Susan Goeppinger. The pair started dating each other after they were cast in "I Do! I Do!" and during the intervening years have married and produced two children while continuing their record-setting run in the play.

"On Golden Pond," however, is a new name — and a new play. It's a comedy about simple people but in spite of its light humor, it has a depth of seriousness and poignancy.

Another play opened recently at Chanhassen is the reprise of "What the Butler Saw," a zany farce imported from England. With some of its lines being as frank as they are, "What the Butler Saw" is not intended for children or for those easily offended by outspoken and blunt sexual remarks.

There is no dark night at Chanhassen with two of the four theaters open Mondays and Tuesdays and all of the stages playing the rest of the week. There are Wednesday and Thursday matinees, Sunday brunch shows in two of the theaters and Saturday afternoon shows.

Grand Forks Rehab Hospital Accredited

A special kind of care is offered at the medical center rehabilitation hospital at the University of North Dakota in Grand Forks. For many of its patients, that care means the difference between dependence and independence, and many of those patients come from Minnesota.

They come from as far northeast as Baudette and Williams in Lake of the Woods county and as far southeast as Kimball and Cold Spring in Stearns county. The Minnesota service area stretches over more than one-fourth of the state.

The hospital offers Minnesotans in this area the physical restoration programs that form the next step after hospitalization for a potentially crippling or disabling health problem: stroke, arthritis, amputation, joint replacements and many others.

And those physical restoration programs have recently been recognized as outstanding by a national organization formed to review such facilities. The commission on accreditation of rehabilitation facilities (CARF) recently notified Rehab hospital officials that it has reaccredited the hospital in those areas for another three years.

The hospital received its first three-year accreditation — CARF's highest commendation — in 1968, becoming only the third such recognized facility in the United States and Canada. It remains the only accredited comprehensive inpatient rehabilitation hospital in an area ranging from Madison, Wis., to Tulsa, Okla, to Great Falls, Mont.

Such accreditation does not come easily, according to Kenneth Koch, rehab administrator.

"The commission sets forth some very rigorous standards for accreditation," Koch said. "The fact that we met, and in some cases actually exceeded, those standards is really a tribute to the competency of our staff."

And according to Donald Barcome, M.D., the rehab's medical director, CARF's action also recognized the comprehensive nature of the care rehab patients receive.

"Physical restoration requires the cooperative efforts of many health care professionals," Barcome said. "Accreditation by CARF shows that we are maintaining that necessary teamwork."

Barcome, Koch and other hospital officials were notified of the reaccreditation in a letter from Alan Toppel, CARF executive director.

"This important achievement on your part," Toppel wrote, "is a further indication of your dedication and commitment to improve the quality of the lives of handicapped and disabled individuals."

A report accompanying the letter praised the hospital for a number of its programs, including its outreach clinic efforts and its new program elevation system — which CARF said "could become a model for similar rehabilitation centers" — and also listed a number of recommendations, ranging from a call for increased reporting of staff education activities to a suggestion that dental screening services be provided for the rehab's younger patients.

Koch said hospital officials and staff were "very satisfied" with the commission's findings.

"Obviously, we're very pleased with the survey team's report, and we value their recommendations," he said. "This shows that, in the critical eyes of our peers, we are the equal of any rehabilitation center in the nation, and that in many areas we are indeed leaders in the field."

Jerry Lewis Telethon To Be Seen Here

Gary Hamness, Thief River Falls coordinator, states that the Jerry Lewis 15th annual telethon for the fight against muscular dystrophy and related disorders begins Sunday, August 31, at 10:30 P.M. and continues nonstop until 5:30 p.m., Monday, September 1.

The telethon will again be broadcast live from Las Vegas, Nev. More than 200 stations coast to coast and in Alaska, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and Guam will air the Labor day special, Hamness said.

He explained that the telethon supports MDA's research and patient care programs for children and adults afflicted by any of 40 neuro-muscular diseases. The association neither seeks nor receives government grants or fees for services to patients, their families or the community at large.

The telethon will be aired on KTHI-TV, Channel 11, Fargo and Grand Forks. Pledge number will be 681-7572.

Steven Kaatz Counsels At Autistic Camp

A statewide, residential camping program for 56 autistic children was held in Minneapolis July 19 through July 26. Camp Hand in Hand provided the children, ranging in age from seven to 21, a camp experience typically unavailable to them due to their disability.

Additionally, the camp project teaches professionals and para-professionals to work with this group of children through a concurrent staff training program held on the camp site. Few training programs for teaching autistic children exist in the country.

A resident of Thief River Falls, Steven Kaatz, worked at Camp Hand in Hand as a counselor, and participated in the staff development program. Steven is involved in special education through Northwest Regional Inter-District council.

For more information about the Camp Hand in Hand project, call Kathy Norsworthy, project director, at 612-699-4812, or write, in care of Twin Cities Society of Autistic Children, 2119 Grand Avenue, St. Paul, Minnesota 55105.

Goodridge Celebration Planned For Saturday

All roads in the area will lead to Goodridge Saturday as that eastern Pennington county community will commemorate the Tri-County fair held at Goodridge in 1919. Sponsor of the celebration will be the Goodridge area historical society with Mrs. Dorothy Svanjord as general chairman of the celebration.

Although it is strictly a one-day affair, it is also an all-day event. Buildings and grounds will open at 8 a.m. for people bringing in entries and exhibits for the various displays and the schedule of events will start at 9 a.m.

A garden market and flea market will be held all day and anyone who wishes to set up a table for selling products is invited to participate free of charge. Prizes will be awarded to those who simply want to set up a display of general public interest items.

Exhibit entries for flowers, vegetables, grains, legumes, fruits and fancy work will be accepted from 8 to 10 a.m. in the old gym at the Goodridge public school. The historical building across from the school will be open to the public from 9 a.m. to noon and from 3 to 5 p.m.

Demonstrations of bread baking, pickle making, flower arranging, old home remedies and sauerkraut making will begin at 9 a.m. in the city hall. KINDERGARTEN is a big step to independence. David Koch showed his self-reliance during the first morning of Washington elementary school kindergarten by pausing to tie a dangling shoelace.

ONE PENSIVE MOMENT was about all any pupil of Deone Cerny was permitted during the first minutes of school Tuesday. Washington elementary school kindergarten youngsters were soon paired with new friends or whisked into activities that ignited interest and removed fears. Reflecting her thoughts above is Ingrid Morken.

Mixed Emotions Face Max Graham After 34 Years

by Bonnie Reed
Times Reporter

This Friday, Max Graham will terminate his services as criminal investigator for the Bureau of Criminal Apprehension of the State Department of Public Safety.

But Graham, who has been involved in law enforcement for 34 years, and who has been with the crime bureau for 22 years, has set a goal in his life which he will not let go — even after he has turned in his equipment and his job as investigator has terminated.

"Along with my family, my first love is law enforcement," Graham stated. "My goal is to make law enforcement better and to assist officers in making their lives better. And that goal will continue after I leave my position as investigator."

Graham's compilation of various schools attended throughout the country in his life includes Michigan State University; Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, Ohio; the University of Indiana; and the University of Minnesota where he took courses in specialized subjects connected with law enforcement. He also attended LaSalle University in Chicago for two years studying law, and is a graduate of the FBI Academy in Washington, D.C.

Various school certificates, trophies received for pistol shooting, an autographed photograph of J. Edgar Hoover, and family mementos line the shelves in his office in the law enforcement center in Thief River Falls. On his desk lie numerous papers and other tokens associated with his 34 years of service with law enforcement.

"I was always interested in law enforcement," Graham commented. "Knowing that our modern world is a world of specialists, I got a job in a small police department (in Wells, MN) to get involved in all facets of law enforcement to learn which one I liked best.

"When the opportunity availed itself for me to get into the crime bureau — which was at the entire end of the field — I found I liked that best, took the exam and was hired," he said, describing his early career which marked the beginning of his days of investigating all major crimes

"ALONG WITH MY FAMILY, my first love is law enforcement," said Max Graham, criminal investigator for the Bureau of Criminal Apprehension of the State Department of Public Safety.

Preparing For School Vote

Submit Plans For $15 Million Project

Submitted to the Minnesota commissioner of education for review add comment as a result of Thief River Falls board of education vote Tuesday morning are the district's plans for approximately $15 million in school construction, remodeling and attendant facilities.

The approximately $15 million package includes a new senior high school of two-story masonry construction with about 145,000 square feet of space to accommodate 1,200 students at an estimated cost of $13,600,000. The remainder would be for rehabilitation of other buildings and the Northwest vocational center.

Included in the high school proposal would be a 900-seat auditorium (projected to cost $1,350,000), gymnasium and outdoor athletic complex. The construction would be financed entirely by sale of bonds, with a public vote on the bond issue expected to be held in mid-October.

The commissioner of education has 60 days from receipt of the proposal to provide review and comment. Plans are to locate the building on the 60-acre site east of the city which is owned by the school district.

Holiday Mon. Causes Change In Publication

Next Monday's Labor day holiday will again cause a change in publication schedule for the Times. The September 1 issue will be printed on Saturday of this week, thereby once again requiring early news and advertising copy. Advertisers and news sources are advised to make note of the publication change and to schedule their copy accordingly.

Arrest Suspect In Burglary Of Drug Store

Apprehension of a suspect in the August 12 theft of drugs from J & B Drug store in Thief River Falls took place early Sunday morning by the Thief River Falls police department.

Charged with two counts of burglary and one count of theft is Bruce N. Reindal, 22, originally from Oregon but most recently living at Northland Manor apartments. He appeared in county court Tuesday, at which time bond was set at $10,000. He is in custody at the Pennington county law enforcement center.

Police were summoned to 219½ LaBree av. N. at 1:29 a.m. Sunday when Irene Innes of that address called the law enforcement center to report that a young male had entered her apartment through a window and left when confronted by her. Reindal was apprehended in the area by city police and found to have in his possession a container of drugs similar to those taken in the drug store burglary.

A search warrant was obtained and a search conducted of Reindal's apartment at Northland Manor. The search resulted in recovery of the majority of the drugs taken during the J & B Drug burglary. Entrance to the store on August 12 had been gained by removing an air conditioner unit on the roof and removing ceiling tile to reach the pharmacy area.

Opening Day Enrollment Down 148 From Year Ago

Opening day enrollment in the Thief River Falls public schools took another plunge this year from opening day figures a year ago, according to statistics compiled by the office of Dr. William Corliss, superintendent of schools.

First day total enrollment in kindergarten through grade 12 was 2,789 students this year, 148 below the opening enrollment in 1979 and 49 fewer than the projected enrollment of 2,838 announced on Monday. The decline from a year ago includes 30 in Lincoln senior high school, 41 in Franklin middle school and 77 in the district's five elementary schools.

Dr. Corliss again noted that opening day enrollments are only indicators since they do not provide for fluctuations often present in the first several weeks of school. October enrollment last year, however, was 2,879 or 58 fewer than the opening day figure. The supposedly more stable October enrollment was used as a comparison for 1980-81 projected enrollments.

Record enrollment in the district was 3,295 on opening day in the 1973-74 school term. Enrollment was declined from the mid-1970's and last year at 2,937 fell below the 3,000 mark for the first time since 1970-71.

Opening day procedures went about as expected, according to school administrators. At Lincoln high school, where a good deal of shuffling had to be done due to ordered closing of a number of classroom areas, cooperation by faculty and students was credited by new assistant principal Mike Novak with making the day go well.

Use of the former area vocational-technical institute portion of the Lincoln complex for high school classes is underway with the current school term. The cosmetology area now houses two English and social studies classrooms. The auto mechanics shop now has three classrooms for history and distributive education classes and office area for the athletic director. Former agriculture shop is being used for study hall and in-house detention.

In the school district service center, four rooms have been created in the area formerly housing the Occupational Development center. Known as the "Lincoln Annex", this area is used for American history and mathematics classes which are not part of the Northwest vocational center. Driver-education and health classes may also meet in the annex during the second quarter of the current school term, Novak said.

Opening day enrollment at the various schools this year includes the following with 1979-80 comparative figures listed in parentheses: St. Hilaire, 145 (156); Northrop, 294 (311); Washington, 317 (330); Mark Twain, 161 (171); Knox, 277 (303); Franklin middle school, 619 (660), and Lincoln senior high school, 976 (1,006).

Enrollment by grades is as follows with comparative numbers for 1979-80 in parentheses: Kindergarten, 189 (179); grade one, 190 (208); grade two, 186 (223); grade three, 203 (205); grade four, 207 (224); grade five, 219 (210); grade six, 187 (200); grade seven, 214 (229); grade eight, 218 (231); grade nine, 230 (236); grade ten, 236 (261); grade eleven, 258 (250); and grade twelve, 252 (259).

Opening day 1980-81 enrollment by grades in the various elementary schools is as follows with comparative 1979-80 opening day statistics in parentheses:

St. Hilaire: Kindergarten, 16 (21); grade one, 25 (21); grade two, 18 (30); grade three, 29 (29); grade four, 29 (29); and grade five, 28 (26); total 145 (156);

Northrop: Kindergarten, 52 (46); grade one, 48 (54); grade two, 43 (55); grade three, 45 (47); grade four, 49 (58); and grade five, 57 (51); total, 294 (311);

Washington: Kindergarten, 50 (52); grade one, 50 (55); grade two, 52 (58); grade three, 54 (56); grade four, 55 (56); and grade five, 56 (53);

GETTING ACQUAINTED with each other during the opening moments of school in Thief River Falls Tuesday were Washington kindergarten teacher Deone Cerny and student Lisa Bren. The instructor had provided instant identity for the youngsters by presenting them with personalized smile buttons as they came to the classroom.

RECORDING THE DAY their youngsters started school in 1980, these two mothers photographed the big event at Washington elementary school Tuesday morning. While Mrs. Bill Vogt (left) snapped a photo of son Travis, 7, Mrs. Cal Lindberg focused in on son Eric, 6½. Also pictured are Traci Lindberg, 5, and Kirk Lindberg, 16 months. Also with the group but not pictured is the Vogts' daughter Sammi, 5.

Paula Rae Peters And Dean A. Kukowski Wed

Miss Paula Rae Peters, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Peters of Viking, became the bride of Dean Allen Kukowski, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Kukowski, also of Viking, at a recent four o'clock wedding at Zion Lutheran church in that city.

Rev. K. David Gabrielsen and Rev. Edward Nistler officiated at the double ring ecumenical ceremony. At the organ was Valerie Stokke, a friend of the couple. During the ceremony, Paul Potucek, brother-in-law of the bride; and Faye Ulrich, a friend of the bride, sang "Longer;" and Debbie Olsonoski, aunt of the groom, sang "Wedding Song."

On each side of the altar were candelabra with pink candles and greenery, accented with bows of white lace over burgandy. Matching bows marked the pews along the center aisle.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She was attired in a gown of ivory chiffon over ivory satin made by her mother and grandmother, Selma Peters. It was styled with a fitted bodice with lace appliques at the scoop neckline and on long sheer sleeves gathered into deep cuffs. Her skirt with flowing train was also edged with corresponding lace. A Juliet lace headpiece held her double-tiered veil of bridal illusion. She carried a cascade of burgandy roses, white and candy cane pink carnations, accented with greenery and babies' breath.

The bride was attended by her sisters, Jill Potucek of Warren, as matron of honor, and Nancy Peters, Viking, as bridesmaid. Their gowns of pink qiana featured U-necklines with a wide ruffle of shadow pink sheer, softly gathered in cape effect. In their hair, they wore two white daisies, with greenery and babies' breath. They carried baskets of pink roses, white majestic daisies, and babies' breath with burgandy ribbon bows and flowing streamers.

Personal attendant was Cheryl Peters of St. Paul Park, the bride's aunt.

Best man was Jeff Johnson of Viking, a friend of the groom. Dennis Kukowski, Viking, brother of the groom, was groomsman. Ushers were Scott Peters, Viking, and Vance Peters, St. Paul Park, cousins of the bride. They wore burgundy tuxedos with white ruffled shirts and white carnation boutonnieres. The groom wore all ivory attire with a red rose boutonniere pinned on his lapel.

The mother of the bride was attired in a floor-length gown of cream-colored lace fashioned with a blouson bodice with flared, elbow-length sheer sleeves. Her corsage was of pink daisies with burgandy ribbon. The mother of the groom wore a similar corsage of her aqua, floor-length gown topped by a capelet of matching aqua sheer.

Honor guests were Mr. and Mrs. Joe Mead, Mrs. Selma Peters, grandparents of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Casimar Olsonoski and Mrs. Marion Kukowski, grandparents of the groom.

Approximately 250 relatives and friends attended the reception that followed in the church parlors. Serving as host and hostess were Mr. and Mrs. Gary Peters, uncle and aunt of the bride. Rena Peters, cousin of the bride, and Donna Kukowski, cousin of the groom, served the punch as Debbie Kukowski, sister of the groom, presided at the guest book.

Centering the serving table was a three-tiered confetti wedding cake, with the heart-shaped tiers supported by filigreed pillars. The cake was iced in white and decorated with pink roses. Topping the cake was a pink, triple wedding bell ornament decorated with lillies of the valley. Fern Peters and Bobbie Olsonoski, aunts of the bride and groom, cut and served the cake. Pouring coffee were Lois Mead, aunt of the bride, and Judy Kukowski, aunt of the groom.

Waitresses were Val Olberg, Tami Wilcox, Tamie Anderson, Patti Bjorgaard and Rona Cook, friends of the couple. Darrell Kukowski, brother of the groom, and Cheryl Kukowski, a cousin, carried the gifts. The flowers were pinned by Yvonne Philipp, aunt of the bride.

Graham Faces Mixed Emotions On Retirement

Graham has played a major role in carrying out his goal stated at the beginning of our interview. He has taught criminal justice classes at Northland community college in Thief River Falls for approxiately five years, and for eight years he was assigned to the training division of the Minnesota Crime Bureau where he was responsible for teaching all officers in the state of Minnesota.

"As a teacher I can better prepare officers for the jobs ahead of them," he said.

Graham was also on the board of directors of the Minnesota Police and Peace Officers Association for 14 years.

"Is there anything you dislike about your job?" was the question addressed to Graham, who paused momentarily and shook his head before answering. "No, there really isn't anything I dislike, except the hours sometimes, and sometimes the people I work with and for. By 'for' I mean the general public," he explained.

"It's a matter of attitude," Graham continued. "It's a rewarding job — working for people. It's a matter of self respect — doing something to make the community I live in a better place to live."

Graham's work area covers seven counties in northwestern Minnesota including Kittson, Roseau, Marshall, Pennington, Polk, Mahnomen and Norman, "with the provision that I can be sent anywhere in the state to assist in other investigations," he added. (and usually those calls are from one area to another are homicide cases, he said). "When I first came here I covered 13 counties."

One of the inclusions to Graham's provision arrived when he was called to Alexandria to investigate a homicide which involved a teen-age girl, he said.

"Investigation-wise, this was the roughest assignment because the incident was believed to be a homicide; we had the weapon, the vehicle, the suspect and the evidence, but no body.

"But the body was found and there was a successful prosecution," Graham added.

Graham discussed a difficult time during his years as investigator as the time when there were three homicides in one month's time.

"The victims were lying exposed for a minimum of one to six weeks," he said. "That was distasteful. But we were able to get successful prosecutions (for these incidents) too," he added.

"The sad part about this incident was that the same individual (guilty of the homicides) had committed six other acts of the same nature and was never placed in a penal institution."

Graham stressed one of the most difficult things included within his job is having to go into a home to explain a situation where there is a child involved.

"That turns me every which way but loose," he commented.

In the 22 years that Graham has been employed as an investigator, he has never been hurt — physically, he said.

"If I have ever been hurt it's because of my own clumsiness," he said. "I may stumble over a rock or something like that!"

A number of guidelines were offered by Graham in describing those qualities that help make a good police officer.

"Along with a good knowledge of the law, he (officer) has to have a good working knowledge of psychology and a great deal of compassion to be able to work with people. The main key in working with crime is to try to treat people like humans unless they show you they should be treated otherwise. You must be honest and forthright whether you feel they deserve it or not. The person himself is the key to how he should be handled."

Graham's "preferred" qualifications needed to enter the field of an investigator, he said, includes a minimum of five years in law enforcement with a major in an investigative field; a degree in criminal justice or a graduate of an FBI academy; good health; and the ability to pass entrance exams.

"You also need patience, perseverance, imagination, and a hell of a lot of common sense!" he added.

Graham believes that it is not television alone that may influence crime, but a number of other elements associated with it. And he clings strongly to his beliefs on capital punishment which he believes should be enforced for certain crimes.

"My favorite example of this," he said, "is that capital punishment may not be a deterrent, but if 16 people are executed for homicide, not one will ever commit another homicide."

Graham's working hours as investigator, which will come to an end Friday, "sometimes" average around 40 hours a week, he said. "When you work on a call basis, you can be gone for days or spend weeks at home," he said.

STANDING BESIDE his collection of mememtos appearing throughout his 22 years as criminal investigator of the Bureau of Criminal Apprehension is Max Graham, who will hand in his badge and other investigative equipment today to spend his retirement in Springsteel. When asked if he would have his life to live over again, would he live it the same way, he simply replied, "only sooner."

THE TELEPHONE is a constant companion of Max Graham, criminal investigator for the Bureau of Criminal Apprehension of the State Department of Public Safety, who will end his services Friday, when he will be traveling with his wife to Springsteel to spend his retirement. Graham, whose working area covers seven counties, often is sent elsewhere to assist in investigation. "Usually these are homicide cases," he said.

And his trusty telephone which rested on his desk beside him chattered its tune during the interview. The ringing was not new to Graham's ears.

"I have that thing right by my head at night," he said.

"Have you ever been frightened on your job?" I asked.

And, Graham simply replied, "When you get called and you are told to report to a spot because three known criminals are in a cabin, and one is a suspected murderer, and you get called to get them out, you get a little scared."

Graham believes that law enforcement lives on information. "The job of law enforcement doesn't belong to police alone. It belongs to the entire population. Apathy by the public is a major problem today. I don't know the real answer. I believe if I pick up a person and he wants to talk, he'll talk."

Graham has "mixed emotions" about watching his years as investigator come to a close. He glanced at the pictures of his wife Marie, and his four grandsons on his desk. The Graham's only son, Gordy, is an athletic trainer at Mankato state university and a professor in athletic medicine.

"The 29th at 4:30 will be my last moment as an active police officer," he stated. "I only hope that I have given as much to law enforcement as law enforcement has given to me."

Graham's plans are to spend his retirement in a home he and his wife built at Springsteel island on Lake of the Woods. Plans were to have Graham's working career and their new home completed at the same time. And they will be.

All Graham's equipment will be turned in today. There will be no more paperwork, no more ringing telephones, and no more unusual working hours away from home.

"There's one more thing I have to add," he said, before our interview was finished.

"Without my wife, this whole thing would have been impossible. I know what I'm doing (while on duty). All my wife can do is anticipate. And often times you anticipate the worst. She used to say before I'd leave for work, 'I'll see you for lunch or supper'. Now she just says, 'I'll see you'.

"My advice to all law enforcement officers," he said, "is found in this quote: 'Man made laws to give you something to go by; God gave you a head; put the two together and you'll come out on the high side of even'."

Students Need Immunization Before School

Some Minnesota parents may discover that they have an extra chore to take care of before their children go back to school this fall.

Minnesota's school immunization law was amended earlier this year, to require protection against seven different diseases for every child who attends school in the state. The new law applies to public, private and parochial schools, as well as day care centers, and it covers all students, kindergarten through grade 12. Only children who have special medical problems, or whose parents are conscientiously opposed to having them immunized, will be exempt.

The law requires that students be immunized for measles, mumps, rubella ("German measles"), polio, diphtheria, tetanus and pertussis ("whooping cough"). Parents must be able to provide records showing that a child has been properly immunized against these diseases before the child can enroll in school.

Previously, the immunizations were only required for children entering school for the first time. State health department authorities believe that low immunization levels, especially among junior high and high school students, may be partly responsible for the high number of measles cases in the state during the last few years.

Minnesota has had over a thousand cases of measles annually for three of the last four years, and last year's 1,218 cases represented the second highest measles incidence in the country. Some 60 per cent of the cases have been occurring among secondary school students.

Measles is a serious illness, which can lead to potentially serious complications, authorities say. They believe the new law will enable Minnesota to meet a federally-established goal of eradicating measles by late 1982.

Parents are being encouraged to check each child's immunization records before school starts. Further information is available from schools and local health departments.

10-Ton Road Limit Favored To Move Grain

Minnesota Association of Wheat Growers (MAWG) has urged Minnesota to institute a master plan for highway development and to develop a network of 10-ton per axle roads to efficiently move grain within the state.

In a public hearing sponsored by the Governor's task force for highways for economic vitality, MAWG spokesman, Harlan Almen, a farmer and trucker from Red Lake Falls, told the committee that it would be shortsighted to believe that trucks, or any other mode of transportation, can be the total answer to the transportation problems.

"Increasing fuel costs, decreasing fuel supplies and the greater efficiency of the railroads dictate that this mode must continue to be improved and expanded," Almen stated. "Trucks, however, are and will continue to be an important alternative for moving grain, particularily for shorter distances."

Citing a recently completed transportation flow study by the University of Minnesota, which was partially funded by the Minnesota wheat research and promotion council, Almen indicated that for in-state shipments in 1977 about 57 per cent of the spring wheat, 12 per cent of the durum, 82 per cent of the corn, 90 per cent of the soybeans, as well as substantial percentages of other crops were moved by trucks. He added that these percentages are even higher now with additional railroad transportation difficulties.

Almen said that the best example of the economic impact of higher load limits was demonstrated when the emergency 10-ton limit was recently lifted on highway 32 from Thief River Falls to U.S. 2. When the weight limit was reduced from 80,000 pounds to 73,000 pounds, the truck rate from an elevator along that road increased by eight cents per hundredweight, or about five cents per bushel. "This increase in weight rates resulting from a reduced payload," Almen said, "will be reflected in reduced prices paid to the producer. For this elevator alone it would mean about $400,000 loss to farmers in the area each year." Based on USDA's crop production forecast for 1980, lost revenue to all Minnesota farmers because of lower road weight limits could be in excess of $40 million dollars for this year's crop alone.

"World grain demand is increasing dramatically," Almen told the task force, "and the bulk of this demand must be filled from the United States." He added that the railroads have recognized the growth potential in world grain demand and have been investing to meet this growth. He emphasized that highway reconstruction is necessary as well to assure that the U.S. production and marketing system can meet world food requirements.

On behalf of the Minnesota Wheat Growers, Almen urged that Minnesota establish a master plan or mode for highway development to set realistic goals and priorities so that both current and long range transportation needs can be net. "Such a plan, if in place before," Almen emphasized, "would have avoided the situation we have now, where U.S. 2, a primary route to our port is a four-lane divided highway in the western part of the state, and only a two-lane highway in the east."

Almen also indicated that Minnesota was "out of step" and was "less progressive" than the neighboring states of North and South Dakota, and that higher weights and longer length requirements are necessary.

In calling for a network of 10-ton highways in Minnesota, Almen reported that such a system "would not come without a price tag." He stated, "the Minnesota Association of Wheat Growers believes that all of Minnesota, whether my small community of Red Lake Falls, or metropolitan Minneapolis-St. Paul, feels the impact of a viable agriculture and will benefit from the rewards of higher world demand and stronger grain prices in the future." He concluded that, "highway construction is a burden we all should bear, because we all will share its benefits."

Wheat Growers Oppose Ban On Seed Treatment

Minnesota and National Wheat Growers Associations have urged the scientific advisory panel of the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to rule in favor of the continued use of the pesticide Lindane.

Lindane is used as a wheat seed treatment to prevent damage to the seed from wireworm infestation. The EPA has recommended that Lindane be banned because of health risks to the farmers handling the chemical.

Rick Baird, of Red Lake Falls, past president of the Minnesota Association of Wheat Growers, and a member of the National Association of Wheat Growers (NAWG), Committee of Chemicals, presented the testimony to the scientific advisory panel meeting in Washington, D.C. recently on behalf of Minnesota and the 15 other states that are a part of the NAWG.

In his testimony, Baird reported that the U.S. Department of Agriculture estimates that 12 per cent of U.S. small grain acreage is planted with Lindane treated seed, and that as much as 30 per cent of the spring wheat acreage is planted with treated seed. Total treated acreage exceeds 13 million acres. Baird also pointed out to the panel that University studies have proven that yields can be drastically affected if the seed treatment is not applied.

"A farmer in Minnesota or North Dakota could lose as much as 4.2 bushels per acre to wireworm damage," he said, "and this indicates a potential loss for an average 600 acre farm in excess of $10,000 per year at today's market prices for wheat."

Baird also emphasized that the only alternative seed treatment to Lindane is Heptachlor, which is also scheduled to be phased out in 1982. "Thus, with the proposed ban on Lindane," he stated, "wheat farmers would have no alternative protection against wireworm infestation. This means that in spring wheat areas such as North Dakota and Minnesota, up to 30 per cent of a wheat farmer's yield could be jeopardized."

Baird told the panel that, "it hardly seems fair or logical to abruptly remove a chemical from the market with no known alternative available to users, and when the decision has been based on an incomplete understanding of seed treatment practices by farmers and processors. It seems reasonable to expect that EPA should have current information on seed treatment, and handling techniques in order to evaluate their associated hazards. And, it seems reasonable to expect that once familiar with modern treatment practices, EPA should first seek to improve safety standards relative to clothing and equipment, rather than propose an outright ban on availability of the chemical with proven effectiveness and no substitute."

Baird concluded that if the intent of EPA's proposed restrictions on Lindane is to protect farmers who use the chemical, it would seem that EPA should undertake studies of farmer-users. "I know of no such studies," Baird said, "nor do I know of any farmer who has suffered ill effects from using the chemical, including myself."

Average Vote Expected At Sept. 9 Primary

About 22 per cent of the state's qualified voters will cast their ballots in the September 9 primary election. This would be slightly above average and would mean that only 636,000 of the state's 2,892,000 qualified voters would go to the polls, according to Secretary of State Joan Anderson Growe.

In the 1978 primary, 811,581 votes were cast which was a 29 per cent turnout. There were two U.S. senate seats and all of the constitutional officers on that ballot.

"Even though there are seven congressional primaries, 19 state senate primaries and 31 state legislative primaries on the ballot this year, there does not seem to be an exceptional amount of voter interest," Growe said.

"During the next several weeks," she said, "our office will be making a concerted effort to remind voters of the importance that their vote has."

Minnesota has lead the nation in voter participation in each of the past two general elections.

Crime Control Board Ponders Fuel Prices

Gasoline costs for the St. Paul and Minneapolis police departments will rise by over $7.6 million by the year 2000 due to price increases alone, according to estimates made by the Minnesota crime control planning board (CCPB).

CCPB Executive Director Robert J. Griesgraber said the $7.6 million figure represents an increase of 778 per cent in fuel costs.

It is based upon 1979 actual fuel expenditures for the two police departments and a projection by the Minnesota Energy Agency concerning the increase in the cost of gasoline.

The State Energy Agency has forecast that the price of regular gasoline per gallon will rise from $1.22 in 1980 to $10.71 in 2000, Griesgraber said.

"Statewide, the increase will be much larger given Minnesota's State Highway Patrol, 344 police departments and 87 sheriff's departments," he pointed out.

Griesgraber added that law enforcement personnel growth also will affect gasoline demand, stating that the CCPB projects a 46 per cent growth in law enforcement personnel levels statewide between 1980 and the year 2000.

"These added personnel will increase law enforcement demand for gasoline," he added.

Griesgraber further pointed out that Minnesota petroleum demand will outstrip supplies by 1985, due primarily to dropping Canadian exports of petroleum to the state.

In an effort to alleviate such problems, the CCPB currently is embarking on an energy program, the first step of which will be collecting data from law enforcement agencies throughout the state.

Griesgraber said the CCPB plans to survey law enforcement agencies for current data on accessibility of gasoline used and staff levels in the agencies with respect to gas supplies and use.

"We hope to learn what type of record-keeping systems are being used currently to monitor gas use and to gauge the type of equipment consuming gasoline," he said.

"In addition, we expect to obtain information on what the agencies are doing at the present time to conserve gasoline."

This information will enable the CCPB to construct a gasoline-use planning model that could be used by law enforcement agencies to project energy use, given different possible price levels for gasoline and varying gas mileage ratings for cars, he explained.

"Included would be a long-term model which would project gasoline usage by law enforcement agencies up to the year 2000, based upon projections in law enforcement personnel levels," he concluded.

Say 1,730,000 Japanese Cars Sold In U.S.

While Japanese automobiles are flooding the U.S. market, American cars enter Japan in only a small trickle.

In 1979, 1,730,000 Japanese cars were sold here (and that total will be higher this year) but 17,000 U.S. cars were sold there last year, reports the automotive information council (AIC).

Japanese cars currently are accounting for about 22 per cent of all auto sales in this country, up from 17 per cent last year.

Foreign-built cars coming into the U.S. carry a tariff of only 2.9 per cent, while cars entering Japan are subject to a host of charges and modifications which raise prices to about double what they are in the U.S. A Mustang, for example, goes for about $13,000 in Japan, while a Chevette costs $11,000.

No other country is as generous as the U.S. in allowing imports to enter, AIC points out. Major European countries tax imported cars from between 10 and 22 per cent. Latin American nations protect their auto industries with import duties as high as 200 per cent or require that cars sold in those countries have up to 95 per cent locally-manufactured components.

Consequently, Japanese cars last year captured only about one per cent of the market in Spain, Italy, Brazil, Mexico, Venezuela, South Africa and Argentina.

Mainly because of its heavy market penetration in the U.S., Japan now has become the world's largest vehicle producer. It built 5.5 million units in the first six months of 1980, compared with about 4.4 million in the U.S.

Japanese factories have been working seven-day weeks, while plants in this country have layoffs of about 250,000 autoworkers, plus another 650,000 in auto-related industries.

Strong calls are being made for some way to restrict the Japanese imports. The extent of the imports' impact on jobs was underscored recently by a White House task force which suggested that if Japanese car imports were cut back to the 1979 level, which was a record, up to 100,000 unemployed workers of U.S. auto plants and related industries might return to their jobs.

Senator Gives Pay Raise To MN. Charities

Following his opposition to a Congressional pay raise last year, Senator Rudy Boschwitz has given $3,000 of his salary to Minnesota charities.

Boschwitz said, "although I opposed the pay raise it passed the Congress and was given to every member. Having opposed the increase, I did not feel I should keep the additional salary."

Recipients of the donation included the Minnesota Foundation for Speech and Hearing which received $1,000, Minnesota Special Olympics, $500, Phoenix Residence, $500; CWDC Industries of Hibbing, $500; and PACER, Inc., $500.

"Although I eventually voted for the 5.5 per cent increase because it was tied to a measure providing much needed funds to other government agencies," Boschwitz said, "I pledged at the time to give my share of the raise to charity and I have followed through on that pledge."

Labor Day Adds To Traffic At Summer's End

Labor day, September 1, adds an extra day to the final August weekend, making it the last big summer holiday and a busy time on Minnesota roads, reminds state public safety commissioner John Sopsic.

He warns motorists that the state patrol will have more than 100 extra troopers on duty that weekend to help curtail speed and recklessness.

A special concern of the department, according to state patrol chief Roger Ledding, is the increasing motorcycle death toll which was 77 August 7, 17 ahead of the number a year ago. Conversely, the overall death toll is still down from 1979.

Both motorcyclists and motorists need to observe basic safety rules, Ledding said.

The state patrol will continue its holiday participation in CARE (coordinated accident reduction enforcement) over the Labor day weekend. Department of public safety will cooperate with various local groups who are operating rest stops to give motorists a break from the frustration created by long drives.

U Project Planned To Meet Medical Advances

by Ralph Heussner
'U' News Service

When Robert Goltz entered medical school at the University of Minnesota in 1941, most of the main hospital complex was already 20 years old. The majority of the patients who came to University hospitals were considered indigent and were referred through county welfare programs.

Nearly 40 years later, the patient population has changed dramatically and the load has swelled to 580 on an average day. Enormous changes have been made in medical technology, and University hospitals has earned a national reputation for dealing with the most complicated, difficult cases.

But in one area, things have changed little: the core clinical facilities for treating patients and educating thousands of students in the health sciences remain largely the same as they were the day Goltz, now head of the dermatology department, entered medical school. And the complex of buildings is bursting at the seams.

Patients' rooms are too small to handle modern equipment, storage space is critically short, power supplies are inadequate for modern equipment, privacy is almost nonexistent, and teaching must be done in the hallways. There is inadequate air conditioning and no place for the medical staff to meet, chart and dictate. There are few treatment and examination rooms.

"Think of the changes that have occurred in medicine. We are being asked to do a 1980 job in a 1920 facility," Goltz said.

The overcrowding, storage and traffic flow problems are severe, and those who work there must "fight the facility" to offer quality medical care and instruction, said Robert Dickler, senior associate director of the hospitals.

"There is no one building that is University hospitals. We occupy parts of several buildings," Dickler said. "People look at the health sciences complex and they think we have all kinds of space. What they don't understand is that it's not hospital space. We have about 50 to 60 per cent of the space per bed that is the industry standard for an institution this size."

Dickler is heading up a formidable project to rebuild and remodel much of what is University hospitals. Dubbed the University of Minnesota hospitals renewal project, the plan is a carefully charted, rigorously scheduled shot at building modern facilities to handle current needs.

Because University hospitals draws more than 60 per cent of its patients from outside the Twin Cities, officials have been holding a series of informational briefings with the health systems agencies throughout the state to explain the renewal project.

Estimated cost of the project is $230 million, a figure that may change as adjustments are made in the building plan and as the inflation rate fluctuates. If everything goes as planned, actual construction will begin in July of 1981.

Project will be financed through the sale of state general obligation bonds, to be repaid through hospital revenue; the legislature will be asked during the 1981 session for permission to use the state's bonding authority.

Under the plan, Powell hall and an apartment building next to it would be demolished and replaced by a new 10-story building. The new structure would contain beds for acute adult and pediatric care, operating rooms and recovery areas, labor and delivery rooms, and space for diagnostic and therapeutic radiology.

Parts of the main hospital complex would be remodeled and used for support services and other health science units, and a portion of the Variety Club heart hospital would be remodeled for patients whose illnesses are less acute, Dickler said.

"This is not an expansion in the number of beds or the number of patients we serve," Dickler said. "It is meant to upgrade the facilities to accommodate the patients we now have and those we expect to serve into the 21st century."

If the project moves ahead on schedule, new construction should be completed by 1985 and the remodeling work by 1987.

Much still needs to be done before Powell hall is razed. The project must be approved by the Metropolitan health board, the Metropolitan council and the Minnesota department of health before a certificate of need can be granted. Application for a certificate of need will be submitted in late August or September.

In the meantime, work goes on under less than ideal circumstances. Some of the biggest problems encountered by the medical staff are the result of the fact that University hospitals cares for many seriously ill patients.

"We have many very ill patients, even in our routine medical-surgical areas, people that need close monitoring and observation," said Barbara Tebbitt, director of nursing services. "The kinds of procedures we are doing are different from the kinds of procedures typically done in community hospitals. When new people join the nursing staff, many of them look around our medical-surgical areas and say, 'Where I came from, these patients would be in intensive care.'"

Two of the biggest problems facing hospital staff are lack of space and the age of the facilities. "What we have here is essentially a quarter-mile-long corridor with rooms on either side," Goltz said. "Movement of supplies and contaminated linens must go past patients' bedrooms. Most of our teaching is done standing in the halls with food carts running over our toes."

Lack of conference rooms and private areas places a strain on the teaching function, Goltz said. "There are some 5,000 students here in the health sciences, and many are dependent on this facility," he said. Without places for discussion, teachers and students must congregate in already noisy hallways.

Throughout the patient care areas, there are no places for doctors or nurses to talk privately with patients' families. In the 16-bed surgical intensive care unit, the waiting room holds only 10 people and affords no privacy. "There is very little room for someone to go and grieve or work things through alone," Tebbitt said.

Many of the space and traffic problems in the patient-care areas are the result of the structure's age, Dickler said. "The technology we are using today had not been developed at the time the facility was built," he said. "Partly it's because it was developed with the view that a public hospital doesn't need amenities. The thought was that indigent patients did not need waiting room space, dining areas and private places for relatives."

Patients come from all over the country — and sometimes from other countries — for treatment. "We have a worldwide reputation for being willing to deal with the most complicated and difficult cases. What is most important to remember is the aggregation of expertise here not typically found at other institutions," Dickler said.

"Here we have a full-time staff with full-time researchers, with students and with an esprit de corps that I don't think you'll find any place else," he said. "I don't think people who are really sick can get better health care than they get at University hospitals. We fight the facility to do it, but we do it, and well."

Representatives of the University of Minnesota hospitals met in Grand Forks Thursday with the Agassiz health systems agency, a regional health planning group for northwestern Minnesota and northeastern North Dakota, to discuss the project.

Discussion with the Agassiz agency occurred because of the number of patient referrals from the Agassiz region and because the University of Minnesota and the University of North Dakota cooperate in medical education.

Unemployment Money Extended Under Program

Persons who have exhausted their regular unemployment compensation benefits may be eligible for additional benefits under the federal-state extended benefit program which began in Minnesota August 24, Commissioner Rolf Middleton of the department of economic security announced.

Extended benefits will provide up to 13 additional weeks of payments to persons who filed regular claims on or after September 2, 1979, and who have no rights to any other unemployment benefits. Extended benefit program provides the additional payments in times of high unemployment and becomes effective when either the state or national unemployment rates exceed a specific figure.

Extra benefits were "triggered on" in Minnesota and 29 other states because of the high national unemployment rate. Twenty states are already paying extended unemployment insurance benefits because of their own high unemployment rates.

The department has notified by mail those persons they could identify as being eligible for extended benefits. Persons who filed their first claims for unemployment after September 2, 1979 and who did not receive a notice from the department should contact their nearest area office.

Eligible unemployed workers will receive the same weekly benefits they have been receiving but only for half the number of weeks for which they qualified under the regular unemployment insurance benefits.

For instance, a person who has exhausted a 26-week unemployment compensation claim could receive another 13 weeks at the same weekly benefit rate, while a person who received 10 weeks of benefits would be eligible for another five weeks.

4H CLUB

New Solum

New Solum 4-H club met at the Rosebank clubhouse August 20 with president Mark Johnson opening the meeting with flag pledges.

Secretary's report was given and approved and was followed by roll call which included naming the colors of ribbons received at the fair.

Old business included planning a picnic. Cheryl Van Horn moved to have the picnic at Lake Bronson September 7 at 1 p.m., and the motion was seconded by Maria Edington and carried. Records were returned to be completed September 7. Plans were also made for the September meeting which will be guest day.

New business included turning in pictures with membership cards. Discussion involved changing the time for the meeting, but it was decided to leave it at 8 p.m. Mike VanHorn gave a project talk on dogs and Mark Johnson taught 4-H members hand signals. Maria Edington and Cheryl Van Horn planned a game for the evening.

Scott Ambuel made the motion to adjourn the meeting, seconded by Mike VanHorn.

Six 4-H members were present at the meeting, four 4-H parents were present, and there was one visitor at the meeting. Lunch committee was the George Solney family. Next meeting is planned at the Rosebank clubhouse September 17.

Holt

The Holt 4-H club met on August 21 at the Holt Village hall. The meeting was called to order by president Tim Kjensrud. The flag pledges were said. Roll call was answered by, "Were you at the club tour in July?" The secretary's report was read and corrections were made. The treasurer's report was read and approved. Old business was that Bob Castle made a motion to pay Nikki Leach $6 toward her Lake Sarah 4-H trip. Dean Reierson seconded that motion. Pat Kjensrud thanked everybody who worked at the foodstand. Those receiving high placings at the fair were recognized and pictures that were in the paper were viewed. New business was that it was announced that Karen Kjensrud, Tim Kjensrud, James Garthus and Dana Peterson would be going to the state fair. Records are due at the September meeting. A September hayride was discussed. People on the hayride committee include: Bill and Bob Castle, Barbara Garthus and Joyce Haglund. Elections are going to be held at the September meeting. The meeting was then adjourned.

For recreation the members played a game called Wink 'em.

There were 19 4-H members and 4 4-H parents present.

Thomas Drug

TO: THE VALUED CUSTOMERS OF J & B AND CORNER DRUG

After many years of serving you individually in various locations in Thief River Falls, we would like to take this opportunity to inform you of the merger of these two businesses into one which will be called Thomas Drug.

With the availability of the Gambles Building, we found the time just right to join together in bringing you one of the finest drug stores in Northwestern Minnesota.

We have planned carefully, with a watchful eye toward energy conservation, in the hopes of providing you with a store that is functional and beautiful. Together, we hope to offer you a much larger selection of merchandise in more comfortable surroundings.

Each store brings to the new endeavor its own unique personality formed by the people who work there, the individual merchandise mix, and the people who shop there. Certain parts of this "personality" will not change; some will be changed a lot. The people who work there will not change at all. The same people who served you so well in each location will be on hand to help you in the new store. In addition to the expanded selection of merchandise throughout the store, our Hallmark and Gift Department will be all new, with the added Gourmet Section. We will have a Fanny Farmer Candy Shop, with bulk candy as well as boxed. With the combination of great cosmetic lines from each store, we will have one of the most complete cosmetic departments in the area. Our Pharmacy, with its trained professionals, will continue to bring you that same quality of service you have come to expect from them over the years.

We are very excited about this new store and the opportunity it gives us to serve you better in a beautiful new facility. It will still be approximately a month before we will have all the finishing touches on it, but we will be open for our first day of business on August 25th, so stop in soon to see us in our new location.

We'd like to say thanks for your understanding during our remodeling. Hope to see you soon.

Sincerely,

Lee Erickson (J & B Drug)
Jim Carlson (Corner Drug)

Increase U.S. Productivity

During the last year, the high rate of inflation and interest rates have brought attention to the poor state of our national economy. We have heard many people express their opinions, since it is an election year, about what must be done to save the economy. Some people want to see a tax cut, while others want to see more jobs, but the key to returning our economy to a respectable state is not what we do but, more importantly, how we go about doing it.

I believe we can solve our current problems while maintaining or improving our current standard of living. With the correct programs and a philosophy which encourages fiscal responsibility, the American economy will thrive once more.

If we are to accomplish this goal, however, we must begin by working to increase the nation's level of productivity, which can be defined as "a measure of output per hour of work." Since the 1960's, productivity in the U.S. has been declining at an alarming rate. In fact, our rate of productivity based on annual gains is currently lower than any other industrialized country in the world.

Between 1965 and 1976, Japan's productivity increased an average of 9 per cent while productivity in the U.S. only increased by 1.9 per cent. During the same period, the U.S. had the worst business investment record among other industrialized countries with only 13.5 per cent. Japan also led in this category with 26.4 per cent, followed by West Germany, Canada and France. Even Great Britain led the United States with 14.9 per cent of the gross national product being devote to business investment.

What must we do to improve our level of productivity? First of all, I am convinced we must reduce income taxes on personal income and business income so as to allow for increased spending, investment and saving. The theory I support states that by providing taxpayers with additional income by reducing taxes, they will be encouraged to puruse one or more of these avenues. If, for example, they are encouraged to spend the money the theory states that additional people will be required to produce the additional products purchased, thus helped to solve our unemployment problem. If people decide to save the additional income, new funds will be available for people to borrow, thus helping to lower interest rates by increasing the money supply. Furthermore, if people decide to invest the additional income, capital needed for expansion by business and industry would be available.

The key to solving our economic and unemployment problems is providing incentives for individuals and business to produce. If these incentives are provided, I believe this nation will begin to see a tremendous amount of economic expansion thus benefiting every American.

Opposition has been great to this theory because it is believed by some that providing a tax cut "robs" the treasury of funds needed for operation. I tend to disagree. By providing individuals and business with additional income for spending, investment of saving, we expand the tax base of the national economy by putting people back to work. Instead of receiving income from the Federal treasury, they would be paying taxes, therefore actually increasing tax revenues.

Unfortunately, the current state of our tax system discourages increased production because the more someone works, the more they earn, the greater the percentage of tax they are required to pay. Instead of producing and working to produce as much as possible, some people only work to produce what the tax structure allows.

Reducing taxes will allow the average American citizen to invest in America and, as a result, more people will be put to work, business and industry will be able to expand and once again our economy will prosper.

Plan Addition To Nutrition Center In G.F.

Meinecke-Johnson company, Fargo, has been awarded a contract to construct a three-level addition to the Grand Forks human nutrition research center of the U.S. department of agriculture's science and education administration (SEA) here.

The $3,727,600 contract was awarded by SEA. Estimated completion date is December of 1981, said Dr. Harold H. Sandstead, director of the center.

Animal experiments will be conducted in the addition's lower two levels to provide basic knowledge needed to plan research on humans. These levels will have precise controls for temperature, humidity and ventilation with filtered air. They will include 21 animal holding rooms, four animal testing rooms, a surgery room, a behavioral science laboratory, an electron microscopy room, offices and support areas.

The third level, to be unfinished under this contract, is for a dietary kitchen, offices and support areas to accommodate a planned human metabolic unit.

The center now includes an eight-bed metabolic unit where human volunteers live and participate in carefully controlled studies.

Nutrition studies at the center are designed to help explain the manner in which some nutrients in the diet influence the requirements for other nutrients. The researchers are also studying physiologic influences on nutrient requirements and the availability of nutrients in food. Special emphasis is focused on trace elements — essential nutrients present in the body in minute amounts.

For decades, scientists acquired only meager insights about the importance of trace elements in human nutrition. Now, improved technology is helping SEA researchers coorelate specific amounts of trace elements with the healthfulness of humans, animals and plants, said Dr. Sandstead.

The human nutrition scientists here collaborate with soil scientists, agronomists, food technologists and engineers at other SEA locations. This multi-disciplinary approach, according to Dr. Sandstead, makes it possible to relate human nutrition studies more clearly to farming and food technology practices and offers an opportunity to improve the nutritional values and utilization of foods. Such relationships will, he feels, ultimately have a direct effect on the world problems of malnutrition and hunger.

The SEA human nutrition office in Washington, D.C. coordinates expanded studies which further complement both cooperative and collaborative research with hospitals and universities throughout the United States.

Sec. Of State Publishes New Election Guide

Copies of the 1980 edition of the publication, "Election 80: Register and Vote," are now available from the office of the Minnesota secretary of state.

"September 9 is primary election day in each of Minnesota's 4,038 precincts," explained secretary of state Joan Anderson Growe. "These pamphlets will help explain to voters what will be on the ballot at the primary and how they register if they have not already done so," she said.

"One of the important parts of the pamphlet is a section that includes the constitutional amendment titles, questions and purpose and effect statements," Growe pointed out.

This pamphlet is part of the voter information program of the secretary of state's office. Copies are being distributed by three political parties (American party of Minnesota, Democratic-Farmer-Labor, and Independent Republican) and by the League of Women Voters and other community groups.

Growe commended the Minnesota Newspaper association (MNA) for its continued cooperation with voter information projects. "The news media performs vital service as it alerts citizens to their voter responsibilities," Growe said.

Copies of the pamphlet are available without charge by writing, calling or stopping by the election division of the Office of Secretary of State, 180 State Office Bldg., St. Paul, MN 55155; telephone: (612) 296-2805.

Views On Dental Health®

SMOKING AND ORAL CANCER

You already know that smoking can be instrumental in the cause of bronchitis, lung cancer, emphysema and heart disease. But what does smoking have to do with oral health? It affects your whole mouth in many ways - none of which are beneficial.

By far, the most serious risk is the development of oral cancer. Smokers have a four-times greater risk of oral cancer than non-smokers.

Tobacco in any form can cause cancer of the mouth and throat. So don't think you can avoid cancer by switching from cigarettes to a pipe or cigars.

This year an estimated 24,000 people will be stricken by oral cancer. Within five years many of these people will be dead. Each year, approximately 8,000 people die from oral cancer. One of the reasons for this high death rate is that oral cancer victims do not recognize the need to see their dentist or physician until it becomes too late for treatment to be successful. Yet, ironically, mouth cancer is one of the few varieties that can be easily recognized by a visual diagnosis in its early stages.

If you have a fire, will you have to pay money out of your pocket to help cover the loss?

Most homeowner insurance policies pay only replacement cost, less depreciation for personal property. For example, an $800 sofa could be valued at just $200 when depreciation is taken, and upon replacement, you would have an out-of-pocket expense of $600, plus the deductible. NOW MSI INSURANCE HAS A BETTER SOLUTION! It will insure most of your personal property at replacement cost value. With this type of coverage, you would receive the full $800, less the deductible.

Check with me today. I'll be glad to give you all the details without obligation. We're people helping people.

Expect Record Enrollment At MSU This Fall

A record enrollment of more than 7,300 full and part-time students, about 300 more than last year, is expected at Moorhead state university when classes begin September 10. Residence halls open at noon Friday, September 5 and final registration and orientation is scheduled September 7-10.

Students, about 5,700 of them full-timers, come to MSU from 40 states and nearly all of Minnesota's 87 counties. More than a quarter are North Dakota residents attending the university under reciprocal tuition agreements between the two states.

About 125 foreign students representing 30 countries are also expected to enroll this fall.

Founded in 1885 and now in its 95th year, MSU is one of seven state universities in Minnesota. It offers majors in over 50 fields and graduate programs in 18. Housed on a 104-acre campus with 28 major buildings, the university employs 290 full-time faculty members — 60 per cent of them holding doctoral degrees — and a supporting staff of 243.

Overall, the university's operating budget this year will amount to about $19.2 million. Of that, $11 million is appropriated by the Minnesota Legislature and the university will take in revenues of about $3.5 million, mostly from tuition payments.

In addition to that $14.5 million, the university will collect about $650,000 in student fees to operate student activities and recreation facilities. Another $1.25 million is collected in bookstore revenues that support other operating expenses on campus.

MSU residence halls house about 2,300 students. Students are being encouraged to contact the housing office on campus as soon as possible for on or off-campus housing information. That office will be open Saturdays in August to deal with that problem.

Tuition and fees at MSU are $726 for the year. That's for students carrying a full course load. Tuition is up seven per cent from last year; fees about 10 per cent. Room and board on campus will average $1,221, up nearly six per cent from last year.

Soo Will Add New Equipment During 1981

Soo Line will increase its 1981 new equipment program by $11.6 million, according to Thomas M. Beckley, president.

The company plans to acquire 245 new freight cars consisting of 200, 100-ton capacity covered hoppers for grain and potash loading; 25, 100-ton capacity covered gondolas for steel loading; and 20, 100-ton capacity ballast cars for use in maintenance programs.

New equipment is in addition to 10 new locomotives ordered earlier this year. Currently on order for delivery during 1981 are seven GP-38, 2,000 horsepower locomotives and three SD-40-2, 3,000 horsepower locomotives.

The value of new freight equipment planned as part of the 1981 equipment program now totals $18.7 million.

Covered hoppers in Soo's fleet will total nearly 4,200 cars when the new units are delivered. These cars currently comprise more than a third of the total fleet of freight cars in Soo revenue service.

During 1980, the company has taken delivery of 624 new freight cars and 20 new locomotives with a value of approximately $40 million. Included in the deliveries were more than 500 covered hoppers.

Suggests Ways To Help Speed Cash Collection

"Small businesses use inventory and receivables for collateral on the lines of credit that supply their working capital. But most banks refuse to accept receivables more than 60 days old as collateral, and some bills today are slipping past 90 days," notes Paul W. Jansen, district director of the Small Business administration.

"What the small firm can't do is to sit around waiting for its clients to pay their bills when the firm has its own bills to pay," Jansen said. He listed several suggestions on speeding accounts receivable collections:

—Use of stamped, self-addressed envelopes enclosed with each bill often encourages customers to pay more promptly.

—Sales persons' commissions can be increased or decreased according to the number of overdue accounts serviced. The penalty and bonus create an incentive for the sales force to keep their accounts current.

—It may be more effective to inquire, politely, when payment can be expected than to actually request payment. This approach, known as the "tickler method", is used frequently by credit managers of large corporations.

—Partial payment on bills may be accepted to get needed cash.

—Collections can be speeded by sending merchandise C.O.D.

SBA Helps In Managing Cash Flow Problems

"One of the biggest problems faced by a small business is managing the firm's cash flow. Are there any publications available to help businesses hold onto their money during an economic crunch?" asks a businessman of Paul W. Jansen, district director of the Small Business administration.

"America's small businesses today face an unprecedented pincers movement: inflation in the economy as a whole, a credit crunch created to control it, and a recession," Jansen replied.

"An excellent publication has just been pulled together by the advocacy staff of the administration. This practical, handy publication describes 55 ways to save cash.

"In preparing this new publication, our advocacy staff found that sources of funds (availability of credit) were down, but that uses of funds (cash) were up in accounts receivable, work-in-process inventory, finished goods inventory, interest expenses and allowances for bad debt," Jansen said.

The 55 ways to save cash were compiled from a variety of private sector periodicals, guides, management consultants and business scholars.

The SBA publication, for example, lists 41 ideas for improved cash operations — including making use of domestic letters of credit, precision timing for payables, incentives for collection, making use of parttime credit managers, calculation of tax savings on bad debt, precautions against forgery, precautions against check bouncing, and expediting purchasing processes.

The publication then suggests ways to secure cash from external sources — including sale of unused marketing rights, employee stock option plans, rescheduling of interest payments, small business investment companies, public bond markets, and loans from clients and suppliers.

The publication also lists federal government assistance programs and includes a list of SBA offices which are ready to help small business persons.

The publication on ways to save cash is available free by calling 800-433-7212, or write to the SBA Publications Center, P.O. Box 15434, Ft. Worth, Texas 76119.

Election Judge Training Now Mandatory

A new state law requires that all election judges receive training between August 19 and September 5 for the 1980 elections, according to Secretary of State Joan Anderson Growe.

"When I came into office in 1976, I asked election judges what would be the most valuable thing I could do for them — more and better training was the response I heard over and over again," she said.

"Election judges are extremely dedicated and hard-working," Growe said, "and additional training will make their job less difficult and frustrating."

Training sessions for the state's 30,000 election judges will be conducted by their local election officials and county auditors.

"Local officials know what training is necessary for their judges and are best suited to respond to the judges' concerns," Growe said.

Geatz Joins Lakers

Thief River Falls' influence on the Warroad Lakers will continue this winter when Tom Goddard and Dave Geatz will both be skating with the senior amateur hockey team.

Goddard, who has been playing with the Lakers since he completed his four-year playing career at the University of North Dakota in 1977, will have his ice time reduced this year after accepting the head hockey coaching position at Northland community college.

Geatz, a 1980 Lincoln high school graduate, will join the Lakers for his first season of senior amateur hockey this year, it was announced this week by Lakers manager Cal Marvin.

Scott Sabo, a 1979 Lincoln graduate who passed up college hockey for a year with the Lakers last winter, used that season of experience against top-notch competition to land a WCHA offer from the University of Wisconsin.

Another Thief River Falls player giving WCHA hockey a shot this year will be Bill Jury, the Prowlers' goaltender the past three years, who plans to attend the University of Minnesota-Duluth. A lot depends on the condition of Jury's back, a problem that plagued him as a senior, but he would like to play both hockey and tennis for the Bulldogs.

Wade Hoppe and Jeff Ulrich, the Prowlers' top two scorers last winter, will be playing hockey at Bemidji State and Mankato State, respectively, while Tom Bjorkman, having decided to attend Concordia in Moorhead, isn't sure about his hockey career.

Other seniors on last year's Thief River Falls hockey team who have indicated they will likely play Minnesota junior college athletic association (MJCAA) hockey this winter at Northland are Bob Fitzgerald, Jim Thompson, Brian Ranum and Tony Loeffler. Paul Drees will attend school at Crookston.

North Tri County Race Is Close

A real donnybrook for the top spot in the North Tri County Conference high school football race shapes up this year, with Middle River, Oklee, McIntosh-Winger and Gonvick all setting their sights on the nine-man conference title.

Gonvick and McIntosh-Winger shared the title a year ago with 8-1 records, but the Scots defeated the Bulldogs 14-8 in the final game to represent the North Tri-County Conference in the state nine-man playoffs where they reached the semifinals before losing to Toivola-Meadowlands 12-0. Middle River was 7-2 a year ago and Oklee was 6-3.

The 1980 North Tri County Conference schedule starts with a bang Friday when McIntosh-Winger visits Gonvick. Oklee will be at Grygla and Middle River visits Clearbrook for their openers.

Gonvick faces a major pennant hurdle — it's schedule. The Bulldogs face all three co-favorites in the first three weeks of the season, hosting McIntosh-Winger Friday, visiting Middle River Friday, Sept. 5, and entertaining Oklee Friday, Sept. 12. If they survive that, the Bulldogs will be home free.

Things could boil down to an Oklee vs. Middle River confrontation at Middle River in the final game of the year.

"It should be a good race," confirmed Middle River coach Eldon Sparby. "It's going to be a tough one. I don't think anybody is going to go unbeaten."

Miscellaneous

+ Freshman Jon Pinkerton of Thief River Falls was listed as a tight end on the University of North Dakota football roster as the Sioux began preseason practice drills last week in Grand Forks, UND opens its 1980 season on the road against Portland (Ore.) State Sept. 6. Home opener for the Sioux is the following Saturday, Sept. 13, against Montana State.

+ Kurt Knoff of East Grand Forks, a starter in the Minnesota Vikings' defensive backfield, has been named to the Big 8 Conference All-Decade (1970) football team. Knoff played at Kansas from 1972-75.

+ For the first time in their 34-year history, the Warroad Lakers will have two coaches when the 1980-81 season gets underway, reports team manager Cal Marvin. Scott Marvin's first year as head coach produced a Central Amateur Senior Hockey (CASH) league title a year ago, and he'll be joined this year by Jack Ganyo, who has been named as an assistant coach. Lakers officials invite area men interested in playing senior amateur hockey to contact either Marvin or Ganyo.

Prowlers Host Roughriders Friday In 1980 Opener

John Schmitz and Nick Cichy find themselves facing similar dilemmas heading into Friday's 1980 Thief River Falls vs. Grand Forks Red River high school football season opener. Both men will be making their debuts as head football coaches at their respective schools when Schmitz' Prowlers host Cichy's Roughriders in a 7:30 p.m. game on the Thief River Falls athletic field. And they both enter the game blind — no scouting reports, few experienced players and little knowledge about how their players will react under game situations.

"We've had a couple of pretty good weeks of practice," indicated Cichy, who succeeds Dallas Kopp as Red River head coach. "We think we'll bring a pretty good football team over there, but we won't really know for sure how good we are until we play somebody in a game."

Schmitz and the Prowlers have a slight edge in that they were involved in the Thief River Falls Sports Boosters Pigskin Preview scrimmage Sunday against East Gand Forks and Ada. Red River, under North Dakota regulations, cannot participate in a preseason scrimmage.

"We were generally satisfied with our performance Saturday," mentioned Schmitz. "We were flat against East Side; you could definiately see signs of inexperience. But you could see as the scrimmage moved along that we grained confidence and made some improvements."

With just four returning starters from a 3-6 ball club under Gene Jurgens in 1979, Schmitz is obviously concerned about the Prowlers' inexperience heading into the 1980 opener. However, he quickly says, "We'll be all right. I think our progress in practice has been satisfactory."

The Prowlers will open with senior Scott Wiebolt at quarterback. Senior Scott Kezar will be the fullback, while juniors Tom Ose and Dan Odegaard run at halfbacks.

Junior Kent Kainz will be the split end while senior Greg Harder and junior Dave Upham share the tight end spot, probably as the Prowlers' play-calling messenger service. Across the front line will be junior Mark Harder at center, juniors Wade Hruby and Rob Jorstad at guards and senior Dave Kays, along with either Jon Ness or Steve Olson, a pair of juniors, at the tackles.

Defensively it'll probably be senior Marty Semanko and junior Jim Dillon at the ends, Hruby and Ness at the tackles and senior Rick Gobell, the Prowlers' captain, at nose guard. Outside linebackers are expected to be senior Steve Jorstad and either Upham or Mark Harder. Rob Jorstad mans the middle. Wiebolt will be the safety and Kainz, along with either Odegaard or senior Jon Stimac playing the corners.

Senior Kevin Grochow will probably kick off, with Dokkin doing the punting and either Kainz or senior Jeff Spencer kicking extra points — if Schmitz elects to kick them. "We'd like to try it, but the situation will determine whether we kick or not," said Schmitz about the one or two-point conversion try.

Red River will have more seniors, but not necessarily more experience than Thief River Falls Friday night. The Roughriders' slot formation offensive backfield will feature junior Tim Loven at quarterback, senior Chad Anderson at slotback and senior Steve Schiller at halfback.

Loven "throws the ball pretty well," said Cichy. "We'll mix it up between the run and the pass," he promised. Cichy described Anderson as "as good football player. I'm sure he'll get some yards for us."

Top wide receiver is senior Tim Gabrielson, but the backs will be involved in many of the Roughriders' passing plays.

Mike Russel, a 6-1, 205-pounder who will be a tackle on the left side, is the Roughriders' top offensive lineman.

Defensively Schiller returns as a starter at linebacker and Dave Lavos has some experience at an end.

The first touchdown could be a key score Friday, agreed both coaches. "It would definitely help if we could get off to a good start," acknowledged Schmitz.

"Sure it would help to score first," said Cichy. "That's the name of the game; score the first and the most points. If we can do that we'll win."

This will mark the eighth straight year the two teams have opened the year against each other, with Red River winning five of the eight meetings, including the last three. The Roughriders handled the Prowlers 30-6 in the 1979 opener in Grand Forks.

TRF Trap League Will Shoot Tuesday . . .

Final Week Shoot To Be City Class Championship

Final round of regular season competition and the annual city class championship shoot in the Thief River Falls trap league will be conducted Tuesday at Marshallton Gun Club.

Changed from its regular Monday night schedule to Tuesday next week because of the Labor Day holiday, the final week of regular season shooting will determine second half season qualifiers for the league championship shoot-off Monday, Sept. 8. Top four finishers in the first and second half season point standings qualify for the post-season positions.

Northern State Bank, Wilson Brothers, Pizza Hut and Arctic-Dunrud trucking were first half season league championship shoot-off qualifiers. If one or more of them repeat a top four finish in the second half season, the post-season field would be reduced from its original eight-team concept.

Wilson Brothers maintained its first place position in the second half standings Monday with a narrow 115-114 victory over Hible's Standard Station. But Northern State Bank, a 119-110 winner over Pepsi-Cola, and Hartz Wholesale, a 120-114 winner over KKAQ, share second place, just one point behind the leaders.

Elsehwere Monday, Auto Body Repair defeated The Times 115-111, Northland Realty stopped First Northwestern State Bank Southside 110-105, Triple J Trap Co. knocked off Arctic Spirit 119-112, Pizza Hut downed Sjoberg's Cable TV 118-116, Peterson-Biddick handled Marshallton Gun Club 117-106, Service Master topped Miller Insurance 112-103, Arctic out-shot Arctic-Dunrud Trucking 118-111 and Thune-Upham Insurance received a bye worth two points.

Twenty-five straights were recorded Monday by Mike Dahle, Miller Insurance; Merlin Schroder, Peterson-Biddick; Jim Heckroth, Marshallton Gun Club; Bill Moreau, Pizza Hut; Fran Johnson, Triple J Trap Co; Pat Fischer, Hartz Wholesale; Sandy Wilson, Northern State Bank; and Ron Zutz, Hible's Stardard Station.

In addition to the regular round, Tuesday's shooting will feature an additional 25 birds which will be used in the 50-bird city class championship to name individual winners in Class AA, A, B, C and D.

NWAC Teams Play Friday

Northwest Athletic Conference members Bemidji, Crookston, East Grand Forks, Fergus Falls and Thief River Falls will all open their 1980 high school football seasons Friday.

Debuting at home Friday will be East Grand Forks, vs. Grand Forks Central; Fergus Falls, vs. Detroit Lakes; and Thief River Falls, vs. Detroit Lakes; and Thief River Falls, vs. Grand Forks Red River. Bemidji will open at Crosby-Ironton and Crookston will be at West Fargo Friday. In fact, the Lumberjacks and Pirates both open with three straight road trips. Bemidji will also be playing at Little Falls and Detroit Lakes before appearing at home, with Crookston also making trips to Grand Forks Central and Park Rapids before playing at home.

First Northwest Athletic Conference (NWAC) match-up of the year will be played Friday, Sept. 19, when defending champion Crookston hosts Fergus Falls.

This will be the final year of NWAC competition for both Crookston and East Grand Forks, who announced earlier they were leaving the conference at the end of the 1980 season because of dwindling enrollment figures that put them at a disadvantage, they feel, against Class AA-size football schools Bemidji and Fergus Falls.

Crookston won the NWAC title in 1979 with a perfect 4-0 record. The Pirates beat Park Rapids 24-12 in the first round of the Class A state playoffs before losing to eventual champion Rochester Lourdes 14-9 in the semifinals. The Pirates, playing with a junior-dominated line-up finished 6-3 overall.

Bemidji and East Grand Forks shared second place in the NWAC last year with 2-2 records, and they were both 6-3 overall. Fergus Falls and Thief River Falls were 1-3 in league play, with the Otters going 3-5 overall and the Prowlers finishing 3-6.

Action Realty Plays Schmidts In Title Game

Schmidts surprised Coca-Cola with a 4-0 first inning lead and eliminated the 1980 regular season pennant winners by a resounding 14-3 margin Monday in the Thief River Falls fast pitch softball league playoffs.

Finals of the double-elimination event are scheduled to be played tonight (Wednesday) when once-beaten Schmidts tackles unbeaten Action Realty at 7:30 p.m. on the fairgrounds fast pitch diamond. A second game, if needed, would follow at 9.

Slow Pitch Finals . . .

Swenson Plumbing Face TRF Merchants

Swenson Plumbing and the TRF Merchants will meet tonight (Wednesday) the finals of the Thief River Falls men's slow pitch softball association American League playoffs.

Game time is 6:15 p.m. A second game, if needed, would follow immediately. Swenson Plumbing is unbeaten in the double-elimination event, having gained a spot in the finals by out-scoring McDonald's-Dallmann 17-16 a week ago.

TRF Merchants have a loss hanging over their heads entering the finals, but an earlier 6-4 playoff loss to McDonald's-Dallmann was reversed Monday when the Merchants capitalized on lackluster McDonald's-Dallmann play for a 6-5 victory. That followed a 7-1 Merchants victory over Furuseth-Nelson in the first game of Monday's elimination round doubleheader.

Both finalists were second place finishers during the 1980 regular season when Swenson Plumbing went 17-5 to finish behind McDonald's-Dallmann, 19-3, in the American League West Division while the TRF Merchants matched pennant-winning Furuseth-Nelson's 15-7 record but had to settle for second place in the American League East Division after losing both head-to-head confrontations.

Banquet Held For 1980 TRF Legion Team

Ecklund-Holmstrom Post 117 of the American Legion honored the 1980 Thief River Falls American Legion baseball team with a banquet at the Leion club rooms August 13.

Guests were the coaches, players and their parents.

Nick Drees, one of the team's three coaches, introduced the players. Other coaches serving the team this summer were Harley Drees and Howard Dalager.

Ed Haraldson spoke on behalf of the American Legion, giving recognition to the coaches for the job they did this summer, to all the players and to the parents for their interest in the program.

Haraldson also pointed out that this is the 55th year of American Legion baseball, a nation-wide program that began in 1925. Some 75 per cent of the World Series baseball players came from Legion baseball programs. There were nearly 5,000 players and some 242 teams involved in the 1980 Minnesota American Legion baseball program. Thief River Falls competed, along with 28 other teams, in the Ninth District.

American Legion Post 117 was proud once again to sponsor the team this year with its 28-14 record, said a Post 117 spokesman, and the club takes pride in knowing that many in the Thief River Falls area have at one time played on the Legion baseball team.

Northland Players Report On Saturday

New Northland community college head football coach John Helley will greet his 1980 squad members Saturday when the Northmen report for a light season-opening workout at 10 a.m. Equipment will be issued Sunday, with Monday, Sept. 1, signalling the official start of practice.

The Northmen will work out twice daily, from 6-7:30 a.m. and from 4-6:30 p.m.

Helley succeeds Irv Smith as Northland head coach. Smith resigned at the end of the 1979 season following a two-year stint here that produced a 2-6 record in 1978 and a 3-6 finish in 1979. Helley served as an assistant coach under Smith last fall.

Northland's coaching staff will also include Scott Kays, who worked with the team last year, newcomers Jon Anderson and Frank Cornaccoine and student assistants Joe Kraska, Howard Beito and Jon Sipe.

The Northmen open their 1980 season Saturday, Sept. 13, against rival Crookston on the Thief River Falls athletic field. Mesabi will be here Saturday, Sept. 20, before the Northmen go on the road for the first time Saturday, Sept. 27, to Ely to face Vermilion.

Oklee, Goodridge, Middle River, Plummer, Grygla, Newfolden . . .

Area Nine-Man Football Teams Will Open 1980 Season Friday

Six Times area teams — Marshall County Central in Newfolden, Oklee, Goodridge, Middle River, Plummer and Grygla — will kick off their 1980 high school football seasons Friday.

And it'll be nine-man football for all six this fall. As members of the North Tri County Conference, Oklee, Goodridge, Middle River, Plummer and Grygla are beginning their third year with the nine-man game. Marshall County Central is making the switch from 11 to nine-man this fall within a new conference that will also include Argyle, Greenbush, Hallock, Stephen and Tri County high school in Karlstad.

Previews of all six teams:

Newfolden . . . . .

A veteran line, but an inexperienced backfield greeted Marshall County Central coach Sam Gebhart at the start of preseason practice. The Nordics' first nine-man test will be Friday at Hallock.

"It'll be a different game," acknowledged Gebhart when talking about the switch from 11 to nine-man play this fall. "We're looking forward to it."

The Nordics' strength rests with its line where seniors Steve Boe, Dan Maki, Nate Stokke and Scott Lindquist, along with juniors Mark Knutson and Jeff Dahl, are all experienced performers. Maki and Knutson was both over 200 pounds.

But senior Gordy Collin is the only backfield starter returning from last year's 5-4 ball club. Newcomers will include juniors Allen Lindemoen, Rick Van Camp and Dahl, along with sophomores Bill Johnson, Scott Anderson and Todd Stokke. Dahl and Stokke are the likely quarterbacks, a position hit by an off-season softball injury to Dave Dragness, who will be sidelined for two more weeks.

"We're optimistic about the season," mentioned Gebhart. "It'll depend on the development of our inexperienced backs and if we can iron out a few wrinkles on defense. This nine-man game is new to us and defense is a problem. We've always had hard-hitting teams, but now we have to develop more quickness on defense."

Marshall Co. Central

Friday, Aug. 29 — at Hallock; Friday, Sept. 5 — at Greenbush; Friday, Sept. 12 — vs. Stephen; Saturday, Sept. 20 — at Karlstad; Friday, Sept. 26 — at Argyle; Saturday, Oct. 4 — vs. Hallock; Friday, Oct. 10 — vs. Greenbush; Tuesday, Oct. 14 — at Stephen; Tues., Oct. 21 — vs. Karlstad.

Oklee . . . .

Quantity but not quality is down at Oklee, reports Bobcats coach Dave Svaren.

"We're down in numbers, and that's our biggest concern right now," mentioned Svaren, who has just 15 players on his squad in grades 10-12, down considerably from his 70-player teams he once enjoyed.

But there are still enough good football players around to make Svaren feel optimistic heading into the 1980 season opener Friday at Grygla.

"We're looking for a good season — if we don't get hurt; with the low numbers, we're thin," Svaren said.

A defensive line, anchored by three veterans who will be starting for the third straight year, should keep the Bobcats in most games. The trio includes Joel Stolaas, a 5-10, 240-pounder; Brad Gunderson, 6-1, 170; and Randy Chaput, 5-10, 160. They'll be joined by junior Mike Vettleson, a 6-1, 200-pounder.

The linebackers are inexperienced, admitted Svaren, but the secondary, headed by senior Richard Bronken, should be strong.

Bronken will also do the quarterbacking this fall and Svaren promises, "We're going to throw the ball. We have a good bunch of receivers," he added, naming Brad Gunderson and sophomore Jon Lindquist, along with seniors Paul Gunderson, scheduled to start at halfback, and Rick Dulka, the Bobcats' fullback. The other halfback spot will go to either sophomore John Cyr or senior Jon LaJambe.

The North Tri County Conference promises a strong race between Middle River, Gonvick, McIntosh-Winger "and us," said Svaren.

Oklee, 6-3 a year ago, will play its home opener Friday, Sept. 5, vs. Clearbrook.

Oklee

Friday, Aug. 29 — at Grygla; Friday, Sept. 5 — vs. Clearbrook; Friday, Sept. 12 — at Gonvick; Fri., Sept. 19 — at Goodridge; Fri., Sept. 26 — at Plummer; Friday, Oct. 3 — vs. Erskine; Friday, Oct. 10 — vs. Mentor; Tuesday, Oct. 14 — vs. McIntosh-Winger; Tues., Oct. 21 — at Middle River.

Goodridge . . . . .

After a 1-8 season in 1979, Goodridge coach Rick Nelson is looking for better things in 1980.

"Hopefully we'll have improved success," offered Nelson. "We have a good group of seniors to work around this year."

The Huskies, boasting their largest turnout since the Goodridge-Grygla schools split, have eight senior starters returning among the 24 players in grades 9-12 on hand for preseason drills. But a question mark at quarterback and small size in the line may present problems.

Juniors Mike Drangstveit and Ken Frazer, or freshman Tony Wiseth will step in at quarterback this fall, a position manned the past three years by now-graduated Neil Race. Seniors Carroll Bishop and Rory Haugen was the Huskies' top runningbacks.

Senior Mark Grabowska has been shifted from runningback to guard this season and the 185-pounder — the biggest player in camp — is expected to anchor the front wall that is terribly small. Center Wayne Frazer, a senior, is listed at 140 pounds.

If a quarterback can bedeveloped, the Huskies have a couple of top pass-catching ends in 6-4 Randy Henrickson and 6-2 Kurt Wiseth.

Defensively, Grabowska, Henrickson, Bishop and Haugen give Goodridge excellent linebacking.

The North Tri County Conference race, says Nelson, should be a real battle, with McIntosh-Winger, Middle River, Gonvick and Oklee all presenting title challenges. "I don't think any team will come out unbeaten," he mentioned.

The Huskies, who beat only Clearbrook 20-16 a year ago, open at home Friday against Mentor.

Goodridge

Friday, Aug. 29 — vs. Mentor; Friday, Sept. 5 — at McIntosh-Winger; Friday, Sept. 12 — at Middle River; Friday, Sept. 19 — vs. Oklee; Friday, Sept. 26 — vs. Clearbrook; Friday, Oct. 3 — at Gonvick; Friday, Oct. 10 — vs Grygla; Tuesday, Oct. 14 — vs. Plummer; Tuesday, Oct. 21 — at Erskine.

Grygla . . . .

Grygla went 2-6 in 1979 and the Eagles' 16-man 1980 roster is dominated by freshmen and sophomores, posing an experience problem for head coach Darwin Hagen.

"We're pretty young," acknowledged Hagen. "It'll probably be a slow start for us, but the kids we have really like to play football."

Quarterbacking the Eagles will be senior John Nordby. His top runningbacks will be senior Gene Lunsetter, junior John Verbout and freshman Doug Schulz.

The line play will feature 185-pound senior Scott Aune and 220-pound junior Jerry Lunsetter, although Lunsetter is nursing a knee injury right now that is expected to keep him out of Friday's season and home opener against Oklee.

John Verbout will switch to middle linebacker to anchor the Eagles' defense that will be bolstered by Jerry Lunsetter, who will step into the nose guard spot when he recovers from his injury.

Grygla
